DRY AMENDMENT ON EVE OF VICTORY; NEEDS ONE STATE

New Hampshire, Iowa, Colorado, Utah, and Oregon Make 35 for Ratification.

PROBABLY CARRIED TODAY

Eventual Adoption by at Least 46 States Predicted by Prohibition Leaders.

TAKES EFFECT IN A YEAR

Meanwhile Congress Must Prescribe Enforcement—Nation Actually Dry Next July.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Thirty-five States of the thirty-six necessary have now ratified the prohibition amendment to the United States Constitution. The Legislatures of five States ratified the amendment today—Iowa, Oregon, New Hampshire, Colorado, and Utah.

Under the Constitution the amendment "shall be valid, to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States of by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress." In the case of the prohibition amendment now being voted on by the Legislatures Congress provided that the amendment should be submitted to the State Legislatures for ratification.

Of the forty-eight States, thirty-five have now ratified the amendment, within one State of the required three-fourths. It is expected that the thirty-sixth State will ratify not later than tomorrow.

Under the terms of the amendment itself, nation-wide prohibition goes into effect one year after ratification of the amendment. One year from tomorrow will be Jan. 16, 1920, and it is the contention of Anti-Saloon leaders at their national headquarters here that the terms of the amendment, regardless of any intervening agencies, nation-wide prohibition will become effective not later than Jan. 16, 1920. Congress, by appropriate legislation, has already decided that wartime national prohibition should become effective July 1, 1919, so that in actual practice national prohibition becomes effective six months before it could become effective under the national prohibition amendment. Under the wartime prohibition legislation, after it becomes effective, July 1, 1919, the nation must remain dry until peace is signed and the armies demobilized, the President by proclamation to fix the date for such demobilization.

Claim All States but Three.

Prohibition leaders here predicted some months ago that the constitutional amendment would have been ratified by the required thirty-six States between Jan. 15 and 20 of this year. It was asserted at national headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League of America tonight that before another week rolled around forty-four States would have ratified the amendment. All States except New York, New Jersey, and Rhode Island are claimed as favoring the amendment. Some Anti-Saloon League leaders are now even counting upon New York and New Jersey.

The Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which provided that suffrage should not be abridged for race or color, was proposed to the State Legislatures in 1869. It was declared in a proclamation of the Secretary of State dated March 30, 1870, to have been ratified by the Legislatures of twenty-nine of the then thirty-seven States.

Prohibition leaders here asserted tonight that they were not worried by attempts to throw obstacles in the way of ratification of the amendment in the States where liquor leaders are contending that the amendment must be approved by referendum to the people of the State. On this point the Anti-Saloon League issued this statement:

"Congress has chosen the State Legislatures as the bodies to ratify the Federal prohibition amendment. A State referendum, therefore, would be illegal and void."

This statement was authorized by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the league, in connection with the reported movement of distillers to institute injunction proceedings looking to the securing of State referendums.

The resolution submitting to the States the National Prohibition Amendment to the Constitution was passed by Congress Dec. 18, 1917. The resolution was adopted by the Senate Aug. 1, 1917, by a vote of 65 to 20, and was passed by the House of Representatives, with slight amendments, Dec. 17, 1917, by a vote of 282 to 128, the Senate the following day voting to concur in the House amendments.

Text of the Resolution.

The resolution as finally adopted follows:

Sixty-fifth Congress of the United States of America, at the second session, begun and held at the City of Washington on Monday, the third day of December, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen:

JOINT RESOLUTION.

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

German Mine Sweepers Strike, Tying Up Fishing Industry

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—The crews of German mine sweepers, according to the Cologne Volkszeitung, are refusing to serve unless they receive increased pay and a new schedule, calling for sums as high as 100 marks daily, exclusive of the insurance guarantee. The increase would amount to 400,000,000 marks.

Mine sweeping in the Baltic and North Seas has ceased, and the fishing industry has been suspended.

GARRISON SOLE B. R. T. RECEIVER

Federal Court Denies City's Application to Make Craig His Associate.

TELLS OF COMPANY'S NEEDS

Receiver Declares That Chief Difficulty Is Lack of Ready Cash.

Judge Julius M. Mayer in the United States District Court yesterday appointed Lindley M. Garrison permanent receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, and the New York Consolidated Railroad Company. At the same time he denied the applications of the city and the Public Service Commission for the appointment of a co-receiver. Mr. Garrison's bond, provided when he was appointed temporary receiver, was continued.

The case came before the court on the application of Walter F. Taylor, attorney for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, a creditor of the defendant companies, on whose application they were put in the hands of a temporary receiver, to make Mr. Garrison's receivership permanent. In making the application Mr. Taylor filed with the court the temporary receiver's preliminary report on the condition of the properties, physical and financial, as he had been able to determine it in the short time he had had to make an examination.

When the matter at issue was properly before him, Judge Mayer asked that all persons present who wished to be heard step forward and give their names and those for whom they appeared to the clerk of the court. The following stepped forward: Corporation Counsel William P. Burr, representing the Board of Estimate; William L. Ransom, formerly counsel to the Public Service Commission, and retained by it as special counsel in the proceedings; Paul D. Cravath and R. T. Swayne, representing the Central Union Trust Company, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and others of the creditors and largest security holders of the B. R. T.; George S. Franklin, representing the War Finance Corporation, also a creditor; John J. O'Leary, representing the relatives of the victims of the Malbone Street tunnel wreck, who have damage claims against the B. R. T. Arthur J. Stearns, representing property owners upon whose real estate the companies have encroached; Elden Bisbee and William Erbe, representing themselves and other small security holders, and George D. Yeomans, representing the defendant companies.

Mr. Taylor, in making his application to make the temporary receivership permanent, called the court's attention to the fact that, on many of the lines affected, construction work had stopped altogether or was proceeding very slowly. Contracts made for new lines, he said, called for connections over the Williamsburg and Manhattan Bridges and three river tunnels. None of the tunnels, Mr. Taylor said, had been constructed, and this delay in construction work was depriving the companies now operated by a receiver from large and needed revenues. The companies need new money, he said, and the only way they could get it quickly was through the receiver's financing, approved by the court.

Argument for Co-Receiver.

Mr. Ransom, for the Public Service Commission, was next heard. "The situation we find here," said the lawyer, "is novel and altogether unique in the history of railroad receiverships. Ordinarily, the stock and bondholders are the chief creditors. It is not so in this case. A municipality, the City of New York, has more money involved than almost all the other creditors put together. This city has invested in this enterprise, in association with the B. R. T., more than $110,000,000.

"For this reason, if for no other, the city should be represented in this receivership. But there are other reasons. The city is the guardian of the interests of those who, but for that guardianship, might suffer grievously from abuses of corporate management. Then, too, the work involved in carrying on this receivership will be of such magnitude that two receivers will have all they can do to perform the task properly. We know that the companies have violated Contract No. 4 by their failure to carry out its provisions, and we contend that, for this reason also, there should be a co-receiver appointed to represent the city."

Judge Mayer here interrupted Mr. Ransom to remind him that the law provided relief for a party suffering injury under a contract, and asked if counsel thought it was either the duty or the obligation of the receiver to look especially after the interests of a municipal or other interest, or should look after

BERLIN, Jan. 14, (via Copenhagen.)—This morning's newspapers published a Government order, demanding the delivery of all arms within twenty-four hours, on penalty of a heavy fine and of imprisonment up to five years.

At first it seemed as if the order might have the effect of disarming all the law-abiding citizens and making them defenseless against the anarchist elements, because it could hardly be expected that the Spartacides, who seem determined to sell their lives as dearly as possible, would come to the authorities and like good boys hand over what arms and munitions they still possessed.

But toward noon the public became aware that the Government meant business. About 10 o'clock every street in the factory and tenement district was closed by the military in such a manner nobody could leave his house without giving an account of himself to the patrolling soldiers.

If to the question whether they carried arms the answer was "no," they were searched closely. Then they had to accompany the soldiers back to their habitations, which also were searched.

Most men willingly delivered what arms and ammunition they had on their persons or in their habitations.

Some women assisted the soldiers in searching, and many military rifles and other arms were produced.

All the factories and large mills with which the district abounds were searched, among them Loewe's munition works, the employes of which sympathize with the Spartacus group. Also the Bergmann electric works and the Siemens Halske plant.

While this was being done field guns and mine throwers were stationed at certain points from which the most dangerous parts of the district could be covered. Up to noon, however, no serious trouble occurred while the Government's auto cars were being filled with arms of all kinds.

Sailors garrisoned in the so-called Exhibition Park were also disarmed, not without complaint, but were left in possession of the park.

The large prisons in the Moabit area were strongly guarded, because a Spartacide attack was expected. The flying grounds and plants at Johannistal were also occupied by Government troops, the workmen and soldiers there being suspected of having furnished munitions to the Spartacides. Stringent measures like these will be taken in various other districts tonight and tomorrow, and it is hoped that some semblance of order may be restored.

The housetop war last night was worse than ever before. The newspaper district was again one of the principal battle grounds. On Yorkstrasse the Government troops in the street were shot at by Spartacide machine guns from housetops. Several street cars were hit and traffic was finally stopped completely.

Friedrich Leipziger Strasse was resounding continuously with shots.

While it was yet daylight pedestrians had the amazing spectacle of steel helmeted warriers chasing the Spartacides over the roofs of adjacent blocks.

The Government troops, having received information that another attack was planned in the newspaper district, stopped not only vehicles of all kinds traveling in that direction, but also pedestrians approaching the neighborhood. The men were searched and questioned concerning the reason for their presence.

Hand grenades, thrown from roofs near Bellealliancesplatz, wounded a number of innocent people. Later in the evening Buelowstrasse and Motzstrasse were scenes of shooting affrays lasting for hours. The worst disturbances, however, took place on Hafenplatz, where the underground emerges from a tunnel to reach Gleisdreieck, and afterward Buelowstrasse

Peasants in Central Russia Rise Against Bolshevist Rule

MANN ADMITS GIFTS FROM SWIFT

Says He Received a Horse and a $3.50 Steak from the Packers in 1907.

HENEY DISCLOSES FACTS

Republican Leaders Confer on Effect of the Development on the Speakership Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The charge that Representative Mann of Illinois, Republican floor leader and aspirant for the Speakership of the next House, had used his influence to kill legislation in that body inimical to the interests of the Chicago packers was made today by Francis J. Heney in testifying before the Senate Agricultural Committee, which is investigating the packers with a view to ascertaining if the packing industry ought to be put under Government control.

Mr. Heney read from letters written, he said, by Henry Veeder, one of the Chicago attorneys for the packers, in which Mr. Veeder related how the packing concern of Louis Swift had given Mr. Mann a $150 horse and a $3.50 beef steak back in 1907 to show appreciation of Mr. Mann's alleged sympathy with the packers.

In January, 1917, according to the Veeder letters, Representative Mann supported a rider to an appropriation bill which had the effect of smothering a resolution offered by Representative Borland to have Congress investigate the packers.

Under the rider, which was adopted by the House, the investigation went to the Bureau of Markets, in the Department of Agriculture, which was exactly, Mr. Heney said, where the packers wanted it to go.

Mann Admits the Gifts.

Mr. Mann laughed when asked today if it were true that he had accepted the $150 horse and the $3.50 beefsteak from the Louis Swift concern.

"Why, yes, that's true enough," he said. "I wanted a horse for my truck garden in Chicago, and I spoke to some one in the Swift firm about it, asking if they had an old horse they didn't want. They sent me an old one that I used in the garden. I do not remember now who it was to whom I spoke about it.

"And about the steak—yes, I got that, too. I think it was a pretty fine steak, too. I do not recall just how it happened that I got that, but I got it anyhow.

"So far as my using my influence for he packers because of that old horse or the steak, or anything else is concerned, that's all nonsense. I never did exert any influence for the packers."

The evidence of Mr. Heney had the effect of causing Republican leaders of the House and Senate to confer in Senator Lodge's office later in the day to decide what effect it might have upon Mr. Mann's candidacy. No conclusion was reached, so far as could be ascertained.

Says Swift Indorsed Gift.

In the letter from Mr. Veeder to Mr. Swift, telling of the gift of the steak, Mr. Veeder wrote that he had been talking to Mr. Mann, who had told him he "hadn't tasted a good beefsteak in a long time." Mr. Veeder wanted to know if it would be all right to have one sent to him. Mr. Swift, according to Mr. Heney, wrote back that it would be agreeable to him, but he wanted to know how many steaks a year Mr. Mann would want. He suggested that six or seven would be enough.

Mr. Heney went on to read a letter showing that Mr. Mann had written to Mr. Veeder, thanking him for the $150 horse, the Representative saying that it was a "magnificent animal and just what I wanted." The horse was charged against one of the departments, the head of which objected to its being put against him. Mr. Veeder wrote to the department head, telling him not to mind, because the horse was twelve years old anyhow and only cost $150 when it was young.

Then Mr. Heney proceeded to tell of a move in the House two Winters ago to investigate the packers and said that the latter were opposed to the Borland resolution, which would have brought about a searching inquiry by Congress. He read from letters of Mr. Veeder, who was in Washington, to show that three attorneys of the Chicago packers were sent here to head off the investigation. The attorneys, Mr. Heney said, advised the packers that if the Borland resolution were not killed it would mean an inquiry that would make criminal prosecution of the packers "inevitable."

Tells of Fund to Combat Inquiry.

Upon this advice, Mr. Heney said, five Chicago packers raised a fund among themselves to fight the Borland resolution, which was at that time pending before a House committee. In a letter

PARIS, Jan. 15.—President Poincaré will deliver on Saturday next a speech declaring the preliminary and plenary sessions of the Peace Conference between the associated powers opened. Immediately after the French President's inaugural address, which is expected to take the form of a welcome to the assembled delegates and aspirations that their labors will result in practical fruition of the hopes with which the world is looking to the meetings in Paris, there will be a declaration of the principles by which the Congress will be guided.

In the forefront of these will be a resolution which will be submitted to the delegates to the effect that one of the basic principles on which the future of the world will be safeguarded is embodied in the idea of a League of Nations. It will be submitted that proposals for a practical scheme for the working out of the League of Nations be referred to a Grand Commission, which will study the details and elaborate a project to be referred back for acceptance of the chief delegates of the associated powers.

That the League of Nations will be placed at the head of the program of the conference insures priority of attention when the reports of the various commissions are returned to the conference.

The idea which obtained at present is that the declaration of the principles to which the league is to give practical form shall be broadly drawn, so as not to provoke discussion at the outset. Then the several commissions appointed by the various countries will get to work to study together half a dozen or more of the most important suggestions which have been made for the practical realization of the ideal of the league. Gossip says that President Wilson has a scheme of his own, but up to the present America's representative at what may be called the League of Nations Board has not been announced.

Bourgeois Favors League.

Lord Robert Cecil is Britain's representative, and Leon Bourgeois will represent France. Clemenceau's ideas in regard to the league were explained by himself in the Chamber of Deputies, and his selection of Bourgeois has been the subject of some criticism on the ground that it was purely governmental. However, the same criticism might be applied to the appointment of Lord ROBERT CECIL, and the common belief is that both Cecil and Bourgeois are heartily in sympathy with the idea and that the best efforts of both will be devoted to obtain its practical realization. Bourgeois is not only one of the elder statesmen of France, but, as President of the French Association for a League of Nations, he represents a committee including other former Premiers and Foreign Secretaries of the French Republic—Ribot, Barthou, Briand, Doumergues, Hanotaux, Painlevé, and Viviani, and other public men of such different views as Jules Cambon, Hanotaux, Albert Thomas, and Sembat.

On the British side, Lord Robert Cecil will have the direct assistance of General Smuts, who is now in Paris and has drawn up a scheme for a League which, owing to the mismanagement of his publishers, has hardly received all the attention it deserves.

President Wilson's advocacy of the League has been so cardinally the principle of his policy that no doubt is felt that whoever may be appointed as America's representatives on the League of Nations Commission will do the utmost to further any practi-

Text of First Paris Conference Communique Reveals Little of Actual Doings of Sessions

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Hitherto it has been the practice of the Governments taking part in the preliminary peace conventions, says a statement given out by the official press bureau today, to issue separate communiqués regarding the proceedings. From today it has been decided to issue a joint communiqué, of which the following is the English text adopted by the British and American delegations:

"The President of the United States and the Prime Minister and Foreign Ministers of the Allied Powers, assisted by the Japanese Ambassadors in Paris and London, held two meetings today. In the course of these meetings the examination of the rules of the conference has been continued and almost completed.

"It was decided that the United States, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan should be represented by five delegates apiece. The British Dominions and India, besides, shall be represented as follows: Two delegates respectively for Australia, Canada, South Africa, and India, including the native States, and one delegate for New Zealand.

"Brazil will have three delegates. Belgium, China, Greece, Poland, Portugal, the Czechoslovak Republic, Rumania, and Serbia will have two delegates apiece, Siam one delegate, and Cuba, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, and Panama one delegate apiece.

"Montenegro will have one delegate, but the rules concerning the designation of this delegate shall not be fixed until the moment when the political situation in this country shall have been cleared up.

"The meeting adopted the following two general principles:

"One—Each delegation being a unit, the number of delegates forming it shall have no influence upon its status at the conference.

"Two—In the selection of its delegation each nation may avail itself of the panel system. This will enable each State at discretion to intrust its interests to such persons as it may designate.

"The adoption of the panel system will in particular enable the British Empire to admit among its five delegates representatives of the dominions, including Newfoundland, which has no separate representation, and of India."

PUNITIVE TERMS IN NEW ARMISTICE

Allies Demand Retribution for Cruelties by Germans to Prisoners.

ALARMIST NEWS IN LONDON

Central News Issues Statement That the War May Break Out Again.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Central News declares that as a result of the allied discussions in Paris the whole aspect of demobilization has undergone a sudden and vital change, this being shown in the drastic conditions demanded of Germany for a renewal of the armistice.

"On authority of an unimpeachable character," says The Central News, "it can be stated that a situation exists in Europe under which war may break out again at any moment. The Allied War Council has arrived at a decision which means that the British people have mistaken the appearance of peace for reality. This decision means that the new British Ministry must revise the whole scheme of army demobilization.

"The decision is that Great Britain, in proportion to its military strength, must maintain an army of occupation on the Rhine for many months. If the rapid increase in demobilization recently announced were continued there would in a few months be no army in France to undertake the obligations which by common decision of the Allies have been placed upon British soldiers."

The new armistice terms to be presented to Germany by Marshal Foch are unofficially stated here to include the following:

First—Retribution upon the Germans for the murder and ill-treatment of allied prisoners.

Second—The machinery and goods stolen by Germany from France and Belgium to be at once given up. It is pointed out that France alone has 500,000 men who will be out of work until this machinery is returned.

Third—German gold, amounting to more than £100,000,000, to be moved from Berlin to a safe place, probably Frankfort, and protected from Bolshevism in Germany en route. Certain other property to be surrendered.

Fourth—Germany to give over her shipping, of which she is believed to have 4,000,000 tons, to carry food supplies to countries in Europe in need of them.

Fifth—Any U-boats on the stocks to be handed to the Allies for their disposal, or to be destroyed, and no more submarines should be built.

Commenting on the report that the new armistice terms require the destruction of German submarines now under construction, The Daily Mail characterizes this condition as a vital one.

"Some 170 boats have been discovered on hand at German yards," says the newspaper, "and these must obviously be dealt with. Mankind would not be safe if they were left in German hands intact. We may hope, however, that the Peace Conference will forbid submarine construction in future.

"Submarines are valueless for commercial work and are capable of such criminal use in war that they ought not to be tolerated. The British Navy has provided appliances which rob them of their sting, and British submarines are by far the most powerful in the world. Nevertheless, the submarine ought to be banned."

PARIS, Tuesday, Jan. 14.—German gold reserves, which the Allies propose to transfer to Frankfort from the Berlin Reichsbank, totaled 2,262,626,000 marks on Dec. 31, according to the last official report of the Reichsbank.

Compilations made from German official reports relative to paper in circulation give a total of 31,792,313,000 marks. Besides this, there are great quantities of paper which various municipalities have issued.

AGREE ON POLICY TOWARD RUSSIA

Wilson and British Believed to Have Decided on Plans to Check Bolshevism.

MAY USE POLISH TROOPS

Americans Also Agreeable to Sending an Allied Commission to Russia.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—President Wilson's conference on Tuesday with Lloyd George, Balfour, and Bonar Law is believed to have cemented the understanding between the peace plenipotentiaries of the British and American Governments concerning measures necessary to check the spread of Bolshevism, which both regard as the most important issue for the Allies to consider at the present time.

It now appears practically certain that the two Polish divisions which were organized in the United States will be sent from France to Poland to operate against the Bolshevist forces which are endangering the stability of the Government sought to be maintained by the Polish National Committee. That no American or British troops now in service will be sent to Poland seems to be definitely determined, but there is a likelihood that the British at least may call for volunteers to form a separate force, which would be used to augment the Polish commands.

American Troops Not to be Used.

Representatives of the United States continue to deny statements published in the Paris newspapers and repeated in the face of authoritative contradiction that President Wilson has agreed that American troops should go to Poland with the Polish divisions mentioned. Nothing is clearer than that the policy of both the American and British Governments, in their fighting capacity, is not to use any troops raised for the purpose of defeating Germany now that Germany has surrendered. The American and British forces will continue to police occupied German territories and would be called into service possibly to suppress disorders likely to have widespread effect, but beyond that the belligerent activities of the American Expeditionary Forces may be said to have ended.

The main object of both Governments is to arrange world affairs so that their armed forces may be demobilized in the shortest possible time and the personnel sifted back into the channels of peaceful industry at home.

In a measure, it is understood, the willingness of the American and British plenipotentiaries that the Polish divisions should be employed in checking Bolshevism in Poland is a concession to the French view expressed at the meeting of the Supreme War Council with the heads of the peace delegations on Sunday—that as it was impossible effectively to deal with the Russian Bolshevist situation in a military way Poland should be made the PARIS, Jan. 15.—After all that has been promised concerning open discussion in the making of peace, steps were taken at today's session of the Interallied Conference which show that the whole intent is to keep the people of the world in the dark as to what is going on behind the closed doors of the Quai d'Orsay. The representatives of the five great powers adopted a resolution that nothing about their deliberation be disclosed except what was contained in the colorless daily communiqués.

Some of those connected with the conference construe the resolution as meaning that they are to be barred from seeing members of the press.

The whole spirit of the action taken is contrary in every respect to the assurances given to the American people, and already a feeling of discouragement and indignation is displayed among newspaper representatives from allied countries. The British correspondents made a formal protest, which was backed immediately by the American correspondents.

No disclosure has yet been made as to who was responsible for this amazing procedure, and I prefer to withhold a statement until I am more fully informed. The fact remains that the resolution must have been supported by the delegates of at least three powers, which shows how little the doctrine of open covenants, openly arrived at, prevails among those who are engaged in settling the destinies of the world.

Outside of this new and most serious cause for complaint the American correspondents feel that they are not getting a square deal in obtaining information from the American delegation. The daily conferences between the correspondents and members of the delegation are unproductive in every way, and the conclusion has been forced upon the correspondents that the only source of news concerning American participation in the peace negotiations is the President, who is inaccessible.

In spite of condemnation while the war was on of the secret methods prevailing at the Congress of Vienna, the conclusion is being forced upon observers here that this conference is the Congress of Vienna over again.

Opposed by Americans and British.

PARIS, Jan. 15. (Associated Press.)—The question of whether the Peace Conference is to be secret or wholly open to the eyes and ears of the world, the settlement of which has been long awaited, was brought to a focus today when it was announced that an agreement had been made to confine the information given to the public to a daily official communiqué and that a gentleman's agreement prevailed among the delegates not to discuss or in any way give information of the meetings in the Foreign Office.

No written official announcement of this purpose was issued, but word was passed out to this effect, and it was followed by an explosion which quite drowned out the doings of the Peace Commissioners.

The understanding is that the American and British delegates opposed this decision, but that the French, Italians, and Japanese, voting together, prevailed.

The British newspaper correspondents immediately joined in a memorial of protest, which they put before Premier Lloyd George. The American newspaper correspondent united in what is virtually a round robin to President Wilson, in which they protested in measured terms against the decision, and reminded the President of that one of his fourteen points which specifies "open covenants of peace openly arrived at."

The memorial was before the President tonight, and there is every reason to believe that such a storm has been raised as will force the question before the meeting again before the actual sessions of the Peace Conference begin on Saturday morning.

The question of whether the meetings are to be open or closed has been smouldering for several days. It is associated with conditions which have surrounded the lack of method in making public what has actually been going on in conference for the last month.

The President himself has rarely seen any of the American correspondents, and the newspaper men, who have expressed themselves at a meeting of the organization they have formed as considering themselves trustees, obligated to inform public opinion at home of the moves which are being made here in Paris, have been chafing at what they have characterized as being kept out of touch with the fountainheads of official information, having been confined to information disseminated by an official publicity agent.

Meanwhile, the French newspapers and the British newspapers having Paris editions have been appearing each day with inside information of the conferences, and in some cases have quoted American officials in a manner from which the American correspondents were requested to refrain.

Embarrassed by Breach of Faith.

The American peace envoys have been made indignant at what they regard as a breach of faith on the part of some persons, admitted to the informal discussions they have been holding with newspaper men. These conferences were inaugurated after the delegates arrived in Paris to keep correspondents advised of developments further than those given in official communiqués.

At the outset it was stipulated that nothing communicated to the correspondents during these conferences should be credited to official sources, the restriction being so severe as to prohibit the customary intimations as to sources, so that whatever a correspondent elected to write should be stated on his own responsibility.

Despite this, a statement of informative character, made by Secretary of State Lansing to the newspapermen, appeared in some French newspapers, directly or indirectly attributed to him. It was made more embarrassing to the American delegates because the publications appeared in newspapers opposed to the present French Government.

Because some statements, used in this manner, related to subjects like the denial of the plan to use American troops in Poland, which is understood to be favored by the Clemenceau Government, but is opposed by the Socialists, the American delegates felt that they were in danger of being involuntarily dragged into the complications of French factional political conflicts.

At the request of the American delegation the correspondents then undertook to adopt disciplinary measures and to require a separate understanding from each of their number to observe restrictions imposed regarding news and matters discussed at these conferences in order to prevent further complications and, perhaps, the termination of the present confidential relations between the delegates and the newspaper men.

No British or French Censoring.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The British Foreign Office announced today that the Government does not intend to exercise any censorship over press messages during the Peace Conference. It states that it has received a similar assurance from the French Government.

TWO SESSIONS YESTERDAY.

Morning Meeting Devoted Mainly to Matters of Procedure.

PARIS, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—The Supreme Council of the Peace Congress resumed its sessions at 10:30 o'clock today. The members in attendance were Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon for France, President Wilson and Secretary Lansing for the United States, Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour for Great Britain, Foreign Minister Sonnino for Italy, and Viscount Chinda and Baron Matsui for Japan.

The morning session was devoted entirely to discussion of methods of procedure.

The afternoon session of the Supreme Council adjourned at 5 o'clock.

While the apportionment of delegates to the Peace Conference has not yet been officially made known, the list published after Monday's session of the Supreme Council has caused an unfavorable impression among some of the missions, according to the French press. The Serbians and Belgians are notably dissatisfied with the giving of three delegates to Brazil while they are only permitted two each.

In the case of Belgium, the three seats allotted her by the French plan admitted of the nomination of a representative of each of the parties—Conservatives, Liberals, and Socialists. With only two delegates, the representatives of one party must needs be dropped. Logically it is pointed out, it ought to have been the least important party thus to suffer, but it is impossible to drop from the delegation the Foreign Minister, Paul Hymans, a Liberal. Consequently, the commentators say, it would seem to be Emile Vandervelde, Socialist Minister of Justice, who will be the one eliminated should the Belgian allotment stand.

The Temps inclines to the belief that the discussions of the inter-allied conference will be carried on in both English and French, but remarks that the existence of two authentic texts for the treaty, one in English and one in French, might involve serious inconveniences, as a literal translation is generally impossible. It hopes that French alone will be used in the text of the treaty, as has been done since the Treaty of Westphalia.

GETTING TOGETHER ON LEAGUE

Advocates of Different Plans for World Society Nearer Agreement.

PARIS, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—With the resumption today of the meetings preliminary to the Peace Conference it is apparent that the movement to create a League of Nations is being carried on by two forces, having the same object in view, differing as to the means for making effective the decisions of the proposed world society.

One of these represents the contention that the decision of the league must be backed by its combined physical forces, while the other represents the view that its findings can be enforced without the aid of a common world-police force.

Diplomatists, watching the movement of the two ideas as they come into bearing before the conference, seem impressed with the view that both are moving toward a common ground which, for example, might provide that the nations could reserve for each individual case their decision whether they would utilize armed force or avail themselves of other means.

There is reason to believe that such an arrangement would meet with the support of some of the European statesmen, and there is nothing to indicate that it would be rejected by the American representatives.

This is the feature of the situation as it exists today. The plans are being rapidly put into shape in informal conferences and are working toward a position where the Peace Conference in full session can discuss them thoroughly and then probably name a committee, or commission, from among its membership to produce the framework in writing, with the assistance of the technical advisers.

The work before today's session of the Supreme Council comprised completion of the allotment of representation of the various nations and a further delving into the question of whether Russia should have delegates in the larger body. In a large sense the work today may be compared to that of a credentials committee preceding the sittings of an American national convention. The preliminary sessions will continue work on the question continuously with the expectation of having it entirely disposed of by Saturday, when the first formal sitting of the Peace Congress will be held.

The program commonly agreed upon calls for primary consideration of the forming of a League of Nations and the congress will work on this to the exclusion of all other subjects.

Those European statesmen who now appear friendly to the purpose of putting the League of Nations questions to the fore have repeatedly expressed the view that the formation of the league and the making of peace are joint problems which cannot be dissociated.

The efforts thus seem to be to bend all energies to the laying of the foundations of the league, so that the conference may proceed to the actual making of the peace treaty in the early Spring, even, indeed, if it be only a preliminary one which will dispose of the pressing question of demobilization and the return of the warring countries as nearly as possible to the economic conditions of peace. This is recognized by all the statesmen at the conference as of the utmost necessity, and is not a view confined to the Europeans alone.

The sponsors for the League of Nations plans contemplate the broadening out of the functions of the proposed league as the preliminary discussions proceed, their assumption being that these will range far into the subjects of raw material and finance, proceeding on the theory that the financial or economic domination of smaller nations by the larger is no less a danger than armed domination. The financial program of the league, as viewed in these quarters, will be to consider whether the league itself should lend its aid financially and economically to the small independent States which are rising out of the war.

WILSON SURPRISED ORLANDO?

Daily Mail Says the President Opposes Claims Beyond Trieste and Trent.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—In commenting upon the conference between Premier Orlando of Italy and President Wilson last Friday, persons in touch with the Italian mission declare that the Premier was surprised at Mr. Wilson's attitude, says the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail.

"President Wilson was firm in his refusal to recognize Italian claims beyond Trieste and Trent," the correspondent writes. "It is known that Foreign Minister Sonnino of Italy demands an important part of the Dalmatian coast, as well as the Fiume, while Premier Orlando would be content to give up the Dalmatian coast if sure of Fiume. It is reported that even on this point Mr. Wilson was unwilling to give way.

"While the majority of the inhabitants of Fiume are Italian, that port is the natural outlet for the Austrian Slavs. It is therefore claimed that a few thousand Italians in Fiume are not to be balanced against the needs for a sea outlet for millions of Slavs. It is pointed out that the commercial necessities of the Jugoslavs demand an outlet to the Adriatic, and that if Italy ignores those necessities she may incur the enmity of those populations and create a new danger to the peace of Europe. It is supposed that President Wilson does not consider that Fiume, as a free port in Italian hands, would meet the needs of the Jugoslav hinterland."

TO COMPUTE DAMAGE BILL.

200 American Officers Will Prepare Estimate for Wilson.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—President Wilson will have before him an independent estimate of the actual physical damage suffered by France and Belgium during the war when the Peace Congress reaches the stage of discussing indemnities. A survey is now being planned, and probably will be conducted by more than 200 American Army officers chosen especially for the work.

Many difficulties are presented, for in many of the devastated regions there are absolutely no records available upon which to base an estimate of what existed there before German guns and troops ground the towns and villages into heaps of ruins. The work of visualizing what pre-war conditions were and fixing the proper value for the damage inflicted will, therefore, take many weeks, and probably months.

In the opinion of some observers, the bill of actual damages, when computed, will be so great that the Entente nations probably will be more concerned with the ability of the German people to pay it than with the possibility of exacting further damages in the nature of punitive indemnities and war costs. President Wilson's attitude toward the question of what indemnities are to be exacted from Germany has been made plain on several occasions.

He believes that damages should be restricted to restitution, reparation, and restoration, and should not be extended to financial punishment of the German people.

$400,000,000 FUND NEEDED FOR FOOD

Supreme Relief Council Estimates Minimum Required Until Next Summer.

MOST MUST GO FROM HERE

Allies' Payments Here Will Be Much Larger Than the Amount Wilson Has Requested.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—The Supreme Council of Supply and Relief, which has been engaged for the last three days in considering the situation of the liberated countries stretching from Belgium to Poland and Armenia, has concluded that the minimum sum necessary to feed these peoples until next Summer is $400,000,000.

The Council has asked the treasury departments of the associated Governments to determine how the money can be provided. The allied Governments in Europe, it is said, have agreed to undertake their full responsibilities in the matter.

Considerable difficulty, however, arises from the fact that the bulk of the foodstuffs must come from the United States and, while the allied Governments can pay for transportation and can furnish clothing and other services, the payments made in the United States will greatly exceed $100,000,000 which President Wilson has asked Congress to appropriate.

Herbert C. Hoover, Director General of International Relief, has proposed that a commission representing each of the four great powers be established in each of the countries to be relieved under the general term of "Relief to Liberated Countries."

To Avert Chaotic Conditions.

Mr. Hoover also suggests that every effort shall be made to encourage and sustain the Governments in these countries by placing in their hands the distribution of foodstuffs under the supervision of the allied council to the end that political stability may be obtained by upholding the hands of the Governments. Without stable Governments in these countries, it is believed, there would be no peace, but anarchy and chaos, which might necessitate further military action.

If the arrangement now under discussion can be carried through, it is estimated that more than $100,000,000 will go back to the American people in payment for foodstuffs to be used in these regions. It is expected that a certain amount of actual and tangible payments by the liberated countries can be obtained through the export of such goods and raw material as they possess, and it is regarded as a matter of prime importance by the council to encourage the rehabilitation of industry in order that the peoples may at the earliest possible moment get on their feet economically and be able to support themselves.

All the countries which have set up democratic Governments are struggling to maintain order and to establish themselves permanently. Any failure on the part of the United States to support these issues, the members of the commission are said to believe, will bring ruin in Europe beyond anything since the Middle Ages.

It is understood that the American War Department is co-operating with the Food Administration in sending foodstuffs into various Mediterranean ports, but the distribution of these supplies is necessarily being held up until financial matters can be arranged. The money asked from Congress, it is declared, is solely for the purpose of supporting the liberated countries, and will not be used for relief in Germany.

The conference Tuesday, of the members of the Supreme War Council and the Supreme Council of Supply and Relief was devoted to efforts to find the solution for these problems.

Council Issues Statement.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—An official statement has been issued here relative to the meeting of the Supreme Council of Supply and Relief held at the Ministry of Commerce in Paris on Monday. It follows:

"A statement was before the council summarizing the present position of relief work in regard to Belgium, Northern France, southeastern Europe, and northern Europe. Resolutions were passed respecting the appointment of committees representative of the four associated Governments to supervise arrangements in certain districts.

"Generally speaking, the position in regard to allied and liberated territories is that there is a sufficient world supply of food available to meet their needs, and that all possible steps are being taken to ascertain and meet them and solve the attendant financial and transport questions.

"Pending the presentation of reports by representatives of the four treasuries, it was agreed in principle that all four countries would participate in the financial arrangements. Following upon the decision of the Supreme War Council concerning the utilization of German shipping, certain consequential arrangements were made and representatives of the associated Governments were nominated to deal with the matter.

"Consideration was then given to the position of neutrals in the matter of food supplies. Bulgaria's situation was also discussed. An agreement was likewise reached on certain questions regarding the organization of the council."

URGE $100,000,000 BILL.

State, Treasury, and Food Officials Before Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Representatives of the State and Treasury Departments and the Food Administration appeared today before the Senate Appropriation Committee in executive session to explain the manner in which it is proposed to expend the $100,000,000 President Wilson has asked Congress to appropriate for food relief in Europe, outside of Germany.

The committee had before it the relief bill passed by the House, which provides that some of the fund also may be used for aiding the distressed civilian populations in countries of the Near East formerly under domination of the Turks.

Disposition of the resolution was deferred, with the prospect that hearings would be continued several days.

No information in addition to that already given the House was presented to the Senate committee today, according to Acting Secretary of State Polk. Judge Glasgow, counsel for the Food Administration, presented many cablegrams from Herbert Hoover outlining famine conditions and was closely questioned by many committee members.

An amendment advocated by Republicans, upon which action was postponed, would stipulate that there must be cooperation by England, France and Italy in the relief work. Another minority amendment would require detailed statements of expenditures.

VIENNA GETS BRITISH FOOD.

Tommies Convoy First Trainload for Women and Children.

VIENNA, Jan. 14.—A small body of British troops arrived here today as the convoy of a trainload of foodstuffs, a present from the British Army in Italy to the women and children of Vienna. Great crowds followed the convoy through the streets, giving the men a cordial welcome, but one devoid of any especial enthusiasm.

The British officer in command explained to the burgomaster that the supplies were sent in recognition of the fact that Austria had treated her British prisoners with consideration, in contrast with the inhuman treatment given them by the Germans.

Three additional train loads are to follow the first to alleviate the needs of the women and children until regular shipments begin coming in.

The burgomaster told the British commander that the food had arrived at an opportune moment, as the situation was reaching a crisis through the fact that Vienna had not enough food to last more than the next four days.

When the British convoy marched through the streets of Vienna, it was, perhaps, the first time in history that British troops had appeared in a group in the Austrial capital.

COL. HOUSE HAS INDIGESTION.

He expects to be out in a day or two.

GERMANS RELUCTANT TO GIVE UP AIRPLANES

Many of Those Surrendered Are Worthless—Large Bombers Are Held Back.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Germany is surrendering the airplanes required by the armistice terms with reluctance, THE NEW YORK TIMES learns from an authoritative source, and the total number to be delivered to the Allies in good and serviceable condition is as yet far from having been reached. German machines were simply left behind without guards in the airdromes, and as the British advancing cavalry patrols reached them, guards were posted. In many cases the cavalry found the machines damaged or deficient in instruments or parts, and the question arises whether they were so left by the Germans or whether they had suffered owing to souvenir-hunting propensities of the civilian population.

This point is being investigated with strict impartiality. On the British sector the proportion of large bombing planes—only about twenty were left by the Germans—is very small. This emphasizes the German comprehension of the commercial possibilities of converted bombers.

The total number of German airplanes collected by the Royal Air Force is just over 500. It does not follow that anything like the whole of this number will be accepted as coming within the armistice definition of "in good condition." Only a small proportion are immediately flyable, and when it is established the Germans left defective machines they will not be accepted. About 170 of the total number were abandoned in open railway trucks and were, of course, left dismantled, a clear evasion of the terms. Both these and those machines which were left in the airdromes suffered from exposure. In two cases the Germans handed over groups of machines to local municipal authorities, insisting on receipts and declarations that they were received complete, and the enormous work caused to the Royal Air Force by this haphazard manner of surrender will be realized.

Only at Nivelles were the German airplanes handed over in the regular manner. Nearly all these were of the newest Fokker type, though there were some Albatross, scout, Pralz, and two Junkers. These last are armored trench fighting machines with wings of corrugated aluminium, and have a pair of machine guns which fire through the floor of the observer's cockpit.

The depot at Nivelles will soon be cleared, and the primary task of noting deficiencies will be accomplished. On the result depends whether the Allies will have more to say to Germany after Jan. 17 about the surrender of airplanes.

RUSSIANS IN PARIS AGREE WITH PICHON

Committee Encouraged by Refusal to Admit Bolshevist Envoys to Peace Conference.

BAKHMETEFF SEES HOPE

Ex-Ambassador Declares Progress is Being Made in Uniting Anti-Bolshevist Factions.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—No state paper has given more encouragement to the Russian Committee in Paris, engaged in the work of restoring Russian unity and sanity, than the letter of Foreign Minister Pichon emphatically refusing, so far as France is concerned, to receive as delegates to the peace conference representatives of the Bolsheviki.

Although this refusal from the French Foreign Minister was provoked by the proposal of Lloyd George that Bolshevists, as well as representatives of other Russian groups, be so received, the Russian diplomats and statesmen now in Paris refuse absolutely to comment on the action of Lloyd George or to criticize the attitude of the British Government. But they freely discuss the points made public by the Pichon reply to Lloyd George on their merits, and they find nothing but inconsistency both in the idea of receiving the Bolshevist delegates at the peace conference and the idea of receiving delegates of other Russian groups as representatives of seperate de facto governments in North and South Russia and Siberia.

They find this inconsistency first in the fact that the Bolshevists deny the very principle of nationality upon which the peace conference is based, and secondly that the other Russian groups opposed to the Bolsheviki do not in reality represent separatist movements but parts of one great movement, the object of which is a democratic, liberal, united Russia.

Bakhmeteff Explains.

Among the members of this Paris Russian Committee, the same statesmen who are fighting for democracy in their country as against anarchy, is Boris Bakhmeteff, Ambassador of the First Revolutionary Government to America. It was he who pointed out to me today the inconsistency of receiving Bolsheviki at the peace conference or of looking upon the several Governments in Russia now struggling against Bolshevism as separate entities.

"As a premise," said M. Bakhmeteff, "we must recognize a sharp distinction between Bolshevism, the Government of Lenine, and those movements in the north and south of Russia and in Siberia opposed to the Bolsheviki and working for real democracy. These latter Governments are all loyal to the Allies and opposed to Germany. As a matter of fact, in the formation of each of these Governments, at Omsk, Archangel, and in the South, formal allegiance was declared to the Allies, as well as enmity to the Central Powers. The Governments still stand for the old alliance between France and Russia and for the common cause which Russia made with France, England and the other Allies at the beginning of the war.

"On the other hand, the Bolsheviki have made an open pact with Germany, have received money and supplies from her, and are openly hostile to the Allies. Therefore, so far as international lines of demarcation made by the war are concerned, the Bolsheviki and other Russian groups are not in the same category at all.

"But there is a line of cleavage going even deeper than that and touching every fundamental principle upon which the remaking of the world must be made. Assume for the moment that the Bolshevist Government is the actually established Government. Even then would it be qualified to send delegates to the Peace Conference? I do not think so. Why? Peace is to be formed on a basis of free, independent States, on a basis of national democratic unities. But the Bolsheviki deny this very underlying principle upon which everything worth striving for must be built. They deny the existence and reality of the very stuff out of which the League of Nations must come. They deny, in other words, national solidarity, and declare for class solidarity, desiring to make over the world on the basis of the international proletariat, which would know no existence of States.

Foes of American Ideals.

"There is absolutely nothing in common between them and what America, England, France, and Italy want. There is no room in their philosophy for the task of making the world safe for democracy. Therefore there is no common ground on which their delegates could be admitted to the world Peace Conference.

"As to the proposal that representatives of the Russian Governments of the North, South and Siberia be admitted as delegates of separate States, there is also an inconsistency, for there is no spirit of separation in these movements. Geographically, it is true, they are far apart, but nationally and politically they are all one thing. They not only make common cause for the Allies and against the Central Powers, but they are all actuated by the same desire to restore the whole of Russia to a single liberal democratic statehood. These three movements in the North, South, and Far East, are all parts of one enterprise. They do not reveal or indicate a dismemberment of Russia to those who understand them, or to those who are leading them. There is no trace of the spirit of separatism about them. On the contrary, it is the purpose of each group to get all together in one Russia as soon as possible. Here in Paris we are striving to establish unity of representation of these geographically separated regions of Russia and we are succeeding.

Bolshevism a World Menace.

"As to Bolshevism itself, we know it is not a danger peculiar to Russia but something that threatens the world. Russia is merely the first victim of this international disease, which is as much opposed to democracy as autocracy is or was. We have beaten down autocracy, but now there is the new danger, just as menacing, in the form of Bolshevism, of anarchy.

"Woodrow Wilson, William II. of Germany, Lenine of Russia, personify three things from which the world must make its choice. The Kaiser has been rejected. The choice is now between that which Wilson represents and what Lenine stands for.

"To come back to the subject of my own country, a strong liberal united Russia would be the defender of the world's safety. That is obvious. Consider for a moment the new small States to be erected in Eastern Europe. They have got to begin their national State lives from the very beginning, and we cannot expect smooth sailing for that from the start. Think what it will mean to have over beyond their eastern borders a big, serene, quieting, non-aggressive State such as United Democratic Russia should be. Think, on the other hand, what it would mean to have there instead a dismembered Russia, in part given over to anarchy, in part made up of other small States, each of which would furnish one more danger point against world peace!

"Such a conglomeration would be no help to guide and safeguard the new European States, but a constant incentive to disorder and, what is more, a field for future German intrigue in which to renew her schemes and build up her economic imperialism. A big, strong, sane Russia will alone save this situation."

EUROPE'S WAR DEBT PERIL.

French Plan of World Guarantee Approved by London Paper.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Daily News in an editorial says:

"It is interesting that the idea of a world guarantee for war debts should come from France because the attitude of France has been more nationalist than that of the English-speaking countries, and because the idea of a League of Nations seemed to be slower in taking root there than here. • • •

"It was inevitable that a proposal for a common guarantee for the indebtedness of the different countries would be put forward. All the nations are staggering under a mountain of debt and all the nations are in urgent need of credit. • • •

"Some of us are better off than others. Leaving Japan out of the question, America has suffered least. She has incurred a heavy debt, of course, for in the last months of the war her expenditures far exceeded even our own, but she is the creditor nation. She lent abundantly to the Allies. We, too, as a setoff to our debt of £8,000,000,000 or so, have large credit claims in respect of loans we have made to our allies and our self-governing Dominions during the last five years.

"On the other hand, the Continental countries have nothing but debts, and if these debts are to be honored and Europe is to be saved from a complete financial catastrophe there must be a common policy for the re-establishment of the world's credit.

"In this matter the separatism of war has no relevance. We cannot cut off the credit of one country from another any more than we can cut off the atmosphere of one country from another. We cannot be indifferent to the Turkish debt or the Austrian debt any more than we can be indifferent to the French debt or the Italian debt. In finance we all sink or swim together and the interest of each is the interest of all."

PUT LEAGUE IN FOREFRONT

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

cal method of carrying out the President's ideals.

In fact, the basis upon which the League proposals will be worked out will be found in the President's fourteen points. Arbitration or mediation will be one of the first principles of the League, and the judicial possibilities of making arbitration or mediation obligatory through permanent institutions will probably be found to have been worked out in detail by Dr. James Brown Scott of the Law Department at Washington.

Armament as an Obstacle.

The question of limitation of armaments will be one of the crucial difficulties in the formation of the League, for although the lifting of this burden from the world is one of the chief desiderata of all, the views as to where the margin of safety lies differ considerably. The French position in regard to the dangers to be feared from an unregenerated Germany, and the British view of the future possibilities of a menace to the imperial communications by sea, may be instanced.

Another point which will receive attention is that the League of Nations should not merely adopt measures of law and force to prevent future wars, but should proclaim trusteeships over nations and districts where disturbances of the peace may be expected. To this end, it will be necessary for the League to have an adequate police force, and it may be taken as a certainty that in the constitution of such a force the United States will be called upon to contribute its due quota.

The questions of standing armies and conscription inevitably arise out of this situation. Great Britain will undoubtedly oppose any suggestion that makes for conscription.

UPHOLDS BARRING OF THE BOLSHEVIKI

London Morning Post Disapproves Their Representation at the Peace Conference.

BRITISH PRESS AT VARIANCE

Chronicle Says England's Attitude is Misrepresented—Public's Abhorrence of Reds.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Morning Post this morning gives prominence to THE NEW YORK TIMES editorial on the British proposal to recognize the Bolsheviki at the Peace Conference. In an editorial The Morning Post says that in declining the proposal the French Government took the only course consistent with its honor and dignity.

This paper regards it as "most unfortunate that from the moment of the Russian revolution this country has never devised a policy toward Russia," and says that "if we except Lloyd George's speech delivered to the Supreme War Council, we find no declaration of a Russian policy other than the recent negative statement that the British Government had decided to send no more troops to Russia.

Arguing in favor of allied intervention in Russia, the paper says that there are two aspects of the case to be considered.

"The one is that to leave Russia alone in her extremity would be what Viscount Milner has described as an abominable betrayal, a betrayal so extraordinarily inconsistent with all fine sentiments we have heard lately that we must continue to believe it will not be permitted. The other aspect is the question of self-defense and security of Western civilization.

Points Menace of Bolshevism.

"If Bolshevism is allowed to spread, it will infect every capital in Europe and there will arise the worst of all wars—civil conflict—in every country, and that at a time when the allied nations have not yet settled their accounts with Germany."

The Morning Post agrees that intervention in Russia on behalf of loyal Russians presents many difficulties. It says the chief difficulty would be solved if the allied Governments and America would agree upon a definite policy, would make that policy known, and would proceed at once to carry it into execution.

The editorial criticism by THE NEW YORK TIMES was also reproduced here by The London Times and is supported in The Globe, which declares itself "simply not able to understand" how the suggestion to deal with the Russian Bolsheviks could have been made.

In this the Globe undoubtedly expresses the attitude of the country toward Bolshevism as revealed by the recent election. Practically every candidate who could be accused of any sympathy with extremist views was then defeated by an overwhelming majority, and it was plainly demonstrated how slight were the inroads which Bolshevist ideas had made on the British public.

On the other hand, it was also shown that there was a great distaste for further Russian adventure. The questions asked of candidates showed that the public generally wanted demobilization and was heartily opposed to the employment of the conscript army in military operations for which it was not raised.

This country is undoubtedly war weary, but it might take a different attitude toward the Russian expedition if it were intrusted to a volunteer force. So far, however, there has been no authoritative lead given by responsible statesmen.

The British nation abhors Bolshevism, but would avoid, if possible, spending more blood in interfering in Russian affairs. If, however, a leader with authority would attack the new tyranny with something of the zeal Gladstone used in denouncing the Bulgarian atrocities, he might easily carry the nation with him.

The Chronicle's diplomatic correspondent, on the other hand, says the British attitude to Russia has been misrepresented as a consequence of that "indiscretion" in publication by L'Humanité of the British proposal. The correspondent says:

"It has given rise to the assumption, entirely gratuitous, that Great Britain has no fixed policy but is swayed by vague sentimentality whereas, it is at least equally arguable that her suggestion had a rhetorical purpose, and came at the end of correspondence on the subject. At least it may be conceded that certain proposals are put forward not as representing the last word but because they offer grounds for discussion."

WILSON MAY VISIT ENGLAND.

Hopes to Return Via Queenstown and Inspect Base of Our Fleet.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—President Wilson may visit England on his way back to the United States next month, but it will not be to confer with statesmen there. He has hoped to be able to sail from a British port, probably Queenstown, and have an opportunity to inspect the base of the American flotilla which did such remarkable work in the anti-submarine warfare.

Mr. Wilson, it is said, might decide, if he visits England, to stop for a few hours at Oxford to receive an honorary degree which that university wishes to confer on him. He would not necessarily visit London on this journey. If, when the President starts homeward, he should feel it necessary to return to Europe later, he might postpone his visit to Oxford, but if he feels there is any doubt about his coming back to the Peace Congress, he might go to Oxford to receive this degree.

SEES BANKRUPTCY FACING GERMANY

Cost of the War Said to Have Practically Equalled Nation's Total Capital.

RAILWAY REVENUE GONE

People Spend Money Recklessly for Fear That It Will Soon Become Worthless.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 14.—Confronted with dangers from without, Germany is internally torn by political dissension and in the grip of practical bankruptcy and starvation.

As regards her economic state, I have learned the following details from an observer who has been closely watching the course of events:

The war cost Germany some $100,000,000,000, which practically equals her total capital. Should the war loans be honored, the interest charge would involve an increase in taxation over the last peace budget of about $3,500,000,000. The handsome surplus previously yielded by the Prussian State railways has now disappeared and the result of working the railways is more likely to be a deficit.

The financial situation is aggravated by the loss of the feeling of security. A traveller who recently returned from Berlin tells me that money is now worth only a day's purchase, as no one knows what may happen the following day.

With no incentive to save, the people are indulging in a wild orgy of expenditure, determined to enjoy money while they have it. This desire for immediate expenditure, I am told, is prompting many of the strikes for higher wages which are impeding the restoration of the country.

Iron Ore Sources Lacking.

As evidence of the state of affairs regarding raw materials with which Germany is faced, my informant gave me the following figures about iron ore: In order to produce her annual product of some 14,000,000 tons of iron, Germany required 50,000,000 tons of ore. Her own output of ore, exclusive of that from Alsace, amounted to only about 8,000,000 tons, the difference having to be imported mainly from France, Luxemburg, Spain, Sweden, Norway, Tunis and Algeria, while about 21,000,000 tons were obtained from Alsace.

With the French and French-controlled markets closed against her, and Luxemburg probably lost to the German Customs Union, Germany will be hard put to it to find raw material to feed her furnaces. The effect is felt already at Krupp's, whose employes have been reduced from 120,000 to 10,000.

It must be remembered that Germany's purchasing power is heavily reduced because of the fall in the mark, which now equals about one-third of its normal value.

As regards food, my informant, who followed the Food Dictator's announcements and distribution cards for a period of two years, tells me that these cards entitle people to only one-fifth of the nourishment considered necessary by scientists, and the supplies authorized by the cards are not always forthcoming.

Prior to the war Berlin consumed about 1,200,000 litres of milk per day, while the supply now available is only some 180,000 litres. Practically there has been no milk, butter, eggs or cheese for months past.

Fats Almost Unobtainable.

The sugar ration per person is now a pound and a half per month, that of potatoes about seven pounds per week, bread—and that very bad—half a pound daily, with until lately twenty grammes of fat per day. But fat has now practically disappeared.

With the Russian food supplies lost to her, with home production of food reduced to one-sixth of the previous output, and with the potato crop left to be frostbitten in the ground owing to lack of labor, it can be said that Germany's food supplies have really broken down. Her potato supply will last only a few weeks, her cereals only until February.

How this has affected the population can be gathered from the following statistics, prepared by the old régime, but only lately made available: In 1917 the mortality rate for the whole of Germany was 32 per cent. higher than for 1913, and for only the first three-quarters of 1918, 34 per cent. higher. In towns having populations of over 15,000, deaths from tuberculosis amounted in 1913 to 40,334 and in only the first half of 1918 to 41,800. Deaths from respiratory troubles amounted in 1913 to 46,000; in 1917 to 61,000; and in only the first half of 1918 to 34,500. These statistics do not contain the very large number of deaths from the Spanish sickness.

REDS RAVAGE LITHUANIA.

Rob and Torture Land Owners as They Move on Warsaw.

WARSAW, Jan. 13, (Associated Press.) Bolshevist guerilla bands are carrying out many depredations in Lithuania as they advance in the direction of Warsaw. A landowner named Michulsky, who lived in a village near Baranovichi, has arrived in Warsaw, and relates how he and his wife were tortured by the Bolsheviki.

One day his house was surrounded by a band of twenty armed men. Only Michulsky and his wife, a French woman, were in the house. The men demanded money and Michulsky told them he did not have much. The leader of the band then told his followers to undress Michulsky. The bandits tore the clothes from both Michulsky and his wife. They beat the landowner's wife with a whip and pounded Michulsky with the butts of their guns. Michulsky finally agreed to give the men 15,000 rubles.

After accepting the money the band rifled the house and stole all the clothes of Michulsky and his wife. They told Mme. Michulsky that she belonged to the "dirty Allies," adding:

"All your people will soon be like us. There will not be any more property owners. We are going to Warsaw, and then we will overrun Europe."

Later the bandits asked for more money, and tortured Michulsky and his wife until Mme. Michulsky became unconscious, and her husband's wrists were broken. Michulsky gave them 13,000 rubles more, all the money he had. Then, after stealing all the valuables in the house and the horses on the farm, the men demanded liquor. There not being any liquor about, they gave the Michulskys a final beating and then went off to a neighboring house.

They did not find any money there so, Michulsky says, they set fire to the house and shot down the family as they attempted to escape. A girl of eighteen almost made good her escape, but was brought down with a second shot as she ran. The bandits then beat the girl to death with the butts of their guns.

Up to this time the Lithuanian peasants had taken no part in the robberies and cruelties of the Bolsheviki. The peasants themselves are being robbed by the Bolsheviki.

The commanders of the retiring German troops are reported to be carrying on systematic schemes of getting money. One plan is to sell the farms back to their owners before retiring or, if they are unwilling to buy, to sell them to the peasants. One proprietor was told he could have his wheat crop for a payment of 30,000 marks, with the threat that if the offer was not accepted the wheat would be sold to the peasants.

GERMAN ARMY NOW NUMBERS 1,250,000

Its Morale in a Crisis Is Big Question, Despite Efforts Made by Hindenburg.

MANY OFFICERS RETAINED

Re-enlistment of Demobilized Men to Protect the Fatherland Also an Important Factor.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, Jan. 15.—It is not to be supposed that the German Army has completely disintegrated or that it has ceased to be a potential military machine. Of course, it today is nothing like it was on Nov. 11, but it perhaps is equal in size to what the German Army was the first of July, 1914.

There were about 3,500,000 men in the German Army when hostilities ceased; there are more than 1,000,000 men in the German Army today. Its morale in a crisis is a big question.

But it must be borne in mind that Hindenburg has kept up a large part of the officers' corps, and officers, and the skeletons of many regiments and divisions of which most of the privates have been demobilized. Hindenburg plans to turn over his command of the army to the Government on Feb. 1, and it is his intention to deliver then an appreciable army for whatever use the Government may seek to put it to.

Many Germans Deserted.

An expert has given me the following statement as to the best information on the morale of the German Army:

"In addition to the men regularly demobilized, large numbers have deserted. Considerable numbers of soldiers actually with their regiments in their depots are doing little more than collecting pay. In general such soldiers as remain with the colors appear to have little disposition to obey military orders which involve personal danger to themselves. Of the few exceptions at present appear to be some units employed in enforcing order in Berlin.

"The morale of the volunteer forces is yet to be tried. Officers who have not been regularly demobilized appear to be largely remaining at their post, marking time in anticipation of any turn of events which may restore the normal military procedure. There are many evidences of their attempts to restore regimental life on the same lines as existed in the depots prior to the war, but their efforts do not appear to extend to the enforcement of objectionable orders.

"So long as the present lack of unity of purpose and control continues the German Army is of negligible value for any military operations. Nevertheless, if any turn of events should happen to bring about any common inspiration among the German people there still exists a skeletonized German organization which in such an event might quickly become an effective army."

In consideration of the German Army, especial attention should be paid to the nationwide enlistment of volunteers now going on, under which many men demobilized are again joining the army in response to the call for troops to protect Germany on the east and maintain order within the boundaries of the nation.

For the most part the German divisions have gone to their home districts—that is, the regions where they were garrisoned before the war. This is not true of some forces on the eastern border, which are being held in readiness to fight against the threatened invasion of the Fatherland by the Poles or by the Bolsheviki.

It has been proved not true that all German soldiers except two classes have been discharged. The classes of '96, '97, '98, and '00 have not been discharged officially. Members of classes of '96 and '97 living in occupied Germany have been discharged, and the discharge of all members of these classes had been promised for February, but has not yet taken place.

The size of a class in Germany averages 500,000, but of course there have been heavy tolls among these classes, and the estimate of the number of men now in the German Army is placed at 1,250,000.

How great have been the inroads of Bolshevist preaching in their ranks no one yet, not even their commissioned officers, knows accurately. The officers remain generally faithful to their commanders. It is in the officers' corps that Hindenburg places great reliance as a force to restore order in Germany should the old commander be called upon to undertake that task.

Demobilization of Staffs.

While we have fairly accurate data as to the demobilization of privates, the extent of the demobilization of staffs of divisions and regiments is not so easy to get. In general, it is believed that the Germans will disband all regiments and divisions which were not part of the German Army before the war, except certain new divisions formed of old regiments. It seems that at fewest fifty divisions' skeletons are now functioning and being built up from men from other divisions. The completion of this work would give a standing army of approximately 1,000,000 men.

Great importance is attached to the public volunteer recruiting now going on, and unemployment among the demobilized soldiers seems to be aiding this work. Recruiting posters call for lovers of their country to shield it against invasion from the East and against the Bolshevist poison from within.

A number of German divisions on the Russian-Balkan line have not been at all demobilized, and units whose home districts are in the region next to the Poles appear to be preparing for operations without much change in their personnel. In addition, units whose home districts are in and about Berlin are there and recently other units, although not any large number, have been moved into the vicinity of the capital. Units belonging in occupied territory are distributed in occupied districts.

A careful review of the situation in a belt of 150 kilometers from the Rhine eastward shows that there are in that territory only units which were there before the war or which occupation has moved there. This means that no precautions have been taken by the Germans looking toward a resumption of hostilities with the Allies.

While on the eastern front the army staffs continue to operate, in the rest of Germany the army staffs have disbanded, and local command is vested in the corps staffs which were Germany's system before the war.

Headquarters to Close.

We have information that on or about Feb. 1 Hindenburg will close his General Headquarters at Cassel and pass on its functions to the War Ministry at Berlin.

The last official task of Burgomaster Clostermann, who died the day before yesterday, was to prepare a statement of the part that the City of Coblenz played in supporting the personnel of the German Army. His report showed that the total number of soldiers drafted from the City of Coblenz, with 70,000 population, was 11,723. Of this number 1,033 were killed or died, and 449 were discharged because of wounds. Since the armistice 6,532 have been demobilized. Had America been called on to place the same proportion of soldiers in the field as did Coblenz she would have had an army of 17,000,000.

BAUER OBSTRUCTS RELIEF

Austrian Leader Attempts to Increase Discontent by Keeping Allied Food from Vienna.

GENEVA, Jan. 13.—Although political developments in the States which formerly composed the Empire of the Hapsburgs seem peaceful enough in comparison with the outbreaks of Bolshevist frenzy in Germany, there are certain signs that a storm is also breaking in German-Austria, Hungary, and even in Bohemia.

It is a very significant symptom that attempts are at present being made by the extreme Socialist elements in Budapest, Vienna, and Prague to effect an agreement between Hungarian, German-Austrian and Bohemian Socialist parties, with a view to joint political action.

The Hungarian Communists, among whom Bolshevism is most prevalent, and who are in close touch with the Russian Soviet, are the chief promoters of this scheme. At a recent meeting of the Budapest Workmen's Council eighty delegates voted in favor of a proposal to conclude an alliance between the Hungarian Communist Party and the German-Austrian Social Democrats. The idea of the alliance, by which the Hungarian, German-Austrian and Bohemian Socialists would pledge themselves to afford one another support in their attempts to prevent the formation of a Bourgeois Government and to establish proletarian domination, is certainly gaining ground.

This plan, the realization of which would incidentally reunite the dismembered Hapsburg Empire under the red flag, is regarded with favor by the Viennese Socialists, who for the same reason are the only powerful party left in German Austria today which still obstinately advocates union with socialistic Germany and is the sworn enemy of the Entente.

It is no secret in Vienna that Bauer, the Austrian Socialist leader, has been secretly intriguing to prevent German Austria from being supplied with food by the Entente. He has raised difficulties of all kinds in order to prevent food from reaching Vienna, for the Austrian Socialists fear that the Allies' generous action toward their fallen enemy may influence the population and forestall not only union with Germany, but also the establishment of Socialistic rule, and any humanitarian intervention calculated to alleviate the misery and discontent of the working classes fills them with selfish dismay.

Bauer's unscrupulous and heartless intrigues show to what lengths the Socialist leaders in Eastern Europe are prepared to go to realize their ambitions.

Moreover, the entire territory of the former Austro-Hungarian Empire is flooded with Bolshevist agents, most of whom are liberated Austrian and Hungarian war prisoners, dispatched from Russia owing to the general state of disorganization. These agents find no difficulty in passing from Hungary into Austria and Bohemia without passports. Their propaganda is beginning to bear fruit even in Bohemia, which until lately seemed altogether free from Bolshevism. The attempt to assassinate Kramarcz is not, as was at first supposed, the isolated act of a youthful fanatic, but the consequence of a Bolshevist plot in which numerous accomplices are involved. A marked change is noticeable in the tone of the Czech press, whose chief organ, The Pravo Lidu of Prague, attacks Professor Masaryk's Government, saying, the "millionaires Kramarcz, Rashin, Praczec, and Svehla dominate it. It is devoted to the Bourgeois interests and remains deaf to the wishes of the working classes, who demand the nationalization of mines and industries and the confiscation of war profits," adding: "If the Government persists in its capitalistic policy much longer it will be overthrown."

During the last two days numerous meetings of a frankly revolutionary character have been held at Prague, and serious riots have occurred in the towns of Ziskow, Klapno, and Dux, where large warehouses were plundered by the mob. In Hungary, which is a hotbed of Bolshevism, the agitation is, of course, most critical of all. Count Karolyi's Government, even in the opinion of its supporters, seems doomed presently to succumb in its hopeless struggle against the continual Bolshevist and counter-revolutionary conspiracies. The triumph of extreme Socialism in Budapest would naturally exert an immediate influence on Vienna and Prague and further the Socialist plan of united action against the Bourgeois classes and in conjunction with Bolshevist Russia and Socialistic Germany against the Entente.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 15.—The Aftontidningen of Stockholm says that a Russian officer living in Stockholm and a near acquaintance of the ex-Czar and his family was told that the family, at the beginning of the rebellion of the Bolsheviki, was taken to the Monastery of Vershoturik in the Ural Mountains and that having been there all the time is probably alive yet.

GENEVA, Jan. 14.—Numbers of Bolshevist agents of Russian and German nationality have been arrested in Geneva and Lausanne. The arrests are connected, the Tribune de Geneve says, with a Bolshevist plot in Lausanne against the life of M. Clemenceau. The arrested Bolsheviki, among whom are several women, have been sent under escort to Fort Savatan, above St. Maurice, where they will be interned.

CUT PERU RAILWAY; LIMA IN DARKNESS

Strikers Also Attempt to Stop City's Water Supply to Coerce Employers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Dispatches to the State Department today said that all business between Lima and Callao, Peru, had been suspended as a result of the dynamiting of part of the Central Railway during strike disturbances which began in Lima Monday.

The city lighting system was attacked with resulting darkness through the city, and an unsuccessful effort was made by the strikers to interfere with the city water supply. The city is being patrolled by policemen armed with rifles, and soldiers.

A cablegram to the Peruvian Legation today from the Peruvian Foreign Minister said it was expected that the strike would be ended within twenty-four hours, as conferences between the workmen and officials were taking place today under Government supervision.

LIMA, Jan. 15.—An unconfirmed report has been received here that strikers have dynamited the power transmission lines on the Morocoha properties of the Cerro de Pasco Company, flooding the mines. Cavalry reinforcements were dispatched to Morocoha.

ROME, Jan. 15.—Seymour Raikley of New York has been the principal figure in a pathetic ceremony which has just taken place. Raikley belongs to the American Red Cross and has done splendid work at the Italian front, relieving and comforting the inhabitants of villages destroyed by the Austrian bombardments.

After the victory at Vittorio and Veneto, Raikley was one of the first Americans to enter ruined Conegliano. He took food and warm clothes to the inhabitants, who had suffered all kinds of hardships under Austrian rule. What was left of the population of Conegliano, mostly peasants, wished to express in tangible form their gratitude to this American who had done so much to help them. All clubbed together, each bringing a small offering, to buy a gold medal for presentation to Raikley to show their deep gratitude. Women came up with their last savings, saying they were glad to give them. "He saved my small child from dying of hunger," said one. Another explained: "My old mother was bedridden. He personally came and gave her blankets and food."

Raikley in receiving the gift was visibly moved as he delivered a short speech of thanks to the crowd which surrounded him.

MERCURIUS TO SAIL TODAY.

The American steamship Mercurius will sail from Pier 61, North River, this afternoon for Constantinople and Beirut, carrying supplies to relieve the suffering Armenians, Greeks, and Syrians. Her cargo consists of foodstuffs, cloth, medical supplies, motor trucks, and other material. She is being sent out by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East and will be followed in a few days by the new steamship Western Belle, which is now loading 8,000 tons of flour.

Service triangles will be worn on the left sleeve of the coat and wound triangles on the right sleeve.

Revolutionary Meetings Held at Rotterdam—Wynkoop Again at Head of Movement.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 13.—Revolutionary meetings are taking place in Rotterdam, attended by Dutch, Russians, and Germans, and it is stated that a coup d'état and riots are planned for Jan. 20.

The Haagsche Post states that 4,000,000 gulden have been sent to Holland by the Bolsheviki for propaganda in Holland and Belgium. Socialist Leader Wynkoop, who recently was not allowed to go to Germany, is again at the head of the movement. The Dutch Socialist leader, recently speaking at Braunschweig, stated that Holland could not withstand the revolution much longer.

The people of Holland were greatly surprised at the final outcome of the last uprising. The great royalist demonstration at the time was the feat of the Catholic Party with the help of the capitalists and Court circles. The oldest and most aristocratic families turned out to cheer the Queen on Amalie Feld at The Hague, but big demonstrations of this sort can hardly be repeated.

A Dutch committee at Herenveen has drawn up an address to President Wilson signed by 4,000 persons, asking the President to allow representatives of all States to attend the Peace Conference in order to co-operate in the organization of a League of Nations.

COMPELS CITIZENS TO GIVE UP ARMS

on piers resembling those of the New York elevated road.

There was fierce fighting here between the Government troops and the Spartacides on housetops, lasting from 10 to 11 P. M. Passing trains were constantly exposed to fire, and it was said that the Spartacides were shooting at the trains to terrorize the passengers and employers and stop all traffic.

They certainly succeeded in compelling the passengers to crouch together at the bottom of the cars, trembling, while the trains raced at high speed through the danger zone.

This morning the subways were closed by the employes striking. It is true that they had been negotiating with the company for some days for higher wages and seemed in a fair way to come to an agreement, but at a meeting one morning it was decided to compel the company to concede all demands by a strike. The fact was that the employes wished to have traffic suspended, fearing that their lives were endangered. Probably their demands will be granted and the subway will be reopened again tomorrow if the Spartacides permit.

Several cars were hit last night by rifle bullets and several persons were wounded by splinters, but none seriously. It is reported from Munich that a fast train from Berlin was stopped in an open field by a danger signal just before reaching Regensburg. A hundred and sixty Spartacides jumped out and fled. Twenty-six suspected passengers, who remained, were captured. All were fugitives from Berlin.

The Spartacides captured in the Vorwaerts Building had rifled the cash drawers and safes of neighboring stores containing a million and a half of marks.

All dwellers in the newspaper district spent from three to seven days there in cellars, the other parts of the houses being unsafe.

TRACE LIEBKNECHT LINK WITH MOSCOW

BERLIN, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—The wife and youngest son of Dr. Liebknecht, head of the Spartacides, who were arrested when Liebknecht's house was sorrounded by soldiers and searched yesterday, have been liberated. Many, incriminating Bolshevist documents were seized.

Liebknecht's eldest son is still in the hands of the police and the Spartacide chief's sister was arrested yesterday. Among others arrested was Fraulein Jakob, Secretary of the Spartacus Union.

Still nothing is known of the whereabouts of Dr. Liebknecht, former chief of Police Eichhorn or Rosa Luxemburg.

Jan. 14.—Dr. Liebknecht, George Ledebour, head of the revolutionary Independent Socialist element, and the immediate supporters of these revolutionary chiefs, were so certain that their plans for the recent uprising would succeed that they had prepared a proclamation, dated Jan. 6, in which the Ebert-Scheidemann Government was declared to be deposed and formal announcement was made that the Government had been taken over by the revolutionists.

It was already known that Dr. Liebknecht and the then Police Chief Eichhorn had told Lieutenant Fischer, the city commandant, on the day named that it had been decided to overthrow the Government, and documentary evidence to this effect is now adduced by the Vorwärts in the form of the proclamation referred to.

Text of Liebknecht Proclamation.

The proclamation was addressed to "Comrades! Workmen!" and read:

The Government of Ebert and Scheidemann has made itself impossible. It is hereby declared deposed by the undersigned Revolutionary Committee and representatives of the revolutionary workmen and soldiers (Independent Social Democratic Party and Communistic Party.) The undersigned Revolutionary Committee has temporarily taken over the Government's affairs.

Comrades and workmen, give your support to the measures of the Revolutionary Committee.

Berlin, Jan. 6, 1919.
THE REVOLUTIONARY COMMITTEE, per LEBEDOUR, LIEBKNECHT, and SCHOLZE.

The proclamation which, including the signatures, was typewritten, was presented to Lieutenant Hamburger at the Ministry of War, on Jan. 6 by a marine who appeared before the Ministry with 800 armed men from the royal stables, which was then one of the headquarters of the revolutionists. The marine demanded that the Ministry be turned over to him.

Lieutenant Hamburger objected to the typewritten signatures, but said he was ready to surrender the Ministry to the new Government if the document were properly signed.

The troops withdrew and returned later with the proclamation bearing the personal signatures of Liebknecht and Scholze, together with an annotation by Dr. Liebknecht signing himself "as the representative of Georg Ledebour, who is for the moment absent."

Lieutenant Hamburger took the proclamation, but retained the Ministry in his own hands.

"It is characteristic of Liebknecht's cynical conscienceless ness, as well as of his naïve megalomania, that he believed he could with a stroke of the pen lead the entire War Ministry to faithlessness and rebellion," says the Vorwärts in its comment.

RHINELAND'S HOPE RISES.

Encouraged by Firm Stand at Berlin Against Revolutionists.

COBLENZ, Jan. 14.—The firm stand taken by the Berlin Government against the Spartacides has made a deep impression on the people in this section, everywhere feelings of renewed confidence being manifested.

Numerous political meetings are being held, the speakers exhorting their hearers to elect candidates to the National Assembly who will build for Germany a strong, conservative Government. The population hereabouts expresses the hope that if the Spartacides again appear to have a chance of obtaining control in Berlin American troops will go there to enforce order.

CONFERS ON CONSTITUTION.

German Cabinet Also Discusses Assembly—Move for New Republic.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—A Copenhagen dispatch says that the German Cabinet met yesterday to discuss the new constitution and to consider proposals for the meeting of the National Assembly. Germany's participation in the Peace Congress was also taken up. The meeting will be continued today.

The Government of Brunswick has issued a proclamation proposing the formation of a "Central North German Federal Republic" with a preliminary constitution resembling that of Switzerland. Soldiers and workmen's councils in various districts are asked to pass upon the question.

Employes of the elevated and underground railroads in Berlin have struck, as their demand for higher wages has not been met. It is not known when traffic will be resumed.

CHEMNITZ REBUKES RADICALS.

Their Vote 6,269 Out of 117,000—Liberal Gains in Wuerttemberg.

BERLIN, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—The numerical unimportance of the Bolshevist elements outside of Berlin has been demonstrated again by city elections.

At Chemnitz, in a total vote of more than 117,000, the combined Spartacides and independents polled 6,269 and the Majority Socialists 64,534.

A comparison of the Württemberg results with the vote in the Reichstag election of 1912 shows the enormous growth of the Democratic vote. Whereas the Progressives polled only 18 per cent. of the total vote in 1912, they received nearly a third of the whole vote last Sunday.

OUR TROOPS THINK THEY DELAY PEACE

Believe Their Early Return to America Would Speed Up Conferees' Work.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Our soldiers want to go home. With the exception of comparatively few adventuring spirits who would not mind seeing Germany or even tackling Russia, our men are eager to get back to America.

As long as there was a real war to be fought to save the world and particularly the United States from German aggression they were game for it all the way to Berlin if necessary. But among the soldiers it is held that the purpose for which they came to Europe has been accomplished.

They argue that it is not justifiable to keep them here to do police duty or to furnish a basis of establishing some kind of balance in Europe or to put down anarchy in Russia or to occupy Germany or even to help establish a League of Nations.

The latter should be a question of moral suasion. If we cannot persuade Europe to adopt American ideas and ideals, then we should leave Europe to work her own salvation in her own time and her own way, extending all possible aid, moral and material, from the other side of the Atlantic.

It is argued that the presence here of the American Army creates an artificial situation, which prevents the operation of natural forces for restoring European equilibrium. Germany no longer possesses organized military power on land or sea. Four and a half years of war have spent the military spirit in the allied armies. Sheer exhaustion creates a condition favorable for peace plans.

But it is urged that the presence of an unspent American Army furnishes a basis for individual national hopes, ambitions, and demands. European countries are tempted to count American military strength as a part of their stock in trade and may be drawn into enterprises not properly part of the work of establishing peace. From the American soldiers' viewpoint the war is over, and they do not see why they should be held here while statesmanship dilly-dallies with peace details.

The sentiment of the soldiers is shared in other American circles here. It is widely believed that if it was determined and announced that the American Army would be sent home just as rapidly as transportation could be provided it would clear the atmosphere and speed up peace proceedings.

From six to ten months are required to transport all the troops, which would incidentally provide enough American soldiers for a sufficiently long period to take care of all legitimate needs in Europe.

AMERICA INVADED, AS R. S. BAKER SAW IT

Article Published in 1915 Pictured Nation as Supine in Face of Germans.

SHIPS SUNK, FORTS USELESS

Publicity Man for Peace Conference Described Delighted Hun Invaders as Finally Settling Here.

Ray Stannard Baker, who has been appointed by President Wilson to be publicity man for the American Peace Commissioners, wrote for the American Magazine of January, 1915, of which he was editor, an article which caused widespread comment at the time, in support of extreme theories of disarmament and nonresistance.

Mr. Baker pictured America, with her fleet sunk and army disbanded voluntarily, invaded by a German host who found that they liked the country so much that, instead of fighting, they settled down here.

Mr. Baker portrayed the President and his Cabinet and a woman orator represented as a sort of reversed Joan of Arc as leading the movement which sunk the American ships and dismantled the American forts as the method of meeting a threatened German invasion.

This article is entitled "The Last Phase of the Great War—the German Invasion of America, A. D. 1915-16." It begins with a description of Germany's victories in the European war, finally involving this country and making war apparently inevitable. A great political conflict at home between the "peace party" and the militarists is described.

"In the mist of this struggle," continues the article, "at this most dramatic climax, the President of the United States, a man of the noblest ideals and most unselfish devotion, appeared one day before the Senate wearing upon his coat the iron plowshare of the Party of Peace. It was discovered on the same day that all but two of the members of the Cabinet were wearing the same insignia. It is difficult to describe the impression upon the country of the news of this event, for the influence of the President at that time upon the Government was profound.

"It is not necessary to recount fully the debate that followed. At that great moment men were lifted out of themselves, parties and private interests were forgotten—even the selfish and narrow interests of the nation were for the moment set aside, and the problem of what was best for humanity, for civilization, came for the first time in history to be seriously discussed in the great legislative forum.

"In two weeks time the disarmament of the fleet—save for a few of the lesser vessels which might be needed for police service—had begun, and the disarment of the forts and of the army rapidly followed."

Most of the country has been brought to favor this state of affairs, according to the article, which continues:

"A few irreconcilables, as usual, refused to abide by the judgment of the country. Most of them belonged to that class of men of big property interests, or of unearned incomes, who had been the loudest of any in their demands that large numbers of other people should immediately enlist for war, and they now realized all they could in gold upon their possessions and fled to Siam, Chile, and Madagascar, the only places where there was no immediate danger of war.

"In the meantime Germany developed plans for an attack on the United States, to finish her conquest of the world.

"During these weeks of excitement in America," continues Baker, "the German Kaiser had been organizing for the attack on the United States. He and his General heard with amazement and incredulity of the events in America. They could not believe the reports sent out by the press, and spies in great numbers were dispatched to the principal centres to test the sentiments of the country. None of the customary signs of preparation for war was evidence. No one was engaged in breaking the windows of the German Consulates or in robbing German bakeshops, but, on the contrary, a large number of Americans were asserting their friendship for the German people and their abhorrence of war in any form. No one was proposing to smother the acts of Government in secrecy or to censor the newspapers, for the people through years of practice in the free discussion of their affairs had grown suspicious of anything that needed to be hidden in darkness. They believed in 'pitiless publicity.' The German spies were, therefore, allowed to circulate freely in Congress and to send full reports to the Kaiser. Having no wish to steal anything or murder anybody, what reason had America to hunt spies or cloak their deeds in darkness?"

Unopposed, the German fleet reached our coast and the invading army landed on Long Island. Instead of a resisting army, they were met by a note from the President.

"The communication," the article continues, "closed with these nobly simple words:

"'We are your friends. We ask you to be ours.'"

This, however, was not acceptable to the German commander; he saw a trap in the failure to oppose his landing and had his troops intrench in Long Island. Instead of committing atrocities and spreading a reign of frightfulness among the peaceable inhabitants of Long Island, Ray Stannard Baker's German soldiers fraternized pleasantly with the population, paid for all they received from them and did not harm a hair on any one's head. The German commander, one General von Schwab, was dissatisfied with this idyllic campaign, and sent a fiery communication to the Mayor of New York demanding $30,000,000 and other things at once. There was a tense moment throughout the country, but the situation was met, according to the article, by a humorous editorial in a New York paper.

"He handled von Schwab's ultimatum," the article says, speaking of the editorial writer, "with delicious irony, advised an immediate payment of the indemnity upon the ground that the war so far was cheap at the price, especially in view of the fact that the German armies have already largely increased the trade of Long Island. He met the threat of the German commander to seize the city government of New York by observing that the government of the city had long been in the hands of what was probably far less efficient control than the Germans could give it. It was known throughout the world that German municipal government was unexcelled—was it not possible that a German expert in the City Hall, by improving the methods of Tammany, could have enough for the indemnity in a year or two? As for the fear of German domination, had not the city long been governed by the Irish and Jews and had any one objected?

"To the disgust of General von Schwab, his army began to disintegrate. His soldiers began to desert and settle in America like other German immigrants. How the coup de grace was given to the gentle Hun invader is told as follows:

"'At this juncture, American manufacturers and business men, seeing the golden opportunity for securing the most priceless addition to their equipment—skilled human beings—began bidding for the services of these Germans, offering them wages and salaries quite beyond their dreams. Having already absorbed 10,000,000 Germans, who became the best of American citizens, it was without difficulty that every man in the German armies who wished to do so found a place in American life.'

"With his army thus tempted away from him, General von Schwab was forced to flee. Shortly after America's demonstration of the success of making an invader by non-resistance, a Federation of the World is established in the article.

12 KILLED WHEN TANK OF MOLASSES EXPLODES

Hugh Sheets of Steel, Hurled Through Air, Destroy Structures on Boston Waterfront.

BOSTON, Jan. 15.—Probably a dozen persons were killed and fifty injured by the explosion of a huge tank of molasses on the waterfront off Commercial Street, near Keany Square, today. At a late hour tonight the only bodies identified were those of a fireman, George Leahy, two residents of tenements in the vicinity, Mrs. Bridget Clougherty and William A. Duffee, and James Lennon, a motorman, of Lenox, and J. M. Seiberlich, a blacksmith, also of Lenox. The tank was owned by the Purity Distilling Company, a subsidiary of the United States Industrial Alcohol Company, with a plant in Cambridge.

A dull, muffled roar gave but an instant's warning before the top of the tank was blown into the air. The circular wall broke into two great segments of sheet iron which were pulled in opposite directions. Two million gallons of molasses rushed over the streets and converted into a sticky mass the wreckage of several small buildings which had been smashed by the force of the explosion.

The greatest mortality apparently occurred in one of the city buildings, where a score of municipal employes were eating their lunch. The building was demolished and the wreckage was hurled fifty yards. The other city building, which had an office on the ground floor and a tenement above, was similarly torn from its foundations.

One of the sections of the tank wall fell on the firehouse known as Engine , which was near by. The building was crushed and three firemen were buried in the ruins. One, George Leahy, was killed and the other two injured. A fourth fireman was thrown through the window into the water, but was picked up.

Wagons, carts, and motor trucks were overturned. A number of horses were killed. The street was strewn with debris intermixed with molasses and all traffic was stopped.

The first rescue party on the scene was a squad detailed from the State nautical schoolship Nantucket, which was anchored at the playground pier. Under the direction of Lieutenant Commander H. J. Copeland the enlisted men gave first aid to the injured, searched the ruins for bodies, and assisted in patrolling the district. Shortly afterward police reserves arrived, together with a military company from an army station.

CARRANZA WARNS OF POLITICAL STRIFE

Tells Mexicans It Is Not Yet Time to Electioneer for New President.

FINDS AN "UNEASY FEELING."

Gives New Assurance of Determination to Retire at the End of His Term.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 15. — President Carranza, in a statement to the public, repeats his declaration that he will retire at the end of his term. Declaring that it is not yet time to start a campaign for the election of a future President, he warns against a possible attempt by the reactionaries of the old régime to elect a member of their group as President.

"Although there are two years more before renewing the executive power," he says, "yet there is a noticeably uneasy feeling due to the future campaigns for this position. The political agitation following nomination is unavoidable in all democratic countries, and in Mexico sooner or later it will be felt.

"Effectiveness of the suffrage and no re-election of the President are two democratic principles most firmly established as a result of the revolution. The Mexican people need not fear nor doubt that in the future these principles will be respected. As President, I consider them legitimate and just.

"As the preparatory work for the future electoral campaign is more effective and as the participation of the citizens in it is more earnest, the best guarantee is offered that the nation could have that it will be governed by proper men who will really represent the wishes of the people.

"For my part, I think I have complied my duty toward my country, working as I have since the democratic movement in 1913, later heading the constitutionalist revolution and continuing the fight until the re-establishment of a constitutional régime. I think I have the right to retire to private life when the present Presidential term, for which I was elected by my fellow citizens, is over.

"I have a duty toward the Constitutionalist Party not to abandon prematurely the responsibilities I have contracted with the whole country, and have an obligation to remain at my post as a true chief of State, continuing my administrative work until the last minute of the Presidential term.

"Pointing to the dangers of prolonged political agitation, the President states that electoral agitation takes a special form in a country like Mexico, "where we have not had sufficient education nor democratic experience, and have just commenced to recover from the revolutionary movement which has shaken our country."

He continues:

"A long period of political activity for the Presidential elections or premature anticipation of electoral work, owing to the conditions in Mexico, will bring serious difficulties for the consolidation of the revolutionary work for the cohesion of the Constitutionalist Party and for the regularity of administrative working. It is then the duty of the Mexican people and their Governors to try to reduce to a minimum the effects of political agitation, helping in the electoral campaign but at the same time shortening the period of agitation, making a short campaign and the most rapid one possible so as not to produce new political complications or disturb the working of the public administration.

"If the reforms proclaimed in the Constitution as a result of the revolution were definitely and irrevocably consolidated, a division of the Constitutionalist Party would not be hurtful but necessary for the best working of our democratic institutions. We must, however, remember that there exists a strong enemy, rich and organized, which is conscious of the defeat through the revolution and which considers possible a reaction against the work of the revolution.

"I do not refer to the armed bands whose action is insignificant, whose only work consists of hostile acts, not only against the Government but also against the lives and property of private persons. I refer to certain discontented Mexicans who have established in foreign parts their centres of conspiracy, utilizing in their work against the Constitutional Government foreign elements and the sheltering interests, especially under the shade of powerful foreign interests which seek resistance against the actual régime.

"The situation of Mexico now is extraordinarily like that which confronted the Liberal Government of Juarez in 1800. The elements which frankly seek to overturn the Constitution of 1917 and all principles included in it are in reality the enemy confronting the Constitutional Party, which should not believe that its enemies do not exist, but, on the contrary, should continue fighting, especially in this Presidential campaign.

"As they will appear, the organized financial elements will either frankly present a candidate or join one group into which the Constitutionalist Party may divide. So, the duty of all members of the party who have fought for its principles is not to lose sight of their ideals before they are sure that in order to keep the party pledges, but not before thirty-six other States have voted dry.

GREECE PRESENTS DEMANDS AT PARIS

Asks for Northern Epirus, Thrace, Vilayets in Asia Minor, and Islands of Near East.

PARIS, Jan. 14, (Associated Press.)—Greece has laid before the Peace Conference a memorandum signed by Premier Venizelos setting forth the situation of Greece and her claims in the settlement of the war. The memorandum says that the Hellenic nation consists of 8,256,000 persons, of whom 55 per cent. live in the Kingdom of Greece and the remainder outside its limits. Half a million Greeks in America are included in the figures submitted.

Wishing to reunite the Greek populations in the Balkans, Asia Minor, and the islands adjacent to the Kingdom, Greece asks, first, Northern Epirus, which contains 120,000 Greeks, against 80,000 Albanians. It says that "this former, besides being in the majority, also possess a higher form of civilization."

As a second demand, Greece asks for Thrace, without Constantinople. Thrace, according to the memorandum, is peopled largely by Greeks.

"Since Constantinople, according to the twelfth point of President Wilson's program, cannot remain under Turkish rule," the memorandum declares, "the natural solution would be to award Constantinople to Greece and to establish international guarantees for the freedom of the Straits."

It is pointed out that the principal native element of the population of Constantinople is Greek, being numerically greater than "all the other nationalities put together except the Turks."

"But if a society of nations be established immediately," the memorandum continues, "Constaninople might, in consequence of great international interests connected with the possession of the Straits, be formed as a separate entity by the society of nations, which would nominate a Governor for certain fixed periods."

The third territorial claim made by Greece is for parts of vilayets in Asia Minor. These have a population, it is said, of 1,188,000 Greeks, against 1,042,000 Mohammedans, and are claimed to be both "geographically and historically integral parts of Greece."

The Armenian provinces, with Russian Armenia, the memorandum says, should be erected into a separate State, organization of which should be intrusted to one of the great powers by the society of nations. It is admitted that the vilayets of Trebizond and Adana, although having, respectively, 550,000 and 70,000 Greek inhabitants, might be attached to the new Armenian State.

All islands in the Near East which are ethnographically, geographically, and economically Greek must return to the Hellenic State. These should include islands which, according to the treaty made in London in April, 1915, are to be annexed to Italy.

All the figures given in the memorandum are said to have been taken from Turkish statistics. There is a long discussion of Bulgarian claims, in which that nation's attempt to dominate the Balkans, with a view to realizing her dreams to possess four seas—the Black Sea, the Sea of Marmora, the Aegean, and the Adriatic—are detailed. The memorandum ends by saying:

"It must be thoroughly understood that Bulgaria seeks to play in the Balkans the rôle that Prussia played upon the European stage. Having been the first among her neighbors to organize a strong army, she believed she could easily enslave the nations near her.

"Militarism is as deeply rooted in Bulgaria as in Prussia. The Bulgarians have every right to boast of being 'the Prussians of the Balkans.' They resemble the Prussians in the militarism in their worship of brute strength, and in their inhuman manner of making war, but are far from equaling the Prussians in the domain of science, letters, and art."

FIGHT TO STAMPEDE MOONEY CONVENTION

Radicals Are Beaten on Organization in Chicago, but Continue Struggle.

CHEER BOLSHEVIST MOVES

Resolutions Offered for Soldiers and Sailors' Council and General Strike.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—After a fight which occupied the entire morning session, the conservatives defeated the radicals by a vote of two to one today in organizing the National Labor Congress, called to consider plans for obtaining a new trial for Thomas J. Mooney, serving a life term for murder growing out of the San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bomb outrage. Edward D. Nolan of San Francisco was elected Chairman.

The convention also decided that it would take action on the Mooney case before considering any other business. This plan was hotly contested by the radicals, who want to discuss international questions.

Despite this setback the radicals made a determined attempt to capture control of the convention later in the day. The Credentials Committee had not reported tonight, making it impossible to say which faction was the final victor.

With the gallery packed with radicals, they did about as they pleased at the afternoon session until the proceedings were ended by an early adjournment. Every mention of Socialist or I. W. W. principles was loudly cheered.

The leader was read from two members of the Italian Labor Commission, appointed by the Government of that country at the request or the American Federation of Labor, expressing sympathy with the movement to aid Mooney and asking to be seated as fraternal delegates in the convention. Chairman Nolan recommended that the request be granted, but the reading of the letter caused a hostile demonstration on the part of the radicals, who declared that the two Italian labor representatives had been repudiated by the Bolshevist element in that country. After an hour's heated discussion the motion to permit the Commissioners to sit in the convention was voted down.

The radicals followed this victory by presenting a motion that Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist leader recently convicted of violation of the Espionage law, be invited to address the convention. The radicals cheered for several minutes at the adoption of this motion. It is said that Debs will decline the invitation.

Apparently nearly every radical delegate had at least one resolution to offer. One delegate presented ten. They embodied various revolutionary ideas of government based on Socialist and I. W. W. propaganda, and were referred to the Committee on Resolutions without being read. A few of the ideas suggested in the resolutions offered were:

Organization of a National Soldiers and Sailors' Council to safeguard the interests of labor during reconstruction.

A referendum vote on the terms of peace.

Abolition of all restrictions on the issuance of passports.

Calling for a general strike to compel the repeal of the constitutional amendment for national prohibition if passed.

For Government ownership and operation of all manufacturing, commerce, banking, and insurance.

A general strike to compel the immediate release of all political and industrial prisoners or persons under charges, including Thomas J. Mooney, Warren Billings, William D. Haywood, Emma Goldman, Rose Pastor Stokes, Eugene V. Debs, Victor L. Berger, and Adolph Germer.

Representation of Russian, German, and Austrian Bolsheviki at the Paris Peace Council.

A uniform workday of six hours and a uniform lunch period of two hours in all lines of industry.

Word was received from the League for Amnesty for Political Prisoners of Niagara Falls, N. Y., indorsing the plan of calling a general strike to enforce the demands.

A message from the Workers' Council of Butte, Mon., asked the convention to declare for one organization of all workers under the Australian plan, the immediate withdrawal of allied troops from Russia and that greetings be sent to the Russian Soviet.

Frank P. Walsh, former joint Chairman of the National War Labor Board, sent a message expressing regret that he was unable to come to address the convention.

The conservative forces want to take action on the Mooney case and adjourn tomorrow. The radicals want to stay several days longer and discuss international and labor questions.

Charity Ball for K. of C. Relief.

In order to raise a fund of $50,000 to care for the disabled Knights of Columbus men in the service, the War Relief Charity Ball will be held in Madison Square Garden on Feb. 24, under the auspices of the forty-two councils comprising the New York Chapter. In an announcement issued yesterday, John Moroney, Chairman of the committee, declared that every dollar raised would go in full to the disabled veterans. Tickets at $1 each may be obtained from William P. Smith, Financial Secretary, New York Council 124, 107 West 101st Street.

INSIST ON PAYMENT FOR U-BOAT RAVAGES

Seamen Will Offer Plan to Peace Conference for Compensation to Dependents of Victims.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—In the absence of a definite policy from the Allies concerning the manner in which Germany shall make compensation for the dependents of submarine victims among seamen, the Executive Committee of the International Federation of Seafarers has evolved a plan by which the officials hope to force the Peace Conference to act. The committee has called an international conference in London on Feb. 24, at which the British delegates will present a resolution providing that the seamen will not man any ships going or coming from an enemy country until the proper compensation is agreed upon. J. Havelock Wilson, President of the International Seamen's Union, said to The Associated Press today:

"It seems that the British statesmen and those of other nations have been too busy to think of the seamen in preparing for the conference, so we will take the matter into our own hands in the hope of emphatically bringing to the notice of the peace delegates the necessity for taking care of our people. I have no doubt that the conference will adopt a resolution providing that no food shall go to Germany until these dependents are compensated."

The leaders of the seamen, including Andrew Furuseth of the United States, expect that the February conference will adopt a universal wage scale. They hope that this question will not be taken up by the Peace Conference or that wages will not be mentioned in the peace treaty. After the seamen have been in conference four days they will be joined by representatives of the engineers, stewards, and officers for a discussion of subjects in which all are interested.

Mr. Wilson said that all of the principal countries had promised to send representatives to the conference.

DRY AMENDMENT ON EVE OF VICTORY

thirds of each house concurring therein,) that the following amendment to the Constitution be, and hereby is, proposed to the States, to become valid as a part of the Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of the several States as provided by the Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

Section 2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of the several States, as provided by the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THOS. R. MARSHALL, Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate.

I certify that this joint resolution originated in the Senate.

JAMES M. BAKER, Secretary.

It was learned tonight that, following the successful completion of the campaign for nation-wide prohibition, the Anti-Saloon League leaders will initiate a movement for world-wide prohibition.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Several State Assemblies now in session are expected to take action tomorrow, on the prohibition amendment, with a probable race by Nebraska, Missouri, and Minnesota as to which shall be the thirty-sixth on the list.

The ratification completed today by the Legislatures of Iowa, Colorado, Oregon, New Hampshire, and Utah make a total of twelve States in two days. Of the thirty-five States that have taken action, only fourteen have certified their action to the Federal State Department. They are Virginia, Kentucky, North Dakota, South Carolina, Maryland, South Dakota, Texas, Montana, Delaware, Massachusetts, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, and Michigan.

States Ratifying Yesterday.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 15.—The Legislature ratified the Federal prohibition amendment today, making this the thirty-first State to approve it.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 15.—By a vote of 29 to 1 the Senate of the Colorado Legislature today adopted the concurrent House prohibition resolution, thereby ratifying the national prohibition amendment. The House adopted the resolution last week.

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 15.—The Legislature completed ratification of the national prohibition amendment today when the Senate, by a unanimous vote, adopted the amendment. The House ratified the amendment last night, 53 to 3.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 15.—Ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment was completed today when the Senate, 19 to 4, voted in favor of the resolution embodying it. The House passed the resolution earlier in the day, 221 to 121.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Jan. 15.—The State Senate today ratified the prohibition amendment to the National Constitution, making the thirty-fifth State. The vote was unanimous. The House ratified the amendment yesterday.

Nebraska All But Unanimous.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 15.—The Nebraska Legislature, with only one adverse vote, is for ratifying the national prohibition amendment. Recently the Senate approved the amendment, with one member voting no. Today the House passed its own amendment bill by a vote of 96 to nothing. Then it took up the Senate bill, which it amended slightly. Tomorrow this amended bill will be passed by the House and go back to the Senate. The House wants the Senate to adopt the House bill, believing it nearer proof against attack than the Senate bill.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 15.—The Wisconsin vote today secured a postponement of the final vote on prohibition ratification until Friday. The Senate voted ratification, 19 to 11, but the vote in the lower house prevented immediate action. It takes a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules, and the vote for immediate action was 57 to 37. The Speaker then set Friday as the time for the vote. It is sure to pass at that time, but Wisconsin will not be one of the original thirty-six States to vote for the amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 15.—Governor-elect William C. Sprout made ratification of the prohibition amendment one of his platform pledges, and he will work for its adoption. The Legislature will reconvene Monday evening. The Dry Federation of Pennsylvania claims a majority of the members of both houses as dry. In all probability the Legislature will adopt the resolution

HOW THE STATES LINE UP.

States That Have Ratified Have Population of 69,000,000.

The following table gives the facts as to the order in which thirty-five States have ratified the prohibition amendment and the status of the liquor question in the thirteen States that have not yet ratified it. The population figures for the two groups are from Census Bureau estimates for 1918. The totals show more than 69,000,000 population in the States voting to ratify, and 35,000,000 in those that have not taken action:

TELLS OF HORRORS SEEN IN BELGIUM

Squires's Account Offsets von Mach's Defense of Germans Before Senate Committee.

PURPOSE IN ATROCITIES

Cities Razed, People Subjected to Indescribable Cruelties, to Destroy Nation's Morale.

CRUCIFIXION OF BABIES

Evidence of That and Other Unspeakable Crimes Obtained from Those Who Suffered.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—A story of German atrocities in Belgium was told today to the Senate Committee on Propaganda by Grant Squires, a New York lawyer, one of the pioneers in Belgian relief work and now an officer of the Military Intelligence Service. He told the story apparently with reluctance. Senator Nelson brought out this testimony, apparently to offset that of Edmund von Mach on the same subject.

"I entered Belgium in November, 1914, and helped in the organization of the Relief Committee in Liége, Namur, Charleroi, Mons, Louvain, and one or two smaller towns," said Mr. Squires.

"I saw cities leveled to the ground, civilian populations driven out of their homes with the butts of rifles, old men and women brained because they did not work fast enough to suit their new masters in the baking of bread. I saw places where babies were crucified on the doors of houses. I saw bread lines.

"I have seen mothers bring to me their babies to give them food, which I could not give them, because it was not possible to carry it around in quantities to feed a thousand or two thousand in a town. I have seen the insults of the German soldiery, mostly drunkards, visited on women whom they met in the streets."

Seizure of Food Supplies.

Senator Wolcott—Did you see whether the German armies took food that belonged to the civil population and used it for themselves?

Mr. Squires—I did not see that. I understand at one stage in the occupation of the country they were rather careful to give tickets to those from whom they took food, so that within a few days those same people could go to the German commissariat and get there an equivalent of what had been taken from them.

Senator Wolcott—Do you know whether they ever got any food on those tickets?

Mr. Squires—I do not. I do not think the Belgian population ever sought to redeem any German promise made in that way. They were a cowed, terrorized people. Their only hope was to be permitted to live. You can picture any town in which you have ever been as being leveled to within about four feet of the ground, which was the condition of many of the cities that I visited. People who had homes there ran up the alleyways, after their homes had been destroyed, whenever any one in uniform came along. They would hardly under those circumstances enter into negotiations with them to redeem the tickets.

Senator Wolcott—Were these villages destroyed by bombardment or ruthlessly and deliberately to terrorize the population?

Mr. Squires—Ruthlessly and deliberately, largely with fire grenades charged with explosives and fire-igniting substances.

Senator Overman—Where did these people live? In the cellars of their houses after they were destroyed?

Mr. Squires—Yes, or out in the open; it was the rainy season when I was there. I frequently was accosted by little children of 4, 5, or 6, borne in the arms of little people 10 or 12 years of age, asking for two sous with which to buy a loaf of bread.

Two Aged Men from Vizet.

"In one town I was able to take a small deal table, where we gathered thirty or forty of the victims, and gave them soup or bread. On one occasion I went into a place where refugees were being fed on bread and soup. There were two gentlemen there, advanced in years, and who sat at the table with nothing on but trousers. I said to one of them, 'Where are you from?' and he said: 'I am from Vizet,'—the first town in Belgium after you leave the fourth frontier that had not been completely demolished. 'Until the war broke out there were 6,000 people there; now there was none left at all.

"To the old gentleman who had said, 'I came from Vizet,' I said: 'How old are you?' and he replied: 'I am 72.' I said: 'That old gentleman next to you—who is he?' He replied: 'He is my father; he is 91.'

"Their feet were bare, and they were given socks, which, without waiting to finish their food, they drew on; the penetrating cold was very searching, even to those better clothed. They were feeding in the open; there was no shelter for them."

Senator Nelson—Go ahead. Have you anything more to tell?

Mr. Squires—It is not a case of anything more, Senator. It is a case of trying to forget it.

As to the organization of relief, as soon as I entered a town I went, say, to the proprietor of a hotel that might be still remaining, took him into a car that I had commandeered on the frontier, and induced him to take me to the homes of a half dozen leading citizens. These I got into some one place and asked them to organize a committee to receive any shipments of American food that might be sent to them, so that the food should not be wasted."

German Officers Not Guiltless.

Senator Overman—In regard to ill-treatment of women, was that done in the presence of German officers, or by drunken soldiers who were skylarking?

Mr. Squires—It was mostly the work of private soldiers. I do not think the German officers were quite guiltless. At the doors of houses I have heard the shrieks of women upstairs recovering from their treatment of the night before. They knew no difference between a German and a man from some other country, and for that reason were afraid to open the door to give me something to eat. It was mostly a case of trying to pacify these people, in view of the treatment they had received, and to let them feel that better days were coming, in the way of food at least. It is not a pretty picture to be called on to redraw, and I had hoped that I would not be asked to do it. The mistake that I made was to come back here.

Senator Overman—I suppose Senator Nelson asked you those questions because of a statement that was made here.

Senator Nelson—I asked you these questions to meet the imputation of von Mach, who appeared here as a witness the other day, and who insinuated in one form or another that the treatment of the Belgian people by the German soldiers in 1914 was not worse than our soldiers had treated the people of the South in Sherman's march to the sea; and he also referred, I think, to the Philippine Islands.

Mr. Squires—They did not go through the country according to any practice of similar warfares in the past that I know anything about.

Senator Nelson—They destroyed these villages absolutely—ruined them?

Mr. Squires—Yes, Senator, for the purpose of the terrorization of the people, to reduce their morale and their ability to withstand the advance of the German armies.

Senator Nelson—And they crucified children.

Crucifixion of Children.

Mr. Squires—I have had places pointed out to me by fathers who had been crazed by the sight of their children hanging on door bells the night before. One man took me up to a door and showed me the nail points in the door where his little baby had been nailed the night before because the baby got in the way of the German guard of four or five men and in some way hindered their passage; one of the men snatched up the baby and held it up against the door, probably in their drunkenness, nailed it up against the door, and it was dead in five minutes, I suppose.

Senator King—You did not see the child?

Mr. Squires—No. The child was not permitted to remain there more than a minute of two after the soldiers went on. I know it is very difficult to believe these stories, gentlemen, and that is one reason why I hesitate to tell them—because I am met by the perfectly respectful questioning attitude of Senator King—if that is your name, Sir; but I have seen all that I have told you myself.

Senator Nelson—Are there many of those towns and villages in Belgium that have been razed to the ground?

Mr. Squires—Not so many completely razed. Many of them have been partially razed, notably Louvain. Louvain was destroyed to a degree for an offense committed, I am told, by the daughter of the Mayor of the city, who was entertaining the first incoming general officers of the German Army that were occupying Louvain. I verified this as far as possible when the events were only a few days old by speaking with some who were present.

It seems the incoming Generals were being entertained by the Burgomaster in his home. He called upon his daughter to bring in some cigars and light wine for the guests. While she was bringing in the cigars and wine one of the officers offered her an insult, which she did not note at the time or make any refernce to, but during the evening word of it came to the brother of the young woman, whereupon, with less consideration than he should have had for his father's guest, he went in and ano, the man dead in the presence of the other German officers. Whereupon they left the office of the Mayor, and the next day the section of the town where the Mayor's office was, and where the family resided, was burned—about one-third of the city, including the university and the Town Hall. The handsome section of Louvain was destroyed that day. There has been no other explanation given for the destruction; it was the penalty for the offense committed against those visiting German officers."

Senator Thomas of Colorado appeared before the committee in defenseof Colonel I. N. Stevens and Alva Swain of The Pueblo Chieftain, which paper, according to the testimony of Austin G. Smith, its former advertising and circulation manager, entered into a contract in 1915 with Ambassador von Bernstorff to aid the German cause in the Rocky Mountain States. Senator Thomas said Colonel Stevens and Mr. Swain were Republicans, warm personal friends of his, and among the most prominent citizens of Colorado. He said that in his opinion they were the victims of a scheme to blackmail and were entirely innocent of the charges made by Mr. Smith.

Excerpts from various Chieftain editorials also went into the record.

The hearing will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMAN TO BE CHOSEN FEB. 26

President Said to Favor Cummings—Plans for National Campaign to be Pushed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Formal announcement of the resignation of Vance C. McCormick as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee was made at Democratic National Headquarters today, but no official confirmation was forthcoming from the White House or the State Department regarding the reelection of William G. Sharp as American Ambassador to Paris. It can be stated, however, despite the absence of an official announcement, that Mr. Sharp's resignation has been submitted to the President.

Mr. McCormick has called a meeting of the Democratic National Committee to be held at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, on Feb. 26, to receive the resignation of the Chairman and elect his successor and transact other business which may be laid before the committee. The text of the resignation of Chairman McCormick, dated Dec. 28, 1918, prior to his departure for France, was made public today by Carter Glass, the present Secretary of the Treasury, in his capacity as Secretary of the Democratic National Committee.

The letter reads in part as follows:

"It is with regret that I am compelled to take this action, as I had hoped upon the conclusion of the war to be able to again resume active control of the committee's affairs, but this I find now impossible to do, and as it is most important that the organization work of the committee should be vigorously prosecuted I feel, in justice to the committee, that I should take this step.

"I want to take this opportunity of expressing to you my deep appreciation for the hearty co-operation which you have always accorded me since I assumed the Chairmanship in the campaign of 1916. It is with the deepest regret that I am compelled to sever a relationship which has been full of many delightful associations."

There is every indication that when the National Committee meets it will name Homer S. Cummings, now Vice Chairman of the committee, as its Chairman in succession to McCormick.

It is realized by Democratic leaders that with the passing of control of Congress by the Democratic Party on March 4, and with the Republicans attempting to make a fight against the National Administration after that date, great activity must be displayed in arranging for the next national campaign.

read by Mr. Heney one of the attorneys wrote that there were but three courses open to the packers:

1. To kill the Borland resolution in the House.
2. To obtain a hand-picked committee that would smother it.
3. To divert the investigation of the packers to the Bureau of Markets.

The attorneys advised, Mr. Heney said, that the Bureau of Markets need not be feared, as any investigation which it might make would be largely perfunctory.

Mr. Heney went on to say that, while the resolution was still pending, a rider to the 1917 Appropriation bill was offered in the House providing that the packers' investigation go to the Bureau of Markets. After it had been accepted by the House, Mr. Heney said, Representative Mann and Representative Carlin of Virginia hugged each other, as they stood before the Speaker's desk, and clapped each other on the back.

Mr. Heney read a letter from Colon N. Livingston, Vice President of a Washington bank and an accredited lobbyist for the packers at the Capitol, in which Livingston said that they had Representative Carlin "lined up" against the Borland resolution and knew how he would "stand."

The committee was told by Mr. Heney that, while he was a Jeffersonian Democrat, and had been opposed to the principle of Government ownership, he felt that, in view of what he had learned of the Chicago packers, Government ownership of everything but the packing houses themselves was essential. The packers, he said, had obtained an appreciable hold upon the food market everywhere throughout the country. He spoke of their buying interests in hotels so as to insure their own product being used. Armour & Co., he said, owned a $250,000 interest in the Biltmore Hotel in New York and an interest in the Washington Hotel here.

LABOR ADVOCATES DRASTIC POLICIES

Federation Report to Senate Committee for Federal Ownership or Control.

SAYS WAGES MUST STAND

Land Taxes, Immigration Bars, and Reversing of Supreme Court Decisions Included.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Comprehensive legislation looking to the adjustment of after-war economic and industrial problems is urged by the American Federation of Labor in a report submitted today to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, which is conducting an inquiry upon which reconstruction legislation may be based.

The Federation insists, as one of the fundamentals of future betterment, that labor's wage scale be maintained at the existing war standard, although no legislation is suggested as to wages.

"There must be no reduction of wages," says the report. "In many instances wages must be increased. There is no such thing as good wages when the cost of living in decency and comfort equals or exceeds the wages received. The American standard of life must be maintained and improved."

Eighteen suggestions, embodying legislation the Federation of Labor considers vital to the problem of readjustment, are made in the report. They are:

I. To make it a criminal offense for any employer to interfere with or hamper the right of workers to organize into trade unions or to interfere with legitimate activities of trade unions.

2. To put an immediate end to the exploitation of children under 16 years of age.

3. To provide that in the event of a Supreme Court declaring a law unconstitutional, either of Congress or of a State, if the people acting either directly or through Congress or a State Legislature should reenact the measure, it shall then become the law, without being subject to annulment by any court.

4. To put public and semi-public utilities either under Government ownership or Government control.

5. To apply a graduated tax on all usable agricultural lands above the acreage cultivated by the owner, so as to prevent private ownership of very large tracts of usable land, and to prevent as far as possible the extension of the tenant class.

Licensing of Corporations.

6. To limit, define and regulate the powers, privileges, and activities of corporations so that their methods cannot become detrimental to the American people. All corporations organized for profit should be subject to a Federal license.

7. To amend workmen's compensation laws so as to make them more adequate. State insurance must supplant employers' liability insurance operated for profit.

8. To prohibit immigration into the United States for a period of two years after the proclamation of peace.

9. To provide for a progressive increase in taxes on incomes, inheritances and upon land values, of such a nature as to render it unprofitable to hold land without putting it to use. Taxation should rest as lightly as possible on constructive enterprise.

10. To provide for Government exercise of advisory supervision over public education, and, when necessary, maintain adequate public education through subsidies without giving the Government power to hamper development of public education by the States.

11. To prohibit the operation of private employment agencies for profit.

12. To provide for a small standing army and voluntary State militia.

13. To provide for the free transportation of discharged soldiers and sailors to their homes, and the continuance of their monthly salaries for not to exceed twelve months, if employment is not secured within that period.

14. To project Government development of waterways, including canals, so as to decrease the cost of freight transportation.

15. To have the Government utilize water power of public waterways and sell power to consumers at rates based upon actual cost.

16. To invest Government ownership of all wharves and docks connected with public harbors and used for commercial purposes.

17. To provide Government supervision of the public educational system, the Government to maintain, where necessary, adequate educational facilities in States or communities.

18. To inaugurate a plan by which the Government may build model homes for workers, and to establish a system of credits by which workers may build their own homes.

Keeping Out of Politics.

The federation's report, dwelling upon thepolicy of the federation in keeping aloof from politics, states:

"The disastrous experience of labor in America with political parties of its own amply justified the American Federation of labor's nonpartisan political policy. Tradeunion activities cannot receive the undivided attention of members and officers if the exigencies, burdens, and responsibilities of a political party are bound up with their economic and industrial organizations."

Taking up hours of labor, the report says:

"The shorter work day and a shorter work week make for a constantly growing higher and better standard of productivity, health, longevity, morals, and citizenship. The right of labor to fix its hours of work must not be abrogated, abridged, or interfered with.

"The day's working time should be limited to not more than eight hours, with overtime prohibited, except in the most extraordinary emergencies. The week's working time should be limited to not more than five and one-half days."

Equal pay for women for the same character of work as men perform is advocated, but the federation urges that women not be put at work "disproportionate to their physical strength."

Regarding corporation control, the report says that "Federal supervision and control should include the increasing of capital stock and the incurring of bonded indebtedness with the provision that the books of all corporations shall be open at all times to Federal examiners."

The Federation of Labor opposes militarism as a system fostered and developed by tyrants in the hope of supporting their arbitrary authority." For that reason it opposes a large standing army.

"During industrial disputes the militia has at times been called upon to support the authority of those who through selfish interests desired to enforce martial law while the courts were open and the civil authorities competent to maintain supremacy of civil law," the report says. "We insist that the militia of our several States should be wholly organized and controlled by democratic principles so that this voluntary force of soldery may never be diverted from its true purpose and used to jeopardize or infringe upon the rights and liberties of our people."

For Government Ownership.

As to the railroads and transportation, the Federation report says:

"Whatever final disposition shall be made of the railways of the country in ownership, management or regulation, we insist upon the right of the workers to organize for their common and mutual protection and the full exercise of the normal activities which come with organization.

"The Government should own and operate all wharves and docks connected with public harbors, which are used for commerce or transportation.

"The American merchant marine should be encouraged and developed under governmental control and so manned as to insure successful operation and protect in full the beneficent laws now on the statute books for the rights and welfare of seamen. The seamen must be accorded the same rights and privileges rightfully exercised by the workers in all other employments, public and private."

MANUFACTURERS FIGHT MISS PERKINS

Insist on Representation on Industrial Board—Labor Also Against Her.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Vigorous protest against Governor Smith's nomination of Miss Frances Perkins of Manhattan to be a member of the Industrial Commission was made today to J. Henry Walters, President pro tem of the Senate, by the manufacturers of the State, through their organization known as the Associated Manufacturers and Merchants. Similar protest probably will be made by the labor people when the State Federation of Labor meets here tomorrow.

The manufacturers as well as the laborites will make a determined fight to have the Senate refuse to confirm the new nominee. The manufacturers protest that they will have no representation on the commission if Miss Perkins succeeds Louis Wisard, who is a manufacturer, while the labor people take the ground that Miss Perkins does not represent their interests and is not the right person to interpret the compensation and other labor problems sure to come before the commission.

Faced with the certainty of a bitter fight against the confirmation of his selection, Governor Smith today defied the manufacturers and declared that he would not reconsider the nomination.

WADSWORTH STILL AGAINST SUFFRAGE

Asserts He Cannot Surrender His Convictions Despite Request of Albany Legislature.

WAS URGED TO VOTE FOR IT

Women Leaders at Capital Now Believe They Can Win with Favorable Vote by Senator Moses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The action of the New York Legislature today in adopting a resolution calling upon Senators Calder and Wadsworth to vote for the Federal suffrage amendment failed to change the situation so far as they are concerned individually.

Senator Calder, who voted for the woman suffrage amendment when the test vote was last taken in the Senate on Oct. 1 last, said tonight:

"I bow to the will of the State Legislature and will vote for the amendment when it comes up again just as I voted for it before."

Senator Wadsworth, who has been a staunch opponent of woman suffrage, and whose wife is a very active worker in the National Anti-Suffrage organization, said tonight that he would not change his vote.

"I have the greatest respect for the legislature of the State of New York," said Senator Wadsworth, "but my vote against the amendment last October represented my convictions and I cannot surrender my convictions in this matter."

The situation facing the suffrage amendment is one in which only two votes are needed for its ratification, and unless these votes are obtained in the forty-eight days elapsing between now and March 4 suffrage cannot be attached by amendment to the Federal Constitution for three years, because even if the amendment is adopted after March 4 it will be three years before enough Legislatures will meet to enable the suffragists to obtain the support of the necessary thirty-six States for making the amendment valid as part of the Constitution.

The suffrage leaders insist that if the vote is taken in the Senate now they would be only one shy, even if Senators Wadsworth of New York and Moses of New Hampshire, both Republicans, should vote against the resolution. When the vote was taken last October the Senate divided this way:

For the Resolution—54 Senators.
Against It—30 Senators.
Paired—12 Senators.
Total—96 Senators.

There were 84 Senators voting and 56 constituted the necessary two-thirds vote.

After the vote was taken Senator Jones of New Mexico, who had charge of the bill, changed his vote from the affirmative to the negative, making the vote as actually recorded fifty-three for and thirty-one against. But this change of vote by Senator Jones was merely technical. Under the rules, in order to be able to move a reconsideration, a Senator must have voted in the negative and, in order to be in position at some convenient date before March 4 to seek another vote on the measure, Senator Jones changed his vote to the negative.

Since the vote was last taken there have been two changes in the Senate that might in any way change the poll. Drew of New Hampshire, who for a few weeks served by appointment in the Senate in place of the late Senator Gallinger, voted against the resolution in October. He has been succeeded by Senator Moses, upon whom the suffragists have been laboring hard in an effort to swing his vote on the affirmative side of the tally. Senator Benett of South Carolina, who was a bitter opponent of suffrage, has been succeeded by Senator Pollock, who, the suffragists claim, is ready to vote for the amendment.

Should Senator Pollock vote the way the suffragist leaders say they feel sure he will, if the opportunity for voting comes, the vote would stand 55 to 26, or one shy the necessary two-thirds, provided both Wadsworth and Moses voted negative.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The New York Assembly, without opposition, adopted today the Graves-McNab resolution, which would request the State's representatives in the United States Senate to vote and work for the passage of the Federal suffrage amendment. The resolution was adopted by the Senate yesterday and now will be transmitted to Senators Wadsworth and Calder.

This comprises a fleet of 1,882 vessels of various tonnage built in the shipyards of the United States during the year 1918.

Within a comparatively short time a large number of these vessels will be released for commercial use. Thus the facilities for foreign trade, together with a radical decrease in freight tonnage rates, will greatly enhance the opportunities for American business abroad.

The Citizens National Bank maintains a fully equipped foreign department affording every facility for the promotion of American business interests in foreign fields.

We Sell Dependable Merchandise at Prices Lower Than Any Other Store, but for Cash Only.

Store opens 9:00 A. M. and closes 5:30 P. M.

Ultimately It's Up to You

Mr. Curtis to pay more for Mrs. Curtis' purchases if you deal at stores where she has charge accounts, for tucked into the price you pay is an amount added to defray the cost of an expensive credit system.

Does Mrs. Curtis realize that she, too, is paying an increased amount for all merchandise bought on deferred payments? Why not tell her about our D. A.?

The Depositor's Account is the only charge system with a conscience. It's as simple as it is convenient.

The Depositors' Account is a private bank authorized by the Superintendent of Banking of the State of New York.

We pay 4% interest beginning the day of deposit, and there's another advantage, for our cash policy allows us to sell merchandise at least 6% less than other stores.

Just order your purchases charged against your account and monthly receive an itemized statement telling what we owe you, not what you owe us. You may withdraw your money in whole or part upon demand.

If you can pay your bills monthly you do not need credit. If you do not need credit why pay for it at credit houses in the price asked for the goods?

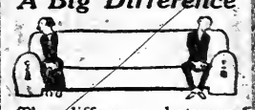
A Big Difference



The difference between re-covered and re-upholstered furniture is just the difference between solid worth and veneer. We hesitate to just re-cover but many times when we re-upholster an article it leaves our workrooms better than new.

For instance, we received a chair which had every outer indication of being a very high grade piece. When we opened it up we found but five springs and a filling of tow. This accounted for its losing shape so soon. We refitted it with twelve springs and a hair filling and returned it to a greatly satisfied customer.

Giving unusual satisfaction to our patrons is one thing our upholstery department is justly proud of, for during our years of service we have rarely received a complaint.

Our staff of skilled workmen has been with us for years and works under hygienic conditions in sunlit workrooms.

They will arrange draperies and wall coverings, make awnings, slip-covers or any kind of cushions. Our estimator will be glad to call and give quotations.

DECEIVED SOLDIERS IN HEARST PETITION

Signed Under Impression That Document Related to Their Pay.

AGENT PUT OUT OF HOSPITAL

Free Evening Journals Barred—Independent Citizens' Welcome Plan Grows.

One method of obtaining signatures of wounded soldiers in support of Mayor Hylan's appointment of William R. Hearst to the Mayor's Committee to welcome returning troops was revealed yesterday at Debarkation Hospital No. 5 in Grand Central Palace.

According to the officers, a man got into the hospital on some pretext, and was found soliciting the signatures of the patients, especially those who were least able to read, and informing them that the main purpose of the petition was to obtain for the men six months' pay upon their discharge. After being informed of the deception, and finding that the paper they had hastily signed had nothing to do with pay, but was simply laudatory of Mr. Hearst, the men became indignant, the officers say, and were ready to throw the solicitor out.

The letter, which was similar to one made public on Monday by the Mayor, in a refutation of the charge that the soldiers were opposed to the appointment of Hearst, speaks of the appointment being a proper recognition of his interest in the welfare of the soldiers, and declares that "our heroes have no greater champion, no more sincere and patriotic friend than Mr. Hearst," and goes on to say that "the appointment of Mr. Hearst is taken advantage of not so much to criticise you as to afford occasion and opportunity for the advocates and beneficiaries of special privilege to attack a man who has been unswerving in his devotion to the cause and the liberties of the exploited public."

Nurse Discovered Deception.

The officers say a stranger was discovered circulating among the men with the petition in his hand yesterday and telling them what great advantages would come to them if the petition were granted. After several had signed it without reading it, a nurse told them that the paper was in praise of Hearst, "who was not their friend." The men then decided to read the petition, and after doing so became indignant.

The officers vouch for the fact that if the stranger had not been ejected summarily and the petition taken away from him the men themselves would have handled him in no gentle manner. Those who showed their feelings unmistakably were John J. O'Neill, 103th Machine Gun Battalion; Houghton Keen of the 119th Infantry, and Lester Joyner of the 118th Infantry.

The officers also told yesterday of several attempts made recently to distribute The Evening Journal among the patients. On Monday a man went to the Red Cross Field Director with an offer to distribute evening papers free to the men. It was supposed that the offer included all the papers, and was, of course, accepted. When they arrived they proved to be a bundle of 500 copies of The Evening Journal.

The Director had them removed immediately, and informed the representative that they would not be accepted in future. Without the knowledge of the Red Cross Director, the Hearst agent then approached Army Chaplain E. Ashley Gerhard, with what result is told in the following letter:

Chaplain Gerhard's Letter.

Debarkation Hospital No. 5,
January 15, 1919.

The Circulation Department,
New York Evening Journal,
238 William Street, City.

Sirs: Yesterday a man came into my office with an offer to distribute free of charge Metropolitan newspapers each day to the wounded men in this institution. I told him, in the course of my conversation with him, that I would be willing to attend to the distribution of these papers in the event of his sending them in, but that I would be unable to permit him or his agent to come in with them.

Today I learn that the newspapers he was referring to, but which he did not mention by name in his conversation with me, were copies of the New York Evening Journal. I am writing to inform you that I am unwilling, in view of this further information that has come to me regarding the intentions of this man, who, I presume, represented you, to allow the distribution of these papers in this hospital. In view of the attitude of the management of the New York Evening Journal, expressed in your editorials and news columns and revealed in the recent investigations by a Congressional Committee, I cannot reconcile my position as Chaplain in this institution with participation in the dissemination of the ideas which you have so frequently and frankly given expression to.

My position here has very directly to do with the loyalty maintained by the patients in this hospital toward their country and with the encouragement of their admiration of those countries which are allied with us in promoting the cause of behalf of which the war has been fought. It is clear to me that my duty here cannot be reconciled with compliance to the request made of me yesterday.

I shall be grateful if you will attend to the immediate termination of our arrangement for the distribution of your papers in this place. Very truly yours,

E. ASHLEY GERHARD,
Chaplain, U. S. A. M. C.

Commenting on the movement begun in the West to have Congress discontinue using New York as a port of debarkation, because Hearst is a member of the Mayor's Committee to Welcome Homecoming Troops, Richard M. Hurd, Chairman of the Arrangements Committee of the Citizens' Welcome Committee, said yesterday:

"Strong national support has come to the uprising of citizens which crystallized in the Independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome for returning troops from the action of the Western States. The action of the Legislature of South Dakota in memorializing Congress to prohibit returning troops from landing at the port of New York because the special committee on welcome of the Mayor's Committee is headed by William Randolph Hearst is now being followed up by telegrams to the Governors of Texas, California, Washington, and many other States requesting them to have the Legislatures of their States also appeal to Congress to have returning troops land at some other port. In other words, the feeling against Mr. Hearst is national and not local.

"It is believed that when the Western States learn that a large representative and independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome is organized, of which Mr. Hearst is not a member, that their objections to the use of New York as a port of debarkation will be removed. It is unnecessary to point out how grave an injury would be inflicted upon all stores, restaurants, hotels, theatres, movies, &c., should our heroes, coming from France, not be permitted to pass through New York, in addition to which these men have many friends in New York who desire to see them, and it would be an intolerable stigma if New York should be ruled off the map as unworthy to greet returning heroes because of the presence on the Mayor's Committee of Mr. Hearst."

"All soldiers, sailors, and marines are cordially invited to attend the mass meeting with their friends in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, and reserved seats may be obtained at the office of the American Defense Society, 44 East Twenty-third Street. Men in uniform will be admitted and given reserved seats when the doors open at 7:15. Among the speakers will be the Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, Montagu Donner, President of the Finland Constitutional League; James M. Beck, the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, and Father Barnard Clifford."

The Citizens' Committee of Welcome has received many letters from various organizations expressing their willingness to take part in the citizens' welcome. The Société des Beaux Arts wrote: "It will be an honor to have our society participate in the plan to welcome our men on their return. Only true Americans should be permitted to extend their gratitude to these brave men."

The Iowa New Yorkers wrote: "A committee from our organization has been appointed to work with the Independent Citizens' Committee of New York. We shall be glad, indeed, to help."

The National American Woman Suffrage Association, Carrie Chapman Catt, President: "I will personally give my name to the General Committee of the Citizens' Committee of Welcome to the home-coming soldiers. My organization is also glad to join."

Club to Welcome Wyoming Men.

What promises to become a nation-wide movement for the adequate reception in New York City of the soldiers of other States, especially those of the West, was accelerated yesterday by the receipt of a telegram from the Governor of Wyoming, pledging his co-operation and that of the Legislature of his State in having the Rocky Mountain Club designated the representative of the State in welcoming the boys. Governor Stewart of Montana wired on Tuesday, appointing the club as his official representative here, and saying he felt sure the Legislature would back him up with a substantial appropriation. Francis S. Benge of 44 Wall Street, and Edwin O. Holter of 60 Broadway, who is already a member of the Independent Citizens' Committee, expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the movement.

When asked for the plans of the club the Secretary said last night that he was not in a position to make a statement until more of the Governors and the Legislatures have responded, but that it was natural that the boys of the States which provided funds would be taken care of by the club. "Judging by past performances of the club," he said, "they can depend upon a welcome that will do justice to the service they have rendered the country. Taking the cue Case (J. I.) Co.....7 Jan. 28 Jan. 18 from Governor Stewart's action, a telegram has been sent to the Governor of each of the Western States placing the club at the command of the State if the State wishes to officially designate it as its representative to welcome the boys from the State landing in New York.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 12, 1919.

Mr. Herbert Wall, Secretary, Rocky Mountain Club, New York:

Our Legislature met Tuesday, and I will recommend to them that funds be provided immediately so that returning Wyoming soldiers can be welcomed on arrival by citizens of this State. Appreciate the offer of your club in this matter, and if Legislature carries out my request, which I think it will, we can co-operate with the other Western States through your club in providing entertainment for these men. As soon as action is taken by the Legislature will advise you.

ROBERT D. CAREY, Governor.

BARS HEARST PUBLICATIONS.

Montclair, N. J., Club Directors Take Action at Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Jan. 15. — All Hearst publications are barred from the Montclair Club in Church Street, near the town centre. It has a membership of upward of 300, most of them New York business men. The action against the Hearst papers was taken at a meeting of the Board of Directors last night, and the prohibitive resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote. The resolution reads:

"Resolved, That the Montclair Club, Inc., shall not subscribe to any Hearst publications, and that no Hearst publications are to be allowed to appear on the tables in the library or reading room."

ONLY SEVEN EAGLE BOATS.

Taylor Says Other Contracts Besides Ford's Were Delayed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Despite the best efforts of shipbuilders holding navy contracts, none was able to meet building speed estimates during the last year, Rear Admiral Taylor, Chief of the Bureau of Construction, told the Senate Naval Committee today at its investigation of contractsf for Eagle submarine chasers.

The Eagle boats, he said, were not built as fast as promised, but added that delay by builders was general.

While forty-three Eagle boats were to be delivered before the closing of navigation on the Great Lakes, the navy received only seven, and had bad luck with three of them, he said.

The Admiral explained that of sixty boats to be built, fourteen had been completed and twenty-one were on the ways.

Senator Lodge, who proposed the investigation, suggested that contracts for the remaining twenty-five be canceled.

Admiral Taylor presented official reports to deny published statements that the first Eagle boats launched leaked and had to be laid up for repairs.

Rear Admiral Earle said that if the Eagle boats had not been ordered he would not favor awarding a contract now. Rear Admiral Griffin, Chief of the Engineering Bureau, said he would not approve construction of this type of vessel in peace times.

EXPECTS END TODAY OF THE MILK STRIKE

Dowling Predicts a Compromise and Lower Prices Ultimately for Consumers.

SUPPLY HERE INCREASES

John Doe Inquiry in Magistrate McAdoo's Court Will Be Continued by Dooling.

The final effort of Gov. Smith's Milk Commission to settle the milk strike, which has entered into its third week, will be made this afternoon in the office of the Chairman, Robert E. Dowling, 165 Broadway. The commission was in session yesterday afternoon for nearly three hours, and Chairman Dowling said that at one time it appeared that an agreement would be reached, but the representatives of the producers and distributers felt that they should go back to their respective bodies for further instructions before any definite action was taken.

Chairman Dowling said that any settlement of the controversy would involve concessions on both sides. "In other words, it will be a compromise," he said. Mr. Dowling said he believed that at the meeting today a settlement would be effected that would be satisfactory to the consumer. He announced that there would be a decrease in the price of milk to the New York consumer in February and March and no increase in price during the remainder of January, as the situation now appeared.

While the Milk Commission is making an effort to settle the controversy, New York's milk supply is gradually moving toward the normal supply, receipts yesterday, according to the Health Department, being 1,469,044 quarts, which is the largest amount received any day since the dairymen's strike was declared.

Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling said yesterday that he would resume the John Doe milk inquiry before Chief Magistrate William McAdoo this morning and that the hearing would continue irrespective of whether or not an agreement was reached between milk producers and distributers. In its bulletin issued yesterday, the Dairymen's League announces that a campaign was started yesterday to raise $10,000,000 in ten days with which to buy enough country plants to care for all league milk.

PACKERS IN GROCERS' TRADE

Association Hears of New Wholesale Competitive Factor.

The thirty-first annual convention of the New York State Wholesale Grocers' Association ended last night with a dinner at the Hotel McAlpin. Mr. Philip C. Staib presided.

Governor Edge of New Jersey was the principal speaker. Other speakers were George E. Roberts, assistant to the President of the National City Bank, and the Hon. Mark L. Requa, Director of the Oil Division of the United States Fuel Administration. These officers were elected for the coming year: Edward Crumpson, President; E. S. Truesdell, R. T. Reynolds, and Arthur P. Williams, Vice Presidents; Howard T. Sills, Treasurer, and H. M. Foster, Secretary.

At the morning and afternoon sessions of the association the chief topic of discussion was the formidable competition by the meat packers in the wholesale grocers' trade. "This condition," said Edward Crumpson of Buffalo, Vice President of the association, "is one of the largest problems which the grocers will have to cope with. Besides owning and operating food-canning factories, grape juice bottling works, and various factories closely connected with the packing industry, the meat packers are now entering the field of cereal production to a large extent. Recently they were the only dealers able to furnish rice to the trade."

Edward D. Anderson, operation branch, General Staff.

Samuel T. Ansell, Acting Judge Advocate General.

COLONELS.

W. K. Wilson, Chief of the War Department Cable Service.

Ira C. Welden, Chief of the Tank Corps.

Mr. Baker said the medal was awarded Mr. Felton for conspicuous service "in supervising the supply of railway material and the organization of railway operation and construction troops," which contributed materially to the success of the American Army in the field. The commendation of Mr. Thorne is for his services "in the reorganization of the service of supply, thereby enabling the heavy demands of the increased army to be met."

The Secretary's announcement emphasized that each of the officers mentioned both organized and administered the branch of the work of which he was in charge.

WANTS SO ABOLISH DRUG CONTROL BOARD

Governor Urges Legislature to Turn Duties Over to the Department of Health.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Governor Smith asked the Legislature today to immediately abolish the State Narcotic Drug Control Commission as an unnecessary bureau entailing unnecessary expense to the Governor suggested in a special message to the lawmakers, should be taken over by a bureau to be created in the State Department of Health.

The commission resulted from the Whitney act, passed by the 1918 Legislature after a series of hearings in New York City conducted by a legislative committee which investigated drug conditions. Ex-Governor Whitman named Dr. Frank Richardson of Cambridge head of the commission. Senator Whitney was named first deputy, and Mrs. John Francis Yawger of New York City third deputy. The second deputy remained unnamed.

Governor Smith, in his message, said that he is in sympathy with the purposes of the law and believes that the State should provide for the regulation and control of the sale of narcotic drugs.

"I am hoping that we will see our way clear to reduce the number of State departments now performing similar duties," declared the Governor. "The creation of new departments leads to additional expenditures not necessary. By the creation of a bureau in the Health Department, everything sought to be done by this new commission can be accomplished. Inspectors and other employes of the Health Department now performing similar duties can, at the same time, give their attention to the enforcement of the new law.

"I am looking forward to the day when some of the business of the State, how conducted by outside commissions, can be given to the elected constitutional officers of the State. For years we have all been saying that there are too many boards and commissions, but, nevertheless, we seem to go on continually creating new ones. Here is your opportunity to dispose of at least one of them and transfer the function to a well organized and highly developed agency of the Government—the State Department of Health."

Republicans here looked upon the Governor's suggestion as more or less of a political plan to reward ex-Senator Brackett for the position he took during the campaign last Fall, as well as to make more positions for the Democrats.

In appointing Senator Whitney as head of the Drug Control Commission Governor Whitman made it possible for the Senator to build up a political machine in Saratoga County, through the patronage which goes with the office, much to the discomforture of ex-Senator Brackett, the Republican leader of Saratoga. Brackett did not support Governor Whitman, but, on the contrary, is said to have done favors for Mr. Smith.

PLAN STATE INCOME TAX LAW.

Legislative Leaders Assert Loss of Revenue Tariffs Must Be Made Up.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—There is a good chance for the passage this year of a State income tax law, according to legislative leaders who have been considering the question of devising ways and means of meeting the deficit caused by the loss of revenue taxes. At the meeting of the State conference of Mayors here a committee was appointed to draft such a bill for presentation to the Legislature. Speaker Sweet of the Assembly believes the Legislature will pass the law before it adjourns.

"The only question to be decided," he said, "is the rate to be fixed and what else incomes should be exempted. The Mills committee concluded that it would not pay to collect a State income tax below $2,000. I believe that a flat rate on all incomes over $3,000 would realise sufficient funds to meet the State's requirements."

It has practically been decided by the legislative leaders to provide for increasing the tax on automobile licenses. At present the license cost is from $5 for a small runabout to $75 for the largest commercial auto trucks. The proposal is to increase the minimum tax to $10 and the maximum to $125.

New Yorkers Head "Land Army."

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—Despite the ending of the war, there will be no let-up in the movement to have women take more interest in farming, according to speakers before the Women's Land Army of America, which concluded its convention here today. Officers elected included: President—Mrs. William Adams Brown, New York; Vice Presidents—Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, New York; Mrs. William H. Schofield, New Hampshire; Treasurer—Mrs. Wendell T. Bush, New York.

BOY AIDS MME. LEBAUDY.

Messenger's Story Fails to Confirm Report of Premeditation.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 15.—Mme. Augustine Lebaudy's chance of escaping prosecution for the killing of her husband was increased today when District Attorney Weeks obtained through a detective the story of Mark Rosenfeld, a messenger boy of 123 East 110th Street, who accompanied Jacques Lebaudy from New York to "The Lodge" at Westbury on the night that he was shot.

It had been represented that Rosenfeld had said that he was ordered from the house by Mrs. Lebaudy just before she had shot her husband. District Attorney Weeks was interested in this account, as the story attributed to Rosenfeld was the only thing that indicated a possible plan on the part of Mrs. Lebaudy to kill her husband. When Rosenfeld was questioned today, he said that Mrs. Lebaudy had not spoken to him, and that he had fled from the house in fear of his life because Lebaudy was acting like a madman.

District Attorney Weeks began another investigation to make sure that the revolver found in the coat of Lebaudy after his death was there before he was killed. It had been represented to Mr. Weeks that there was a possibility that some one had placed the revolver in the pocket to clinch the case of self-defense for Mme. Lebaudy.

An application had been made to the District Attorney by the Columbia University Medical School for a chance to examine the brain of Lebaudy in the interests of science. The request will not be opposed by the District Attorney, but it may be held up until some one has been designated as the legal possessor of the body.

Don't trust soap and water

The breeze blows dust into your house and lodges disease-germs in the floor cracks. Muddy, wet shoes transfer germs from the street to the home. Germs get on your floors in many other ways.

Don't let them increase and multiply, and threaten the health and life of your family. Don't trust soap and water to kill germs.

Lysol Disinfectant

instantly annihilates all germ life. Begin at once the practice of using it in your scrubbing water.

Other germ-breeding places in the home are garbage can, sinks, drains, toilet, cuspidor and dark, damp, sunless corners.

The regular use of Lysol to disinfect these danger spots will keep them permanently germ-proof.

A 50c bottle makes 5 gallons of powerful disinfectant—enough to last for months. A 25c bottle makes two gallons.

Disinfect regularly with Lysol and you will make a better fight against disease than it can make against you.

Lysol Toilet Soap Contains Lysol, and therefore protects the skin from germ infection. It is refreshingly soothing and healing and helpful for improving the skin. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't it, ask him to order it for you.

Lysol Shaving Cream Contains Lysol, and kills germs on razor and shaving-brush (where germs abound), guards the tiny cuts from infection, and gives the antiseptic shave. If your dealer hasn't it, ask him to order a supply for you.

AGREE TO RESTORE 2-CENT LETTER RATE

Free Use of Mail for Forces Abroad Also Accepted by the Revenue Bill Conferees.

CHILD LABOR WILL BE TAXED

Senate Special License Imposts Also Go Through—Congress May Get Bill in Few Days.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Senate and House conferees completed their preliminary review of the proposed Revenue bill today by agreeing to restore the pre-war postage rates on first-class mail matter after July 1 next, and by adopting other Senate amendments to the original House bill, such as special license taxes, the Advisory Tax Board amendment fixing the number of members at five and the salary of each at $9,000, and the tax on the employment of child labor.

The agreement on postal rates will mean a return to the use of the two-cent stamp for letter postage and the one-cent postal card rate. The Senate amendment also provides that soldiers, sailors, and marines "in a foreign country, engaged in the present war," may have free use of the mails for the delivery of letters they write, under regulations to be promulgated by the Postmaster General. The question of second-class postal rates which vitally affect newspapers and periodicals was discussed, but it is understood that the adoption of the Senate amendment providing that the rate shall be one cent a pound for delivery within the first and second zones, (150 miles,) and 1½ cents a pound for all other zones, was blocked by Representative Kitchen.

By agreement on the child labor amendment of the Senate, the conferees placed a heavy Federal tax penalty on all industries employing children, a step which has been strongly advocated by persons who viewed with alarm the recent court decision concerning the control of the employment of minors. If the Revenue bill becomes a law, industries which employ children under certain stated ages will be called upon to pour into the Federal treasury 10 per cent. of the entire net profits received or accrued for the tax year for the sale or disposition of products, in addition to all other taxes imposed by law.

The Senate's special license tax amendments will substitute a licensing system, requiring definite payments of $10 and $20 for each passenger automobile, seven-passenger capacity and over, respectively, operated for profit; add to the tax burden of the pawnbroker, and make other readjustments from the original House bill.

Among the more important questions on which the conferees will now centre their attention are the second-class postal rates, the war and excess profits taxes, consolidated returns, the inheritance tax, depreciation deduction, and the definition of capital.

There were reports about the Capitol today that the conferees hoped to reach an agreement by the end of the week and have the report ready for submittal early next week. The general belief, however, was that the conference sessions would continue well into next week. The most hopeful indication of a reasonably early agreement is found in reports that both Senator Simmons and Representative Kitchin, Chairmen respectively of the Senate and House Ways and Means Committee, have promised Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass that the bill will be adopted by both branches of the legislative Government by Feb. 1.

In order to accomplish this it probably will be necessary for the conferees to complete their deliberations some time next week, as it is expected that at least two days will be required for its passage in the Senate and from three to five days in the House, especially if the Senate amendment to the second-class postal rates is adopted by a split vote in the conference and the fight is carried to the floor of the House by its opponents who wish to retain the higher rates in the new revenue law.

There is said to be considerable variance of opinion among the conferees as yet over the war and excess profits taxes as well as on the inheritance tax program and other important features of the proposed bill.

Many provisions under the heading "Special Taxes," Title X, are of wide public interest, as they affect numerous branches of business. Under the Senate amendment, brokers who are not members of a stock exchange will pay a tax of $40 instead of $100, as provided in the original House bill. The Senate made other changes in the original House schedule, and other taxes included in the schedule to which the conference agreed, "with minor changes" which, it is understood, dealt largely with phraseology, are as follows:

Brokers, members of exchange, board of trade or similar organizations whose seat or membership was $2,000 or more but not over $5,000, $100. If such value was more than $5,000, $150.

Pawn brokers, $100. If gross receipts for year ending June 30 were $2,000 or more but not over $5,000, $100 additional if more than $5,000, $150 additional. (The House bill did not contain the last two provisions.)

Ship brokers, $40.

Custom brokers, $40.

Theatres, museums, and concert halls: Seating capacity not exceeding 250, $50; over 250 and not exceeding 500, $100; over 500 and not exceeding 800, $150; over 800, $200. In towns of less than 5,000 population the tax is to be half of that fixed by the schedule.

Halls or armories rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical performances were exempted by the House bill. The Senate amendment adds to these exemptions edifices owned by religious, educational, or charitable institutions, societies or organizations where all the proceeds go to these institutions or are collected for the benefit of the military or naval forces of the United States.

Circuses are to pay a tax of $100, and other public exhibitions not covered in the provisions made $15, with the provision that no collection of shows such as State fairs shall be asked to pay a greater combined tax than $100.

Bowling alleys and pool and billiard parlors are to pay $10 for each table or bowling alley, and only tables and alleys in private homes are exempted from this tax. Clubs are included. Shooting galleries are taxed $20; riding academies, $100.

Persons operating or renting passenger automobiles for profit must under the Senate amendment pay a tax of $10 for each automobile with a capacity of not less than two nor more than seven, and $20 for each automobile with a seating capacity of more than seven. Other taxes of passenger automobiles proposed by the House draft of the Revenue bill are eliminated.

Special taxes imposed by the House bill on the tobacco trade with amendments by the Senate are as follows:

Manufacturers of tobacco—Annual sales not over 50,000 pounds, $6; from 50,000 to 100,000 pounds, $12; 100,000 to 200,000 pounds, $24; exceeding 200,000 pounds, $24, and an additional tax of 16 cents a thousand pounds on all sales in excess of 200,000 pounds.

Manufacturers of Cigars—Annual sales not over 50,000, $4; 50,000 to 100,000, $6; 100,000 to 200,000, $12; 200,000 to 400,000, $24; in excess of 400,000, $24, and an additional tax of 10 cents per thousand or fraction of the excess over 400,000.

Manufacturers of cigarettes, including small cigars weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, 6 cents per 10,000 cigarettes or fraction thereof.

Upon the use of all yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, motor boats, with fixed engines of over five gross tons, length not over 50 feet, $1 for each foot; length over 50 feet and not over 100 feet, $2 for each foot; length over 100 feet, $4 for each foot; motor boats not over five gross tons, with fixed engines, $10.

Swift & Company's 1918 Earnings

How They Affected You

During the twelve months ended Nov. 2, 1918 (its fiscal year), Swift & Company transacted the largest volume of business on the smallest margin of profit in its history.

Profits of the meat business—under regulations of the United States Food Administration—were limited to a maximum of 9 per cent on capital employed but not to exceed 2¼ cents per dollar of sales.

Swift & Company in the regulated departments earned 7.57 per cent on capital employed and 2.04 cents per dollar of sales, out of which had to be paid interest on borrowed money and taxes. Here is how these earnings affect you.

Live-Stock Raiser—

Swift & Company killed 14,948,000 head of livestock, which weighed alive, 4,971,500,000 pounds.

Swift & Company made a profit of only a fraction of a cent per pound liveweight.

Consumer—

The sales of our meat departments were 4,012,579,000 pounds on which our earnings were less than ½ cent per pound.

The per capita consumption of meat in the United States is given as 170 pounds. If a consumer purchased only Swift & Company's products, he would contribute only about 78 cents a year, or 1½ cents a week as profit to the company.

the interests of all with judicial impartiality.

Mr. Ransom replied that he feared the court was missing his point. The receiver, he said, should give proper consideration to all interests involved, but, since it was to be hoped that out of the receivership, would come a permanent and constructive re-organization that would benefit alike the owners of the property and the general public, the city should be represented in the receivership, because the city was the best qualified to advise in the determination of the great future transit policy of the Borough of Brooklyn.

At the conclusion of Mr. Ransom's argument, the court announced that he would hear the Corporation Counsel. Mr. Burr's argument was in the form of a long affidavit from which he read. The affidavit had been prepared and printed and was ready for use, when, yesterday morning, some one remembered that no action had been taken by the city authorizing any one to intervene for it in the receivership proceedings. A special meeting of the Board of Estimate was called hurriedly and a resolution was passed authorizing the Corporation Counsel to intervene. The resolution follows:

Whereas, It is of the utmost importance that the rights of the city, its taxpayers, and its people should be protected and secured to the utmost advantage during said receivership, in view of the vast sums of money now invested in said properties by the people, or due by said companies to the City of New York, it is therefore

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be and he hereby is instructed to appear on the return day of said order appointing said Lindley M. Garrison as such receiver, to wit, Jan. 13, 1919, and for and in the name of the City of New York then and there to ask for the appointment of the Controller, Charles L. Craig, the chief financial officer of the City of New York, as co-receiver in the said suit now pending the said United States District Court.

Explains, City's Financial Interest.

Mr Burr called attention to the fact that for the purpose of constructing rapid transit lines to be operated by the B. R. T., the city had appropriated $121,811,928.60. Of this amount $110,695,775.95 had been expended, and contract obligations incurred for $14,167,270.24. The New York Municipal Railway Corporation, on the other hand, had contributed only $10,000,000 of the amount agreed and required to be contributed by it. Furthermore, the Corporation Counsel said, the city had claims against the defendant aggregating $11,531,163.28.

"So it happens," said Mr. Burr, "that the financial interest of the city, represented by expenditures actually made for construction, under Contract 4, and by its unpaid claims and judgments against these defendants and the subsidiary companies of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, is over $136,284,000. . . . Disputes and controversies have arisen between the city and these defendant corporations, both in connection with the contribution agreed to be made to the construction and in respect of the inadequate, and, at times, even unsafe service rendered by the companies in the operation of the roads as far as completed.

". . . It is a grave question which the local authorities have had under consideration, by reason of the responsibilities devolved upon them by the Constitution and laws of the State of New York, as to whether the defendant Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company should be aided, either by favorable action upon applications for increases of fare, or by grant of other measures of relief, in further strengthening and perpetuating the corporation's control over the transit system which it has operated with such poor results and so inadequately, having regard to the welfare and interests of the people of the city."

Mr. Burr, after he had proceeded a little further in his argument, asked the court to impose, as a term of the receivership, that neither the receiver nor the defendant companies should abrogate any compulsory free transfer obligations, enforced by State statute, in the endeavor to abrogate leases or unprofitable contracts. In speaking of the rentals paid by the defendant companies, Mr. Burr said they "probably ought to be modified." Then, as if anticipating that only Mr. Garrison would be named as permanent receiver, Mr. Burr read an extract from the judicial code of the United States which provides that a receiver must manage properties turned over to him according to the laws of the State in which the property is situated and in the same manner that the owner would be compelled to do. Violation of this section of the code imposes a fine of not more than $3,000 or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both. Mr. Burr closed with a request that Controller Craig be appointed co-receiver.

Mr. O'Leary spoke of the claims for damages for the tunnel wreck, and said that the claimants were residents of Brooklyn and ought to be represented in the receivership by a Brooklyn man. That ended all opposition to making Mr. Garrison's receivership permanent. Mr. Cravath said he had no opinion as to the claims of the city or the Public Service Commission, but he, representing all the heaviest security holders of the defendant companies, felt that a single receiver was best for all parties concerned. Mr. Bisbee and Mr. Erbe were of the same opinion.

In denying the motions made Judge Mayer said that, while no applicant for a co-receiver was foreclosed from applying again, he had concluded that, for the present at least, the interests of all parties concerned would be best served by one receiver, and he confirmed the permanency of Mr. Garrison.

"At some future time," Judge Mayer added, "when the question of financing comes up it may be very desirable to have a coreceiver. If it so appears, he will be appointed. But it should be clearly understood that this receiver will make it his first business to see that those properties are made safe and comfortable for the public. During this receivership, at least, there must not be another accident like that which occurred in the Malbone Street tunnel.

"And while I am saying this, I may as well add that the receiver will make every effort to pay to every just claim arising from accident just as soon as he can find the money to do so. A receiver cannot represent any particular faction or interest. He must represent fairly all the interests involved, and I think the Court is most fortunate in being able to get a man of the experience and training of the present receiver, who is willing to take the job. He not only showed marked executive ability as Secretary of War, but has served with distinguished ability and judicial fairness as Judge of a court that has been distinguished for the learning of its Judges for years."

EXPLAINS B. R. T. AFFAIRS.

Company's Chief Difficulty, Garrison Says, Is Lack of Cash.

The preliminary report, submitted to Judge Mayer of the Federal Court yesterday by Lindley M. Garrison, as temporary receiver, contains a survey of the finances, general resources and obligations of the companies, the rapid transit lines in operation and equipment and lines under construction by the city. The report discusses also the organization of the various departments of the companies, the functions of each, and the salaries paid to officials and department heads. It gives, also, the cost of conducting each department. To the report, which contains twenty-nine pages, are attached thirty-two schedules, which present figures and statistics regarding the condition of the company and its affairs.

In the beginning Mr. Garrison gives a condensed history of the corporate existence of the companies, their mileage, and the territory served. Then he summarizes the terms of the contract between the city and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, its present status, and the obligations under it which already have been fulfilled. Obligations yet to be fulfilled by the railroad corporation, and which will cost, exclusive of taxes, discount, and interest during construction, $10,000,000, are the following:

Completion of equipment of city railroads (initial operation, (includes 100 additional cars not yet delivered)	$6,800,000
Completion of additional tracks on extensions of existing railroads	2,500,000
Reconstruction of existing railroads, (includes yard at Coney Island and 36th Street inspection shed if not furnished by city)	3,000,000
	$10,000,000

In commenting on these items a digest of the report prepared by the receiver says:

"In respect of the above, obligations outstanding on account of work now under way or contracted for will call for approximately $5,000,000, which will be payable at monthly intervals within the next ten months. Included in the above total of $10,000,000 are items aggregating approximately $3,000,000, the expenditure of which will probably not be required until after July 1, 1920.

"Owing to the increasing volume of travel and the desire both on the part of the city and company to substitute new steel cars for wooden cars operated in subways, the report recommends that provision be made as soon as possible for 400 or 500 new steel motor cars, to cost approximately $20,000 each.

"Work that remains to be done by the city, including the extension and construction of rapid transit lines, and the completion of switching and other facilities required for full operation, both in Broadway, Manhattan, and in Brooklyn, is described. Fourteen major items of construction, either uncompleted or unbegun, are named specifically, with the statement that there are a great number of items of construction on lines now in operation which have not been completed by the city, such as waterproofing at Canal Street, completion of station buildings on the West End line, and signal towers and miscellaneous buildings along the lines now in operation."

Continuing, the digest of Mr. Garrison's report says:

"The effect of the delay on the part of the city in completing its part of the contract has been to throw an unanticipated amount of traffic over the one subway outlet in the Borough of Manhattan, namely, at the Canal and Centre Streets loop, and over connecting lines in Brooklyn, greatly retarding efficient operation and causing great congestion and other disturbances, resulting unfortunately both to the satisfactory operation of the road and its financial returns therefrom.

"Altogether there remain unfinished forty-seven miles of track out of a total of 113, and nineteen miles of road out of a total of forty-one of the lines which the city assumed to construct and which the company agreed to equip and operate."

The digest of the report then gives the main sources of income of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and then continues:

"The chief difficulty of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company at present is lack of cash. Dividends on stocks of companies owned have been reduced or entirely suspended, the constituent companies are in arrears in payment of interest on their certificates of indebtedness, and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation has failed to pay the interest due Jan. 1 last on its bonds, most of which are owned by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

"Furthermore, while the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has been financing for a great many years, the requirements for capital expenditures on the part of its constituent companies, taking the obligations of those companies, therefore, it has itself sold no securities (except for the benefit of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation in the subway contracts with the city) for a period of about ten years, and these capital expenditures, representing a great many millions of dollars, have been met out of current cash, or out of monies temporarily borrowed either from banks and trust companies or from constituent companies.

"Under the heading, 'Increased Cost of Labor, Material, and Supplies,' it is stated that the receivership companies have suffered greatly from those causes. Marked increase in the cost of material is also noted. The effects of higher costs generally throughout the system are set forth in a statement for the five months ending Nov. 30, 1918, compared with the same months of 1917, which shows that in those months the system earned only $318,720.46 over all charges, whereas, in the corresponding period of 1917 it earned $2,395,750.54, a falling off of $2,077,021.08 or 86.70 per cent."

The financial requirements for the immediate future, for the three receivership companies, are given as follows in Mr. Garrison's report: For construction and equipment work now under way, pursuant to city contracts and payable at intervals during the next ten months, the New York Municipal Railways Corporation must pay, $5,000,000. It must also pay interest, chargeable to construction, to Jan. 1, 1919, and unpaid, $809,500. It must also provide for the sinking fund due Jan. 1, 1919, $100,500. The situation in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is described as follows: Bills payable to banks and trust companies, $3,350,000; additions to power facilities (mostly under contract and payable in the next six months,) $1,453,000. Most of this work is being done by the B. R. T. as agent for the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company, and the costs eventually will be repaid by the latter company.

The situation in the New York Consolidated Company is shown by the following items in the receiver's report: Interest due Jan. 1, 1919, underlying bonds, $540,000; conversion of surface cars for trailer operations (as agent for surface railroad companies), $200,000; replacement of storage and dock facilities, required by Government requisition of existing facilities, about $50,000; interest on 7 per cent. notes, due Jan. 1, 1919, and unpaid, $2,020,725.

The report also contains the salary schedules. The total amount of salaries paid in the legal department is $120,300. Of this amount, George D. Yeomans, general counsel, receives $25,000; Charles Woodle, assistant general counsel, $12,000; while the salaries of nineteen other attorneys range from $1,500 to $9,500 a year.

President Timothy S. Williams, according to the report, draws $75,000 a year, of which Receiver Garrison pays $50,000. W. S. Menden, chief engineer of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, and assistant to the President, receives $25,000 a year. Two Vice Presidents, C. P. Menely and J. J. Dempsey, each receive $15,000 a year. C. E. Roenl, electrical engineer, receives $12,000 a year, and Howard Abel, the controller, receive $10,000 a year. The salaries of other officers range from $9,000 down to $1,200 a year. The total salaries paid by all the companies in the hands of the receiver amount to $197,700 annually.

MERCHANTS FOR HIGHER FARE

Association Calls on Estimate Board to Reconsider Action.

The Merchants' Association, through its Acting President, Lewis E. Pierson, delivered yesterday to the Board of Estimate a statement protesting against the refusal of the board to permit a temporary increase in fares on the city's transportation lines and against the "apparent willingness" of some members of the board that the city should acquire and operate the properties. After declaring that the city has recently made new investments of approximately $250,000,000 in transit development and is responsible for the payment of interest and sinking fund charges upon the amount, the statement says these charges must be paid out of taxation unless the revenues were sufficient to provide for them.

It is contended that a public utility should earn its own carrying charges, and that the result of the continued refusal by the Board of Estimate to permit an increase of fares on city-owned lines will be to throw the transit system into "financial chaos." The board is urged to reconsider its expressed intention against higher fares and to allow such an increase as the Public Service Commission, after an investigation, should prove to be reasonable and just. Concerning the question of public ownership the statement says:

"This association has made a thorough and exhaustive study of the results of governmental operation of public utilities and has found that those results are almost uniformly disastrous. Almost without exception, Government operation has resulted in inefficient service and excessive cost. In very very few instances has the public derived any benefit from such public operation. The almost uniform result has been poorer service and higher cost. In addition, the political abuses and dangers which are likely to result from public ownership and operation are most serious."

New Test of Transportation Efficiency for Packard Owners Starts February 1st

$17,640.00 in Cash Prizes to Drivers, Accountants and Shipping Clerks

How much work can a motor truck deliver?
What ought to be the cost of doing the work?

THESE are two of the most pressing questions in American business today—what with the need to save freight cars; with the staggering quantity of merchandise to be moved; and with the great business expansions already taking shape.

Motor truck efficiency means not only gasoline economy, tire and oil saving, and repair economy.

It means also the right size truck for your average load; efficient routeing; saving of time in loading and unloading; the way the truck is handled.

It means standardizing costs—every item known.

Basic principles, all of them—and the purpose of this new National Truck Efficiency Test is to show the Packard owner how these basic principles can give him better hauling at lower cost in his individual business.

The test covers one year's operation — demonstrating what can be done under all conditions of weather, temperature, road and load.

The Packard owner may enter as many of his Trucks as he wishes.

Prizes are awarded not only to the Driver, for lower costs and better service; but to the Accountant, who tabulates the records; and to the Shipping Clerk, because much of truck efficiency depends on efficient work at the shipping platform.

A Packard Truck of any size can compete on a fair basis.

Here is where the owner will learn whether his truck is just the right size for his work — or too large, power lost by running on underload — or too small, necessitating overload to get his hauling done.

The Packard owner starts the test with the basic principles developed by the Packard Organization of transportation specialists.

He has a year to apply these principles to his individual business.

What can he not achieve in efficiency!

How to Enter Your Trucks in the Packard National Truck Efficiency Test

YOUR local Packard Branch or Packard Dealer will accept your entries and see that your Packard Truck or Trucks are formally enrolled on the Official List of Contestants.

The Test starts on February 1st, 1919, and continues to January 31st, 1920.

Trucks are divided into seven Divisions, according to size:

"A" Division—all 6-ton Trucks
"B" " " 5-ton "
"C" " " 4-ton "
"D" " " 3-ton "
"E" " " 2-ton "
"F" " " 1½-ton "
"G" " " 1-ton "

The Grand Total of Prizes is $17,640.00—including five prizes for Drivers, Accountants and Shipping Clerks in each Division—as follows:

PRIZES	Drivers	Accountants	Shipping Clerks
1st	$500	$125	$225
2nd	400	100	175
3rd	300	75	125
4th	200	50	80

Contestants shall be Packard Trucks only.

All cost and operating records shall be kept and submitted on the standard forms of the National Standard Truck Cost System, as perfected by the Truck Owners' Conference, which can be obtained through your Packard Branch or Packard Dealer.

Recapitulation of operating and cost data must be submitted monthly by owner to the Packard Factory for inspection and correction.

YOU MEN WHO PAY THE FAMILY SHOE BILLS

Tramping 18 miles a day, Mr. H. M. Foreman, a mail carrier of Allentown, Pa., found that shoes with ordinary soles last about one month. But he says a pair of Neolin-soled shoes gave him more than nine months of service, in which time he walked over 4,000 miles.

His experience shows how you may save shoe money by providing your family with Neolin-soled shoes, which give extra wear where other shoes wear out quickest.

You can get Neolin-soled shoes in any type of shoe you want. Prices are about the same as for shoes that give only ordinary wear, sometimes they are even less. If your dealer hasn't the style you want, he can get it for you quickly. Remember, Neolin Soles are created by science to be what soles should be. They are available everywhere for re-soling as well as on new shoes. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels—guaranteed to outwear any other heels.

CLUB OWNERS CUT PLAYERS' SALARIES

National League Limits Each Club's Payroll to $11,000 a Month.

NEW YORK CLUB PROTESTS

Strong Objections of Giants and Chicago Cubs Overruled in Stormy Baseball Session at Waldorf.

A tremendous blow was aimed at the baseball players' pocketbook by the National League yesterday, when it established a salary limit of $11,000 a month for each club. This is the first time in the history of the modern game that a major league has attempted to interfere with the financial affairs of the teams. The latest move at retrenchment came as a great surprise, and was not adopted until after a hot fight, the New York and Chicago Clubs voting against the proposition. The action means that the players' salaries will be cut in half.

The radical action means that the payroll of each National League club next season must be limited to $55,000. As the payroll of a club like the Giants or the Cubs amounts to $100,000 or more a season, the big cut means a sweeping reduction of salaries. Under the new arrangement the average monthly salary would be $523. It was openly predicted among baseball men last night that the players would not accept the change without a fight. It was even hinted that if the measure is carried out, a players' strike in the National League might result.

Some of the less prosperous clubs decided that the 140-game schedule, which was adopted, and the limiting of the salaries, were the only way they could make up for financial losses of the past. The vote on the question stood 6 to 2, the Giants and Cubs holding out for a higher figure. Some of the clubs wanted the salary limit reduced to a lower figure even than $11,000. The penalty for a violation of the rule is $5,000. President Heydler was instructed to see that the measure was rigidly enforced next season.

The action of the league hits the Giants harder than any other club on the circuit. The new owners of the New York team held out at the meeting for the old conditions which ruled the game. They wanted a full schedule of 154 games, a high player limit of at least twenty-five players, and no restriction on training camp trips. They were prepared to pay good salaries and leave no stone unturned to build up a pennant winner at the Polo Grounds next season. Chicago was the only club to back up the Giants in their contention, and they were hopelessly in the minority.

The salary limit passed by the National League will come up at the joint meeting with the American League this afternoon, but it is pretty certain, so American League men said last night, that the American League will not tamper with the financial affairs of its own clubs. It is feared that such an unequal state of affairs in the two leagues is sure to cause dissatisfaction among the players.

The league also limited the training season to thirty days before the opening of the baseball season on April 23. This means that the clubs cannot report at the training camps before March 23. A $500 fine will be imposed on clubs violating the rule. President Heydler said that the sending of pitchers to Southern resorts to work out before the regular players go to the training camps was contrary to the spirit of the rule.

Manager John J. McGraw, the newly elected Vice President of the Giants, and Fred Mitchell, manager and President of the Cubs, sought to gain permission to attend the joint meeting tomorrow, but the league turned down the suggestion which was offered by William Veeck, Vice President of the Chicago Club. This action brought a storm of protest from the New York and Chicago representatives.

It is many years since the National League has had such a stormy session. The club owners were in session from 11 o'clock until 7, and did not even come out of the meeting room for luncheon. It was a case of the New York and Chicago Clubs lined up against the other six organizations.

The first opposition from New York and Chicago came when the league adopted the 140-game schedule. Treasurer Francis X. McQuade of the Giants immediately got up with an argument for a regular 154-game schedule. The matter was discussed for some time, but was finally referred back to the Schedule Committee for adoption.

The National League did not go on record yesterday on the player limit, but will wait until after the joint session with the American League today. Johnson's organization has made the player limit twenty-one, while the National League limit last season was twenty-two. The National League is divided on the subject, several of the club owners holding out for a limit of twenty players. It is believed, however, the same player limit as that of the American League—twenty-one—will be adopted. In the off season, before May 15, each club can carry thirty-five players. The salary limit which was adopted covers only the championship playing season of 140 games.

The waiver rule was changed so that hereafter when waivers are asked on a player he must report to the club claiming his services, no result of the waiver being permitted. The league passed a resolution advocating the same prices at the parks which prevailed last season and the same method of collecting the war tax.

The league went on record as advocating a change in the division of the players and clubs' shares of the world series' receipts. The spoils hereafter are to be distributed on a percentage basis instead of a stipulated price for the players on the winning and losing clubs, as was adopted last season. It was decided that the clubs should contribute 50 per cent. of their share of the receipts to the club treasuries instead of 25 per cent., which has been the rule in the past. The league went on record as favoring a joint meeting of the two major leagues each season such as the conference which is to be held today.

Although the National League is opposed to one of its own members, August Herrmann, for a re-election to the chairmanship of the National Commission, it has advanced no candidate to take his place. The league yesterday discussed the commission question and, although some of the club owners favor a one-man commission, there is opposition to this innovation from other members. While President Hempstead favored the one-man commission idea, the change in the ownership of the club puts a different complexion on the New York Club's stand on the question. The sentiment of the league was that if the one-man commission did not meet with approval at the joint meeting tomorrow the National League would favor the old commission, with a chairman not connected in any way with baseball.

HUGGINS INTERVIEWS BAKER

Yankee Manager Talks with Home Run Slugger at Trappe, Md.

Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees returned from the South last night and on his way North he stopped off at Trappe, Md., to talk with Frank Baker about his contract for next season. Baker has stated his intention of retiring from the game, but it is believed that he can be persuaded to join the Yankees on their training trip.

The club has received word from Pitcher Ernie Shore, who is at his home in East Bend, N. C. Shore has been discharged from the navy and says he is ready to negotiate for terms with the club. Dutch Leonard, another of the Yankee pitchers, is in town and expects to talk with Manager Huggins today.

Secretary Harry Sparrow of the Yanks returned from Jacksonville last night and will send Phil Schenck South to get the baseball park in readiness for the coming of the New York club on March 23.

Ty Cobb, came to this city last night at the suggestion of Manager Hugh Jennings and President Frank Navin of the Detroit club. The Georgia Peach, it is expected, will come to terms for the coming season.

Many rumors of baseball trades filled the air yesterday, and it is said that Manager Huggins has offered Pitchers Russell and Ray Fisher to Cleveland for outfielder Bobby Roth. Boston is also after Roth, but no deal has yet been offered by Frazee.

Clarence Rowland, the deposed manager of the Chicago White Sox, had a talk yesterday with August Herrmann of Cincinnati about the managerial job with the Reds. Herrmann will make no arrangements about getting a manager until he hears definitely from Manager Christy Mathewson, who is now in France.

Russell Gardner said yesterday that he had made an offer for the St. Louis Cardinals to President Branch Rickey, but it is understood that President Rickey has no authority to make a deal for the sale of the club. If the St. Louis club is put up at auction, Mr. Gardner says he will make a bid for the franchise. He is anxious to buy the club and said yesterday that he would bid as high as any one else for it.

ROOSEVELT'S WORK PRAISED

Schoolboy Athletic League Adopts Resolution of Tribute.

A resolution on the death of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was given out yesterday by the Public Schools Athletic League. The resolution was adopted at a special meeting of the P. S. A. L. Executive Committee, composed of General George W. Wingate, President; S. R. Guggenheim, Treasurer; Gustavus T. Kirby, First Vice President, and Darwin R. James. Colonel Roosevelt was an honorary Vice President of the league.

The resolution follows:

"The sudden and unexpected death of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, while deplored by the entire nation, is also felt by the officers and members of the Public Schools Athletic League as a great personal loss.

"When the league was first organized and was practically unknown Colonel Roosevelt, who was then President of the United States, not only accepted the position of honorary President of the league, but wrote and gave out for publication a letter strongly commending its work and urging its public support. He had since continued to hold that position, and had in many other ways exerted his personal influence to assist the league and promote the work which it has been carrying on, in doing which he had largely contributed to the great success which it has been able to achieve.

"As an athlete, as a scholar, as an untiring champion of the righteous and the relentless foe of the wrongdoer, and as a patriot, the life and character of Colonel Roosevelt represented the finest type of American manhood and constituted an ideal which the league will always point to as one for the boys and girls of our public schools to strive to emulate.

"It loses in him a stanch and powerful friend and a bright and shining light to the children of our public schools and the athletes of the world."

MINORS IN CLASH WITH BIG LEAGUES

May Withdraw from Organized Baseball if Demands Are Not Granted—Time Limit Set.

The minor leagues, in session at the Hotel Biltmore yesterday, threw down the gauntlet to the major leagues, and have given the majors until 6 o'clock tomorrow night to make an answer to their demands. If the big leagues should decide to reject the propositions offered, the minor leagues may decide to break away from organized baseball.

A complete readjustment of minor league conditions is demanded by the smaller organizations. Secretary John H. Farrell of the National Association presided at the meeting yesterday. The following leagues were represented: American Association, International League, Pacific Coast League, Western League, Southern Association, Texas League, Eastern League, Pacific Coast International League, Virginia League, and Western-Canadian League.

The following are the changes which the minors have asked the major leagues to accept:

"Major leagues may arbitrarily purchase one player from each Class AA club for $7,500 between Nov. 1 and Nov. 10. In the event of that player not being wanted by the club purchasing him or by any other major league club, he shall be offered to the club from which he was purchased for $2,500. In case that club does not want him, he is to be offered to all clubs in the same class for $1,000. If no club in that class desires him, he goes to Class A for $500, Class B for $300, Class C for $150 or Class D for $75."

"All major league players waived out of respective leagues must be offered to the Class AA league clubs for $1,000 each. In event more than one club wants any of such players he is to be awarded by lot. If he goes to a lower class, the price shall be $500 for Class A, $300 for Class B, $150 for Class C, and $75 for Class D.

"Cash must be paid for all players.

"All clubs in all leagues (majors as well as minors) must have player limits and must conform to same on the opening day of the season.

"A new Governing Board shall be formed, on which the major leagues shall have one representative and the minor leagues one, the two representatives to select a third member.

"The National Association also shall retain its Governing Board elected by itself to have final jurisdiction over all differences between its club members and betweep its club members and players. It shall fix all its salary limits and impose penalties for violation thereof and also regulate all of its internal affairs."

NEUSTADT DEFEATS CLASS C CHAMPION

J. Neustadt, a young Brooklyn amateur, gained his second victory yesterday in the national Class C 18.2 balk line billiard championship tournament at Lawler Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn. In doing so Neustadt toppled the Metropolitan district champion and created a new tournament average record. Neustadt, in one of the afternoon games, defeated George Spear, who only recently won the local title, by a score of 150 to 126 in twenty-eight innings. This gave Neustadt an average of 5 10-28, and he had two high runs of 20 and one of 17. Spear made a high run of 20, the highest of the tournament to date.

The contest was easily the most interesting of the tournament. Both contestants were in excellent stroke and each manipulated the ivories with a skill and consistency which contin ually drew the applause of the spectators. Frequently, the lead alternated, but toward the end Neustadt crept out in front and was never headed.

Spear started with an early lead. At the fifth inning, with a run of 20, he was off in front by 25 to 20. Neustadt came back later with a collection of 20 points in his eighteenth turn at the table, and took the lead by a count of 83 to 51. Neustadt was still leading at the twenty-third inning, when Spear made a run of 22 and drew within striking distance of his rival, the score being 104 to 90 in Neustadt's favor. A run of 30 in the following session placed the metropolitan champion in front by 120 to 11, but Spear's leadership was not maintained for long. In the twenty-fifth session Neustadt left the table after clicking off 20 points, gaining the upper hand by 131 to 122. Spear collected a brace of 2s for his next two innings, while Neustadt registered a single marker in his twenty-sixth inning, and just missed by a hair in completing the game in the next inning, when he missed after making 17 points. In his next inning, however, Neustadt completed his string.

The other afternoon contest brought together J. S. Blaisdell and J. T. Jaeger. After a long-drawn-out match which went to sixty-two innings Blaisdell was returned the winner by a count of 150 to 126.

The winners in the evening matches were Louis A. Servatius and Gus Gardner. The veteran Servatius scored over A. Brigge by a count of 150 to 56 in thirty-two innings. Servatius had a high run of 19. Gardner defeated E. C. McGill by a score of 150 to 123 in fifty-seven innings, making a high run of 14.

This afternoon one game will be played. The principals will be C. J. Steinbugler and A. Briggs. In the evening Sydney Brussel will oppose A. Briggs and Ardie Wickers will oppose Humboldt Foss.

SMITH IS NONCOMMITTAL.

Governor Will Wait Before Giving His Decision on Boxing.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Reports that he had said he would sign a bill to legalize boxing in the State if one were passed by the Legislature were called to Governor Smith's attention today.

"I'll wait until I see the bill in my hands before making any comment on the situation," the Governor said. "It's one thing to legalize boxing and it's another thing to create a commission to see that the law is properly administered."

NEWTOWN DEFEATS BRYANT

Queens Five Scores Second Victory in Three Days.

Newtown High School's basketball team, champions of the Queens division of the Public Schools Athletic League tournament, defeated the Bryant High School five yesterday for the second time in three days. The score was 26 to 9. The contest was played on the Newtown court. Bryant's forwards were held practically helpless by the excellent guarding work of McGrattan and Platow.

In the first half the play was close, the whistle finding Newtown in the lead by 7 to 6. The Newtown lads completely outclassed their rivals in the second half and scored almost at will.

VOLLMER WINS IN TANK.

New York A. C. Swimmer Takes Fast Race in 100-Yard Race.

Herbert Vollmer of the New York A. C., 150-yard swim record holder, made his first competitive appearance after a year's absence last night in the tank of the New York A. C. In the special 100-yard invitation race Vollmer swam to an impressive victory over Leo Giebel and Leeming Jelliffe, both title holders in the fast time of 0:56 1-5. This mark is only two and three-fifths seconds behind the record on the books, credited to Perry McGillivray of Chicago.

Vollmer showed much speed, considering his long absence from competition. He was first to hit the water and was followed by Norman Buck, Illinois A. C. junior Central A. A. U. champion. Buck took Vollmer's wake from the start. Before the first length of the pool had been covered, the national record holder had opened up several yards on his rival. After the turn Buck gradually weakened and was passed by both Giebel and Jelliffe. Thereafter Buck continued to drop behind, while Giebel and Jelliffe came on to give Vollmer his only opposition. This did not mount up threateningly, and at the finish Vollmer had an advantage of about four yards.

In a plunging contest Cyril Carroll, tank record holder, was successful from scratch with an effort of 66 feet 6 inches. Another successful scratch competitor was Arthur McAleenan, Jr., in the fancy diving, which he won from the honor mark with a point score of 105.34.

The summaries:

50-Yard Swim, Novice.—Won by John E. Kane, New York A. C.; Edward Hettma, unattached, second; Ralph Hearn, New York A. C., third. Time—0:25.

100-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by J. T. Trumbour, U. S. Navy, (15 seconds;) Paul B. Bernard, unattached, (14 seconds,) second; Charles Gunthner, New York A. C., (6 seconds,) third. Time—1:11.

Come Ride in the Essex

Its First Showing—A Light Weight Quality Car

We Want Your Opinion of It

All motordom has waited a year for the Essex.

Dealers have ventured all sorts of descriptions for it. But today it is having its premier showing in hundreds of cities and towns throughout America.

For months the trade papers have given first prominence to whatever news they could get of its details.

Their interest was awakened because it combines the advantages of the light low priced car, and its economy, with the performance, sturdiness and beauty of the large and costly car. One leading writer proclaimed the Essex a new development in motor car transportation.

Don't you want to be among the first in this locality to see the car that has awakened this interest? We wish you would come and ride in it for

You Are To Do Its Advertising

We have long wanted to reveal the details of the Essex. But the manufacturers said they wanted the car to speak for itself. They said no description that could be applied to it would create as favorable an impression as would result from a ride in the car.

Even now we hesitate to praise the Essex since we can say nothing that has not already been claimed in praise for some other car.

So the endorsement it is to receive is such as you and other thousands of motorists volunteer to give. All we ask is that you come see and ride in it.

We Were Surprised— Let Us Surprise You

When we went to the factory to see the Essex we wanted to know in advance something of its detail. But we were told that was for us to discover as we inspected and rode in the car.

Perhaps we would have been skeptical and have concluded there was nothing unusual about the Essex if we had not known the men who are building it. But knowing them as we do and knowing the quality of cars they build, our faith and curiosity were aroused.

What a Ride Proved to Us

Our first experience was a ride over a road so rough that you would willingly go miles out of the way to avoid if you were in the average light car.

We took it at high speed, but the effect in both the front and rear seats was more in keeping with what you might expect in riding over a smooth pavement.

Then we drove into soft sand where the wheels sunk in below the felloes, going through as though it were thin mud.

Every test that reveals performance was shown us. There were no squeaks. The motor did not labor. The car had been in similar service for months and still retained its appearance of newness. These are things we want to show you. A demonstration like that which surprised us is ready for you if you will come to our store.

The Essex is Built To Endure

Every part that wears is adjustable. Hard service can not loosen the body nor twist the radiator. It is so sturdily built that the frame remains solid and rigid over the roughest roads and through the hardest service. The motor is practically free from vibration. If you were blindfolded and placed in the Essex without having seen it and then were given such a ride as we want you to take with us, you would likely say you were in a large and costly car.

After you have ridden in the Essex we will tell you all about it.

Then, we think you will be so enthusiastic you will tell everyone you know that you have ridden in the most surprising car you have ever seen.

INVOKE PRESIDENT ON THEATRE TAXES

Managers Call Meeting Today to Ask Hearing Also by Congress Committees.

SAY IT IS A FIGHT FOR LIFE

Plan Appeal to Public as Interested Party to Join in Protests Throughout Country.

Holding that the proposed 20 per cent. tax on theatre tickets means the ruin of the amusement industry, the theatrical managers of New York made known last night their intention of waging a bitter war against the figure agreed upon by the Conference Committee of House and Senate at Washington. There will be a meeting this afternoon of all the theatrical managers of New York and as many from other centres as can get here in time.

According to William A. Brady, the meeting will send a cable message to President Wilson begging his intervention to secure what the managers assert is simple justice. The plea to the President will be put on the ground, as several leading producers phrased it, that the whole theatrical industry did its utmost toward furthering victory, and that it would be black ingratitude for the Government to turn round and tax it out of business.

Practically every theatrical manager in New York yesterday signed a telegram sent to the Conference Committee, in which it was urged that the theatrical interests should have a hearing before the 20 per cent. tax is allowed to stand. Though hearings before such a committee are unusual, the managers believe they are as much entitled to present their side as were the group of business men who appeared before the committee to protest against what they regard as unjust discrimination against partnerships.

Mr. Brady was one of many who voiced their apprehension for the future of the theatre business last night. He said the theatrical men were prepared to fight, and that if necessary "the theatre and the moving picture industry will get into politics with a punch and will fight for their lives." So convinced were the managers that the entire public was as deeply interested and as seriously threatened as were those directly concerned, he declared, that great mass meetings were to be held throughout the country to protest against taxing the theatre out of existence.

$50,000,000 Theatre Tax Paid.

"Reports show that during the twelve months of 10 per cent. tax the theatre and moving picture industry poured into the treasury of the United States $50,000,000. It is the third contributor in the list of industries. Now I want to say, and I base the statement on a lifetime in the business, that as an economic measure that bill is going to defeat its own end. You will see the Government's revenue from the theatre cut down to one-half or less.

"Next, I want to emphasize that, without helping itself, the Government is going to make thousands of innocent people suffer. For this tax means that thousands of actors and all sorts of persons allied with the theatre are going to be thrown out of work just when the nation is striving with all its resources to avoid unemployment.

"As another example of unfairness, I ask the public to note that, while the theatrical industry itself, with all its investment, its risks, its creative effort, is to be taxed 20 per cent., the Broadway ticket speculator, who invests nothing, risks nothing, creates nothing, is to be taxed 5 per cent."

"If the bill is passed," said David Belasco last night, "making a 20 per cent. tax on theatre tickets, it will be the death blow not only to theatrical managers but to the entire theatrical profession. It is such a ruinous and drastic thought that I myself am quite overwhelmed by the unspeakable sorrow of the picture which I see and which I am sure would become a reality.

"It is monstrous and uncalled for. Every theatrical manager in the city and throughout the country has done gladly everything in his power to cooperate with the Government. We have weathered the storm. The war is over and won. We have an equal right to enjoy the blessings of peace, for we have surely done our bit in bringing about victory.

"Businesses, mercantile and industrial concerns have the opportunity of raising their prices in order to compete with the advance of the cost of living. Not so theatres. Our expenses are increasing, the same as other businesses, but our incomes have remained the same. The theatre is not a luxury, a dissipation, it is a necessity, and just as necessary as the doctors, or the public playgrounds, or any legitimate form of wholesome recreation.

"That the Government would seriously consider such an unjust thrust is so monstrously unfair that I do not choose to believe that the bill will ever be passed. It must not be, for it would mean not only great personal suffering, but the scrapping of the millions invested in the theatrical industry of our country."

Shubert Sees Broadway Dark.

Lee Shubert was another who made a strong protest against the proposed tax, and who told of the efforts of the managers to get a hearing before the Conference Committee.

"It will be absolutely ruinous to the business," he said. "And not only will it force us to close our houses, but it will work a severe hardship on the public. Neither we nor the public deserve it. There was no other industry that did more in every way to convey every appeal of the Government, to promote every war activity in which it could aid.

"It is a habit of most managers to keep plays running in New York often at enormous losses in order to be able to send them upon successful road tours later. This practice will have to be abandoned. That means many fewer plays running in New York, and it means that there will not be enough production to supply a great part of the theatres throughout the country. Only the sensational success will be able to survive a New York season, and one unhappy result of that will be the throwing out of work many thousands of people who earn their livelihood, directly or indirectly, in the theatre.

"The effect of this tax," Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., said, "will be to close two-thirds of the houses. Even now expenses have gone up so that only the enormous successes are making any money. Canvas, of which we use hundreds of thousands of yards, has jumped from 34 cents to $1.64.

"Chorus girls' shoes which used to cost $3.50 now cost $10 a pair, and we pay enormous wages to union electricians, stage hands, and musicians, besides increased railroad fares and all sorts of added expense. The theatre simply can't stand it.

"Mr. Dillingham and I had the Century when the 10 per cent. tax went into effect and receipts dropped 50 per cent. and stayed down for three months. The 'Follies' now pays the Government $350 a night; it will not be able to pay that if the tax is doubled. We shall simply be put out of business."

BARRY IN COMMAND HERE.

Successor to Major Gen. Bell Takes Up Duties at Once.

Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry was greeted with a salute of thirteen guns at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when he arrived to take over the post of Commander of the Department of the East, succeeding the late Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, who was buried in Arlington Cemetery on Monday. At the request of General Barry the official ceremonies were omitted, and he held an informal reception at Governors Island which was attended by the senior officers and those on duty at Hoboken and other points around Manhattan. This is the second time he has been in command of the Department of the East, the previous occasion being when he succeeded the late General Frederick Dent Grant.

General Barry was born in New York City sixty-three years ago and was educated in the public schools. He was a student at the College of the City of New York when Congressman Robert Roosevelt, an uncle of the late Theodore Roosevelt, appointed him to the Military Academy at West Point, from which he was graduated in 1877. From the Seventh Cavalry, after three years, he was transferred to the First Infantry and rose step by step through the various grades until he was made a Brigadier General by President Roosevelt after his return from the task of pacifying Cuba in 1902. He also saw active service in China with the Allied Relief Expedition in 1900, and for a time commanded the Philippines Department. Recently General Barry commanded the Central Department, with headquarters at Chicago.

He took up his duties at once and notified Washington to that effect.

TO AID RESTORATION FUND.

Women's Committee Begins Work for Palestine Drive.

A committee of prominent women of this city, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Philip Lewisohn, has been formed to aid in the "drive" for the $3,000,000 Palestine Restoration Fund which is to be raised within two weeks beginning Sunday, Jan. 19. The committee has established headquarters at 55 Fifth Avenue, and is co-operating with the General Palestine Restoration Fund Committee of the Zionist Organization of America.

Mrs. Lewisohn, in a statement issued last night at Zionist headquarters, said that the main object of the women's committee in the campaign is to solicit the interest in the Palestine Restoration Fund of the banking houses, department stores, theatres, and other industrial and commercial concerns in the city to allow the committee to place booths for soliciting contributions for the fund. The city has been divided into various districts and captains appointed to take charge of their respective localities.

Among the members of the women's committee are Mrs. Nathan Straus, Mrs. Philip Lewisohn, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Randolph Guggenheimer, Mrs. J. C. Guggenheimer, and Mrs. N. R. Lindheim.

GATTI TO CONTINUE 4 YEARS

Metropolitan Opera Directors Extend Contract Signed in 1908.

The Directors of the Metropolitan Opera House announced last night that Giulio Gatti-Casazza's contract as general manager of the company has been extended until May, 1923, which will be fifteen years from the time he came here in 1908 from Milan. On behalf of the board, the following letter was made public by Chairman Otto H. Kahn:

> Dear Mr. Gatti-Casazza:
> I confirm hereby our verbal arrangement, according to which your contract as general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company is extended to May 1, 1923.
> I am happy to avail myself of this occasion to express to you once more the confidence, esteem, and gratitude of the Board of Directors, as well as my personal sincere regard and friendship, and I remain, with best wishes,
> OTTO H. KAHN,
> Chairman Metropolitan Opera Company.
> New York, Jan. 11, 1919.

At the opera last evening Caruso, Hempel, Perini, Didur, and others repeated Flotow's "Marta" to a large audience. The talk of the lobbies between the acts was that Mr. Gatti's reappointment for four years more would relieve any persons who had been grooming themselves as candidates for the Italian impresario's successor. During his term he has directed more than 1,600 performances of opera in New York.

MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

The Schola Cantorum.

The first concert of this season given by the Schola Cantorum took place at Carnegie Hall last night. Kurt Schindler was conductor, and, as might have been expected, presented an interesting program of compositions for mixed chorus ranging from early English and Italian and Spanish composers to the Russian Ornstein. Lambert Murphy, tenor, was the solo singer. No one could complain of monotony in the order of the selections: "Praise of the Gallant Warriors," William Byrd (London, 1588;) "The Queen of Love and Beauty," J. Dowland, (London, 1603;) "Danse of the Nymphs," Th. Greaves, (London, 1604;) these three were madrigals for mixed chorus. "Brigg Fair," folksong from Lincolnshire, tune taken down at Brigg, 1905, from the singing of Joseph Taylor by Percy Aldridge Grainger and set for a single high male voice and mixed chorus; "Cargoes," words by John Masefield, music by H. Balfour Gardiner; "Scaldava il Sol" ("The Siesta"), by Luca Marenzio, (Venetia, 1582;) three secular madrigals by Palestrina; "Catalonian Country Dance," J. Cumellas Ribo; "Cradle Song," Sancho Marraco; two ballads of Spanish Galicia, Juan Montes; three settings of Catalonian folk melodies for eight-part chorus, by Kurt Schindler; new Russian choruses by Leo Ornstein, "Russian Winter," "Russian Lament"; and "A Day in Merry Old England, Anno 1600; a medley of Elizabethan ditties and roundelays set in the form of a quodlibet," by Kurt Schindler.

The general tone quality of the society is not distinguished, nor is the attack as impeccable as it should be. Flabbiness of rhythm marked the first half of the evening, but when the more characteristic section was reached, particularly the Spanish music, the Schola sang with fire and precision. Mr. Murphy was hardly inspiring in "Brigg Fair," nor much better in the two ballads of Spanish Galicia. Perhaps he was suffering from a cold, his voice was so uneven. Mr. Schindler conducted with his accustomed enthusiasm, and the large audience quickly responded. No doubt it would have achieved more musical results if the accompanist, Mr. Deis, had played the various compositions throughout. A capella singing was a sad test for the pitch last night.

"UP IN MABEL'S ROOM."

John Cumberland and Walter Jones Shine in Fairly Amusing Farce.

UP IN MABEL'S ROOM, a farce in three acts, by Wilson Collison and Otto Harbach. At the Eltinge.

"Up in Mabel's Room" is the title of a moderately amusing farce of the lingerie genre played here for the first time last night at the Eltinge Theatre. Its action is concerned chiefly with the pursuit of an incriminating undergarment which a shy bridegroom in a single bold moment had presented to a young woman whom he had temporarily fancied. It is a farce rather adroitly put together by Wilson Collison and Otto Harbach, (probably in larger degree by the latter, since he is the more experienced of the pair,) and it builds situation upon situation, with much passing to and fro of the evidence, whispered conferences, constant interruptions, frantic husbands, and distraught wives.

But for all its technical proficiency the fun does not flow with any degree of steadiness. This was particularly true of the first act, which was torpid; the second, passing in the select spot of the title, is better, and the last act keeps up the interest fairly well. Through it all, however, there is the inescapable feeling that these things have happened before in countless farces, that endless husbands have hid under endless beds in endless strange boudoirs, and have been discovered by endless jealous wives.

The acting is varied, with the honors going almost without reserve to the men in the cast. John Cumberland and Walter Jones, dependable farceurs both, are the mainstays of the piece. Mr. Cumberland has a positive genius for the depiction of worried innocence, and it was the play's misfortune that he was required to spend most of the second act under the bed. Mr. Jones is at his best as a husband whom the complications involve. Mabel, the owner of the undergarment, was played by Hazel Dawn, who looked her prettiest, but revealed only scant acting abilities. A good performance was given by Lucy Cotton.

MUSIC NOTES.

Ruth Miller will sing the title role in "Marta" next Tuesday at the Park Theatre. The following Saturday evening Maggie Teyte and Orville Harrold will appear in "Madame Butterfly."

Clarence Dickinson, choirmaster of the Brick Church, will play his first recital on the new organ, given in the name of Dr. Henry von Dyke, a former pastor, this evening.

Emilio de Gogorza, the baritone singer, is ill with Spanish influenza, and his managers have canceled his Aeolian recital on Sunday afternoon.

A special performance of "Le Prophete," with Caruso, will be given at the Metropolitan Opera House on Saturday night for the benefit of the French Hospital of this city.

A New Dunsany Play.

There is no resisting the imaginative spell of Lord Dunsany, and especially when he touches his favorite theme of the Great Gods. The play last night, like "The Gods of the Mountain" and "A Night at an Inn," introduced us to a group of worldlings, each occupied with his trivial mundane foibles or cares, and all scornful of the old, eternal forces. A sacrilege is committed, and slowly, deliberately, with the irresistible power of a cosmic spirit let loose, the vengeance of the Great Gods descends on them and destroys them utterly.

This time the milieu is an ancient Egyptian court. As the result of a whim of a King it has been removed to a jungle city, where the courtiers find themselves insufferably bored and long to return to the capital. The characters of the worldling courtiers and their wives are drawn with deliciously whimsical humor. They do not believe in the gods—or, if they do, it is only to think that they look upon human life to laugh at. In order to force the King to return they frame a plot, blackmailing the prophet-priest to declare that unless the King does return the jungle city will be utterly destroyed and all who remain in it.

Even as the priest utters his enforced prophecy, however, one feels that the breath of some high spirit has entered into it. Omens are manifested, weird and strangely beautiful. The courtiers struggle to maintain their belief in gods who only laugh at human affairs. But at the appointed time the walls of the city fall, and all within them shrink and perish. Then, amid death and destruction, the pealing of awful thunder is heard—the laughter of the gods.

The play lacks, perhaps, something of the gruesome horror of its predecessors. No gods are seen; one only hears the grim reverberations of their laughter. But the play has a keener touch of satire, a deeper spiritual content than its author has revealed before.

The setting which Stuart Walker has provided is highly characteristic and beautiful. The acting is of the excellent quality to which he has accustomed us, full of delicious shading and inspired by good taste, which is as positive as it is harmonious. The Prophet of George Gaul is highly impassioned and imaginative. The King of McKay Morris and the Queen of Margaret Mower are very noble figures, contrasting finely with the worldly levity of the various persons of their court. Among these the character created by Elizabeth Patterson stands out in freshness and subtle salience of humor.

Of the two one-act pieces that precede "The Laughter of the Gods," the pantomime "Stingy" is the more notable. It tells a children's story of considerable charm, and, with the aid of Mr. Walker's able company, it made a very pleasant impression. The author, Maxwell Perry, was an aviator with the American Army in France, who disappeared last July after bringing down his second German plane in five days.

Agreeable music for all three pieces was provided by Herbert E. Hyde, organist of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Paula Pardee, Pianist, Makes Debut

Paula Pardee, a young pianist, short haired as Leginska, and who, like others since the war, has found her musical models in New York, appeared for the first time in recital yesterday afternoon at Aeolian Hall, playing a program of four composers. She displayed not so much forceful as sound technique and appreciation of some higher demands, in Beethoven's sonata, op. 27, No. 1, and the G minor rhapsody of Brahms. A Chopin group could have shown more variety, but her present high mark was made deftly in the "Forest Murmurs" and E major polonaise of Liszt.

THE GERMAN ELECTIONS.

In Berlin the Spartacan revolution is reduced to the dregs. Sporadic looting is about all that is left of it. After too long a patience the Government, the forces of order, have struck hard. The Prussian elections to the National Assembly will be held on Sunday. In Prussia, as everywhere else in Germany, the Reds and the Independent Socialists, whose extreme Left they were and who veered toward the Bolshevist faction, are a pitiful, if boisterous, minority. In Baden, as even the notorious Red Freiheit of Berlin admits, the Independent Socialists cast only some 15,000 votes in a total of 1,000,000. Not one of their candidates was successful. Forty-one Centrists, thirty-five Majority Socialists, twenty-four Democrats, seven National Liberals were chosen. The "bourgeois" parties got 72 members to the 35 of the Majority Socialists, who, as against the Bolsheviki, must themselves be regarded as a "bourgeois" party.

In Bavaria the Majority Socialists elected about half of the members of the Bavarian Constituent Assembly; the Centrists and Conservatives 32 per cent.; the German Democrats, a coalition of the old Progressive People's Party with a portion of the old National Liberal Party, 14 per cent. The remaining scant 4 per cent. was "scattering." In Bavaria, as in Baden, the Independent Socialists were beaten ignominiously, were "nowhere," as we say in America.

In Württemberg the Majority Socialists got 52 seats, the German Democrats 38, the Centrists 31, the Conservative coalition, the old Conservative and Reichspartei, 25; the Independent Socialists, 4, and their vote was not even a tenth of that of the Majority Socialists. Encouraging reading for the runagate sons and daughters of Spartacus, EICHHORN and ROSA LUXEMBURG and LIEBKNECHT.

In Bremen, seized for the moment by the Spartacans, they had been beaten by the Majority Socialists in a local election. In miniature, this is a true picture of Bolshevism, a minority ruling by violence.

A Coblenz dispatch to THE TIMES the other day called the Centrist and Social Democratic candidates in the Coblenz-Treves district men and women, "of high calibre, representing all classes," conservative. When Social Democrats, so long anathema, nominate conservative candidates, you begin to doubt if what German statesmen of the old régime said about the political incapacity of Germans was anything but moonshine and prejudice. The twelve Treves-Coblenz Majority Socialist nominees are "a "labor union secretary, a clergyman, "a notary public, a master teleg-"rapher, a School Superintendent, a "wine merchant, a business woman, "a retail merchant, a railroad work-"er, a steel worker, a meat dealer, "a landlord." In short, whatever the differences of their party programs, the Germans outside of a turbulent minority are substantially united for sane and orderly government.

ITALIAN IMMIGRATION.

Our gallant townsman and airman, Mr. LA GUARDIA, Representative in Congress of the Fourteenth District, was stirred into warmth of expression by the fears uttered to the House Immigration Committee by Mr. DENSMORE, Director of the Federal Employment Service. Mr. DENSMORE had been "reliably informed" that "hundreds of thousands" of Italian prisoners in Austrian Silesia would be allowed to go to the United States.

Many of us might rejoice instead of shuddering at the prospect, if prospect there were, of those sound and sturdy and willing workers coming to add to the wealth of America and their own. But, as Mr. LA GUARDIA says, "Italy requires all of her people now." He has been told on good authority that Italy will restrict emigration. Italy hopes to develop her extraordinary wealth of Alpine and Apennine water power to make electricity take the place of coal, of which she has none. Professor FRANCESCO NITTI, looked upon by many Italians as a future Premier, prophesied, when he was over here as a member of the Royal Italian Commission in 1917, that within eight or ten years Italy would be the greatest industrial nation in the world.

If the prophecy seems a little enthusiastic, the prophet is an expert in industry as well as in finance. At any rate, Italy, whose sons have done so much of the hard work of the world, will strive to keep them at home to work for her and not for strangers.

THE DRY FASHION.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 14.—If all the rest of the country is to be Dry, and if the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States, or more, want prohibition, Connecticut is not likely to attempt opposition.

Does this yearning to "get on the band wagon" explain the wild rush of Legislatures to ratify? It is a wet day when several of them don't join the procession. Yesterday the joiners were five. Ponder the theory put forth in the capital of the Land of Steady Habits. This is what it amounted to: If three-fourths of the States are willing to give up an important State right and cram prohibition down the throats of the few unwilling States, why should Connecticut bother herself about her rights or those of the minority States or the need of prohibition when men are soberer than ever before? Never mind principles or the merits of the case. Prohibition seems to be the fashion, just as drinking used to be. Let's adopt it, not because we want it, but because we "want to be on the winning side."

One would think, seeing the fury of Legislatures to ratify, that the alteration of the fundamental and permanent law was of rather less consequence and worthy of rather less thought than an act to increase the license tax on dogs.

THE GREEK CLAIMS.

The memorandum of the Greek territorial claims laid before the Peace Conference by Premier VENIZELOS reflects the wisdom with which that statesman's foreign policy has always been characterized. As head of a people whose patriotism and racial consciousness are very strong, a people nearly half of whom are outside the present boundaries of the Greek Kingdom, Mr. VENIZELOS naturally wants to unite the Greek race so far as possible. But he understands that for reasons partly political and partly geographic complete realization of this aim is hardly attainable, and he presents useful suggestions for settlement of questions in which a Greek population has the principal interest, but which are affected by other interests, too.

The first item is Northern Epirus, now included in Albania, where, according to the memorandum, there is a population of 120,000 Greeks and 80,000 Albanians, some Orthodox Christians and some Mohammedans. Many of the Albanians are anti-Greek, but many others would prefer inclusion in the Greek Kingdom, now democratic and well governed, and including a large population which is Albanian by blood but Greek in national consciousness, to continued union with the less civilized Albanians of the north, who will probably be under a protectorate in any case. Italy has claims here, but Mr. VENIZELOS is understood to agree to the Italian occupation of Valona and other strategic points, and with good will on both sides it should be easy to come to a settlement.

The Greeks would, of course, like to have Constantinople, where they form a racial group not much smaller than that of the Turks and larger than all others combined. But Mr. VENIZELOS sees that international interest may dictate an independent State around the Straits, under the supervision of the League of Nations. Such a State would include many Greeks outside of the city, both in Europe and in Asia; indeed, since the passing of Turkish power would probably result in a considerable Turkish migration from Stamboul, the Greeks would probably soon be the largest, as they would in any case be the most active, element in the population.

Greece also asks for Thrace. Here the problem is complicated by the fact that the Greek population is dominant on the coast, but further back considerably mixed with Bulgarians and Turks. Even there, however, it is very strong in the cities and has a great number of villages. In considering the Thracian question the Conference should keep in mind the Bulgarian political record of the last six years; as yet the Bulgarian State is eminently untrustworthy, and we have seen and heard enough of Bulgarian mistreatment of alien populations.

The Greek claim for Smyrna and a considerable strip of territory on the western coast of Asia Minor is supported by the fact that the Greeks here are not only the majority of the population, but are rapidly increasing; and the testimony even of hostile witnesses is that in agriculture as well as in commerce and industry they are overwhelmingly superior to the Turks. Further east there is a Greek population of several hundred thousand, partly along the southern coast of the Black Sea in a strip including the cities of Trebizond and Samsun, and partly in considerable colonies in the interior. Since political union of these regions with Greece is impracticable for geographical reasons, Mr. VENIZELOS admits that they might be attached to the Armenian State, with whose prospective representatives Greece has lately been in excellent relations.

Finally, "all islands which are eth-"nographically, geographically, and "economically Greek." This means Cyprus, turned over to England by Turkey in 1878, with a population four-fifths Greek, and the Dodecanesus, a group of islands of which Rhodes is the largest, off the southwest coast of Asia Minor, whose population is practically all Greek. These have been held by Italy since the Italo-Turkish War of 1911-12. Cyprus, it is understood, was offered to Greece by England when an attempt was made to get CONSTANTINE into the war at the beginning of the Dardanelles campaign.

As for the Dodecanesus, it is hard to see how its retention can be of any use to Italy, especially since the population has often expressed its desire to join the rest of the Greek nation. Italy has economic claims in Asia Minor, but it is understood that here, too, the Greek Government is willing to give quid pro quo by recognizing an Italian sphere of influence in the very inadequately developed territory lying to the east of the Greek population on the west coast. The mines of Herakleia, the commercial possibilities of the south coast, and the development of an interior now held chiefly by the unprogressive Turk should be worth more to Italy than the Dodecanesus.

THE WAR CONTRACTS.

Relations between the War Department and its contractors are strained to the point of hostilities. This is the more regrettable because the contractors are supported by such respectable representatives of business opinion as the New York Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association, and the United States Chamber of Commerce. Their opinion is detached, and therefore more weighty than the similar position taken by the representatives of 400 trades concerned in domestic contracts involving some two billions of dollars and more then a billion of foreign contracts. The prime contractors cannot settle with the subcontractors, neither set of contractors can settle with their banks, and all because contracts were made in a hurry without written formalities, at a time when delay in deliveries would have stopped the war machine. Their bills will not be paid without the enactment of a law to fit the case, and the department wants a bill to put the contractors at its mercy; failing that, it refers them to the Court of Claims. Claims against the Government have a record of lasting a generation or so, and of being paid to estates of contractors. Such relief is of no assistance with a discounted promissory note past due in a bank, and contractors may be pardoned for asking some other method of settlement.

Nobody is asking that wrongful claims shall be paid, either forthwith or at all. The suggestion that the dollar-a-year men gave contracts in which they were interested, and which they were afraid to sign, but which they now seek to have validated by statute which the department opposes, is a reproach to the makers rather than to honest contractors. No one of the several bills pending has that effect. The Dent bill authorizes the department to make settlements in its discretion respecting contracts which have no existence until technical defects are cured, such as the lack of a signature confirming a telephone order which was filled sometimes before a contract could be written. The Chamberlain bill authorizes the department to waive technical defects. Neither bill "validates" any contract without action by the department which there is no way of compelling it to take against its will, or contrary to public interest. What business men are asking is that either side should have the right of review of the department's action by appellate commission within thirty days after settlement of the contract. The department's proposal of appeal to the Court of Claims is worthless to business men with obligations falling due.

The necessity of legislation is due to the purchasing panic which seizes governments under conditions of war. Incredible quantities of supplies are on hand, bought oftentimes regardless of price. The purchase has been reported of 175,243,056 pieces of underwear, 174,087,036 pairs of stockings, and "other articles in proportion." It is inconvenient to pay bills contracted for in that superfluity, as it now seems, but which nobody condemned when the buying was done. The department did not dare to do otherwise, and its action is not under censure. But no patience should be felt with delay in meeting honest engagements, nor should there be any hesitation in dealing promptly and sternly with any contractors who may seek to take an unfair advantage of the Government's war necessities.

GRIEVANCES AIRED.

No American General commanding in France can be a hero to a member of Congress who has grievances of his home troops to air. The American people admire the commander of their armies in France for his soldierly qualities, his skill as an organizer, and his achievements in the field, and they will be reluctant to believe that he abused his great authority by making personal war upon his lieutenants and exalting the unworthy over officers who had distinguished themselves in battle. That is the gravamen of this case which Representative GALLIVAN of Massachusetts seeks to make out against JOHN J. PERSHING in language that sometimes borders on the hysterical and is often undignified. Thus, General EDWARDS was relieved of his command and ordered home "because he refused to do dirty "work" and "remove National Guard "officers who had served until the "last few weeks of the war to make "places for pets of West Point and "Fort Leavenworth."

General EDWARDS, an Ohio man, took the 26th, or New England, Division to France, and it saw a great deal of fighting under him. In the Boston Representative's account of the sacrifice of General EDWARDS there is this version of what occurred:

> He was told to his face by a whipper-snapper Chief of Staff of the 26th Division named DUNCAN U. MAJOR, "If you don't get these National Guardsmen we will get you." And they got CLARENCE EDWARDS, but he refused to do their dirty work, and when he came to Boston he owned that town, and as long as he lives he will have a place in the hearts of New England second to no man else.

Mr. GALLIVAN told the House that he had written two or three letters to General PERSHING and had never received a reply from him or "from any "member of his numerous and highly "tailored staff, who from the incep-"tion have slept comfortably in Chau-"mont and Tours." The American people will not approve Mr. GALLIVAN in the implied aspersion. Nor will the style in which he reflects upon the professional knowledge and courage of "these other fellows," the alleged beneficiaries of favoritism, be admired. As an advocate Mr. GALLIVAN is addicted to violence of expression and injures his case, if he has any.

It seems that when Representative GALLIVAN called upon General MARCH, the Chief of Staff, for an explanation of why the New England Division was not permitted to come home, "one "SWING, a Major in the National "Army," was directed by General MARCH to say that it was a matter for General PERSHING to decide, that the 26th Division was "not yet on priority." Now, it should be plain to the Representative from Boston that it is for the commander of the army to determine what troops he desires to keep in France for duty and the order of their return to America. That in effect was what Secretary BAKER told Mr. GALLIVAN, but he would not be satisfied, and on a second visit he found Mr. BAKER "peevish." He seems to be a hard man to give information to or to please.

Mr. GALLIVAN'S remarks excited several other members of Congress, who took up the cudgels and beat the air for troops from their districts held in France, and for officers who had been wrongly relieved or neglected. We have had a large army in France, more than 2,000,000 officers and men. Are there to be avalanches of complaints and charges by members of Congress and Governors when merit seems to have been overlooked, and when transfers and detentions occur in orders? General PERSHING is big and able enough to speak in his own defense, but it will be difficult to hold him responsible for every act of his subordinates. Gentlemen in Congress should be sure of their facts before indicting officers in France for inefficiency, favoritism, and injustice.

BOLSHEVISM AND BEER.

Even in dire extremes and amid the clash of arms, a German is still a German and a Bolshevik a Bolshevik. In the final hours of the collapsing Spartacist rebellion in Berlin, the last building to which the rebels clung with heroic tenacity was a brewery. Four or five hundred men sufficed for the garrison of police headquarters, the principal stronghold; as many held the Vorwärts office, but in the brewery the sons of Spartacus were massed by thousands, and many women among them. Heavy artillery was taken there from other positions, and supplies were banked up for a long siege. The Ebert Government must have breathed a heavy sigh of relief when it learned that this acropolis of anarchy had at last been abandoned. Can it be that the stores of beer in situ had been reduced by previous depredations of the counter-revolutionaries?

Equally characteristic is the story of the four Bolsheviki overtaken and captured in their flight across the roofs from a fallen fortress, who couldn't run away fast enough because they were carrying their typewriters with them. The German revolutionary, educated in the manifold controversies of international Bolshevism, may boast that "trained "abroad his arms to wield, Fitz-Spar-"tacus's typewriter was sword and "shield." But a trifle cumbrous and impedimentary in retreat. However, the evidence is valuable as indicating what a Bolshevik regards as his Lares and Penates. One of the first manifestations of the later tendencies of the Russian revolution was a joyous return to the vodka; in our own country it looks as if the camels are coming, but Greenwich Village will defend its California claret to the last. Give a Bolshevik his beer and his typewriter, and he may be content to leave the bourgeois world at peace.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Comparison Between Incomparables. In defense or explanation of the proposal by the British Government to let the Russian Bolsheviki send delegates to the Paris Peace Conference, it is stated that though the British have no more respect or liking for Bolshevism than anybody else, and detest it at least as much, they think it wise to recognize the fact that the Russians are suffering from a terrible infection, and to make a distinction between the disease and its victims in dealing with the situation which this horrible pestilence has created.

This analogy, drawn from medicine, is a plausible one, but it shares the common characteristic of analogies and misleads, as analogies usually do, because it is neither accurate nor complete. Indeed, this particular analogy is particularly fallacious because it rests on the false assumption that doctors can and do distinguish between the patient and his malady.

To render such a discrimination really possible disease would have to be an entity in itself—something that exists and can be studied and treated apart from the patient. That, of course, is not the case, and while the doctor may, and often does, view a poison or a germ as the cause of a disease, and strives to remove the one or to kill the other, it is not either of these, but the patient, that has what corresponds rather remotely to Bolshevism in the Russians—and in too many other people besides.

Only by a severe straining of terms, however, can Bolshevism be described as a poison or a germ. The similitude fails because on one side of it are tangible and measurable realities and on the other is the immaterial product of disordered brains. It is with the brains, or with the owners thereof, that business must be done.

A Likeness Found in Court. It is not to medicine, but to the more familiar field of law, that the apologists of the British Premier's proposal to recognise the Bolsheviki as deserving of a hearing on the same terms as decent and respectable people should have gone for their analogy. The law does not negotiate with murderers or thieves, and the Bolsheviki are both. Instead, it catches them if it can, takes them into court after it has caught them, determines from the evidence the nature and extent of their guilt, and then imposes and executes sentence in accord with statutes made and provided. That, in theory at least, is justice, and in practice it is the nearest approach to justice yet made by poor fallible mortals. Until the prisoner is at the bar, what he has to say for himself, or what his lawyer has to say for him, is not heard, or, if it is, the transaction is called by the harsh name of compounding felony—a process commonly and rightly held to be both dangerous and injurious to society.

The position of the Bolsheviki with respect to representation at the Peace Conference would be much better and different if they were merely accused of crime. In their case there is no presumption of innocence. What they are and have done is known to all the world, partly from observation and partly from their own laboriously plain and explicit announcements of their own acts and intentions. They are confessedly in rebellion against all constituted governments, and they occupy, therefore, precisely the position of pirates.

A Flag for Keepers of Promises. Out on the Pacific Coast there has been devised and is coming into something like general use a new sort of service flag. It is blue instead of red as to its outer part, and in its star-shaped white centre are placed smaller stars, the number of which indicates that of the returned and discharged soldiers who are employed in the store, factory, or other business establishment at the door of which the banner is displayed. Its message to all beholders, as formulated by its inventors, is "we have kept faith with the men who entered the country's service."

This is a good idea, worthy of general acceptance, and, commendable as was the original service flag, its successor is even more commendable in that its claim to honor is made by those to whom the honor really and directly is due. Of the other service flag—the one that is fast losing its significance with the return of peace and the disbandment of the new armies—that was and is not quite true.

Men were not "given" or "sent" to war by anybody, except in the sense that the country as a whole gave and sent them. In the vast majority of cases they went cheerfully and gladly, and for their going, as for what they did after they were in uniform, all the credit was their own, not that of their relatives or their employers. The people who for one or another sufficient reason remained at home do have, however, the right, which is also a privilege, to make manifest the fact that they are doing now, as in the past, their part as patriotic citizens—that though republics have been charged, sometimes justly, with having short memories for service rendered, the accusation of ingratitude does not lie against those who fly this new flag. As all who joined the colors did not come back to seek again their old positions, there cannot be stars for all of them, but there can be many—enough for all who are alive.

They Should Have Made Things Plain. With the general tenor of the defenses of the Y. M. C. A. that are made by the officials and friends of that organization there will be agreement as to their reasonableness and adequacy. It is obvious that many of the charges now in circulation are based on misunderstandings of the facts, and especially on misunderstandings of the tasks assumed. Certainly it is not fair to criticise the Y. M. C. A. for not doing things that were outside of its province as defined by the Government.

In some way, however, and in a way not yet clearly revealed, these misunderstandings were created and perpetuated, and it was in allowing them to start and to continue that the great and serious mistake was made. And it is a mistake which both the Red Cross and the Salvation Army managed to avoid.

Possibly the fundamental error, the chief cause of the present unpopularity among the soldiers of an institution of high achievements and excellent intentions, was its failure to realize the possibility of criticism and its negligence of precautions to avoid it. Good people often err thus, with results that are equally painful and surprising to them. Nobody can safely present even the appearance of evil, and it is especially dangerous for an organization like the Y. M. C. A., dependent, as it is, for its very existence on public confidence and affection.

THE FATE OF THE CZAR.

If Not Put to Death, Would He Ever Be Restored to His Throne?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with interest your comment, on the editorial page of this morning's TIMES, on the improbability of the latest rumor concerning the late Czar, but beg to take exception to it. The two gentlemen who volunteered to share his exile were Dolgorouki and Tatistcheff, (obviously the "Count T." of the rumor,) whose titles of Prince and Count, respectively, are unimportant in view of their ancient Boyar tradition. Both men are of the oldest Russian nobility—until the time of Ivan the Terrible neither feudal lords nor subjects but "free companions of the Czar"—both are of families of note in Russia before the Romanoffs became great, and both or either would undoubtedly have accepted with the entire simplicity of a gallant gentleman such a substitution as is suggested. There is no difficulty whatever to any one who knows them in accepting the story of sacrifice and vicarious execution.

The improbability of the Czar's escape might lie on quite other ground. From a political point of view it is highly improbable that the Czar could ever serve as a rallying point for the monarchical elements of Russia. He was entirely sincere in his abdication, and the world gives him far too little credit for the motives of his action when the full import of the revolution was borne in upon him. To his final understanding of the revolution and, perhaps it is not too much to say, his sympathy with it. It is generally supposed that Alexander Kerensky could testify. Kerensky's intimate association with the Czar, as Minister of Justice of the revolutionary Government, charged with the inquiry into allegations of secret understanding between the Czar, the Czarina, and the Kaiser, gave him opportunities to enlighten the imperial family on the meaning of the liberal movement, of which he was currently reported to have availed himself to the fullest extent.

The imperialist element in Russia, which is still strong, would necessarily look to some collateral member of the Czar's family for leadership. It must not be forgotten that the secret organization which made the Czar's régime so hated and so justly hated, the "Okhrana," (the anti-revolutionary secret police,) not only continues to exist, but exists in the very heart of Bolshevism. It is most natural. This group of unscrupulous men, nominally protectors of autocracy, but in reality wielding their immense power in their own selfish interests, were obliged to enter the inner councils of the Terrorist groups, and were connected, quite obviously, with many of the attempts upon the lives of prominent persons in Russia under the old régime.

Not only would their agents be obliged to play such a rôle in order to cover their real activities, but it was no doubt convenient also to dispose, by this weapon, of reformers within the Government whose plans did not coincide with those of the "secret police." When the revolution unchained popular resentment against the oppressive police, it was the patrolman, the traffic policeman, the man in uniform, and the known criminal detective who suffered—not the secret political police body whose revolutionary disguise at once became readily available as a complete protection. These men rapidly assumed leadership in the most radical parties and gradually resumed connection with the reactionary party, leaving all moderates out of their machinations. They are safe under conditions of disorder, and such conditions may, conceivably, be profitable to them, but their normal atmosphere would be that of absolute autocracy. They are working for a restoration, and their candidate, when the moment is ripe, will be of their own choosing. It is probable that the former Czar would not enter into their calculations—in which case he and his immediate family could only be regarded by them in the light of an obstacle.

Two Benchers of Gray's Inn.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days ago THE TIMES made a complimentary reference to a great honor that Gray's Inn had done me during my stay in London. It should be added that simultaneously Gray's Inn also elected Paul D. Cravath, Esq., of the New York bar, an Honorary Bencher. This gives me an opportunity to testify to Mr. Cravath's very great service to the cause of the Allies in the last year or more. Leaving behind him one of the most lucrative law practices in America, Mr. Cravath went to London and became the counsel for the Interallied Commission, and while in London I heard many favorable comments upon the skill and tact with which he reconciled at times seemingly divergent interests. In his case the recognition of this venerable Inn is richly deserved.

Temper of the Small Nationalities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial entitled "A Time to Speak Softly," you seem to be displeased with the declaration of Dr. Vesnitch, the Serbian Minister in Paris, that the Serbians will fight if their just national aspirations are not satisfied.

In view of the disclosure of secret treaties among the Allies, to barter away small nations over which they had no rights, and for the liberation of which they were claiming to wage the war, the misgivings of Dr. Vesnitch are justified. The sooner the Allies realize the better, that the small nationalities, whether Serbians, Syrians, or Armenians, will not meekly submit to unjust settlements of their national rights.

THE RED MENACE.

Red is a hue of splendor when controlled
By Nature; but, when used by man, grows bold
And, running riot under freedom's name,
Seeks to destroy
What it cannot enjoy—
Balance, reserve, sobriety of aim—
Tyrannical as roaring, unchecked flame.

Its warmth is welcome, mated with cool
green,
As in the merry holly, velvet queen
The rose, poinsettia's gorgeous Christmas stars
And mountain ash,
Nor does its temper clash
With Autumn's golden, bronze, and copper scars.
Is there a dawn or sunset that it mars?

No; and, employed with art as spice or salt,
Red's sleeping fires enkindle man's, exalt
Pride into action as our own dear flag's
Seven brave stripes;
But, smeared by guttersnipes,
Red makes a web of silk a mess of rags,
Both badge and license of a fool that brags.

The pillar of His cloud has served us
well,
But the Red Sea begins again to swell.
What rod can split its waters if they spread
Despite the hands
Lifted by No Man's Land's Millions of chosen, freedom-martyred dead?
It is no god, but Satan, who wears red!

A COROT SOLD TO MUSEUM.

"Don Quixote," a Panel Painted in 1868, Goes to Cincinnati.

When Corot visited his friend Daubigny at Auvers in 1868 he painted a series of five panels in a vestibule leading to his own apartment. These beautiful panels were sold after Daubigny's death, and one of them has just been acquired from the Knoedler Galleries by the friends of the Cincinnati Museum of Art to be hung in the museum. The subject is "Don Quixote" and illustrates the pseudo adventure of the good knight when he and his squire Sancho Panza see the poor peasant Cardenio bathing in a brook and, mistaking him for a wild man of the woods, Don Quixote prepares to give him battle. There is the sprightly humor with which Corot's friends were familiar in his treatment of the theme. The little figures of the knight and squire silhouetted against the sky upon a distant hillside have a certain farcical aspect which does not in the least interfere with the noble effect of the composition as a whole, and the gesture of the nude peasant hastily scrambling up the bank is also touched with the comic spirit.

It is characteristic of Corot that he thus could play with the human elements of the scene and not interrupt the lyric beauty of his landscape. He chose the subject of Don Quixote on account of the interest of his friend Daumier in the work of Cervantes, and he adopted the type of figure used by Daumier in his own paintings of Cervantes subjects.

Corot is not usually thought of as a decorator, but he did many decorations in the course of his life. There are the panels he painted for the bathroom of Robert's house at Mantes, taking the brushes of the ordinary house painters who were working on the room out of their hands and producing with them and with the colors they were using a notable series of "Souvenirs d'Italie." In 1847 he painted a number of panels for a little kiosk in the garden of the house at Ville d'Avray, where he made his home with his mother. These were a birthday present for his mother, and on one of them is painted the little house itself. His large "Baptism of Christ," painted on canvas, was a decoration for a Paris church, and he painted four frescoes for the church at Ville d'Avray and fourteen for the village church at Rosny. There are also panels in the houses of various friends. The large picture "The Sleep of Diana" acquired by the Metropolitan Museum about ten years ago was painted at about the same time as the "Don Quixote" just acquired by the Cincinnati Museum, and is in the same mood. It also was painted as a decoration for a room and was ordered by the architect who built Prince Demidoff's house.

The Cincinnati picture has been exhibited in Glasgow, Edinburgh, London, Boston, and quite recently in New York. It hung for thirty years in the house of James Cowan of Paisley, and previously was owned by Mr. McGavin, the well-known Glasgow collector.

ART NOTES.

Portraits of Civil War Officers on View at Union League Club.

At the Union League Club this month a pretty act of commemoration has been accomplished in the hanging of a collection of portraits of officers of the civil war and other famous Americans of the past, whose illustrious names are thrust into the historical background by the events of the last four years.

Mr. Watrous has placed on the wall above the collection the motto, "Lest We Forget," which expresses the whole idea of the exhibition. The artists, however, may fairly share in the remembrance accorded to their sitters. The fine, serious head of Major General George G. Meade, for example, is beautifully painted by the now almost forgotten Thomas Hicks, National Academician, who has placed Meade against a landscape background and enveloped him in a silvery atmosphere as graciously as though he were a figure in a Corot legend instead of the man who met and defeated the best General and the strongest army on the Confederate side.

Major General George H. Thomas is one of Eastman Johnson's best efforts in portraiture. The picture has hung for years in one of the lower rooms of the club, where no one could see it to advantage, and it well deserves its present opportunity to reveal its merits. The other portraits are General Grant by Healy, General Sherman by Chester Harding, General Sheridan by Fagnani, and Admiral Farragut by H. A. Loop.

There is also a group of statesmen painted from life by Francis B. Carpenter for his well-known painting, "The Emancipation Proclamation," brisk studies from sittings of only two or three hours each, and wearing the freshness of a first impression and a first attack upon the canvas.

In the rear of the gallery is another group of diploma paintings lent by the National Academy of Design and painted in accordance with the rule that every Academician-elect must present to the Academy a specimen of his art before he can qualify and receive his diploma. A very interesting little collection has been chosen from among the many owned by the Academy. Here is Sargent's portrait of Claude Monet, eloquent of the massive peasant type of the painter who chose for his field the most evanescent and elusive aspects of the natural world. Here is Gilbert Stuart's unfinished portrait of Mrs. Walley, throwing light on his way of building up the delicate structure of his finished work. Here is an "Autumn Afternoon," by John Kensett, as different as possible from the dry, tight painting of his usual exhibition picture, and here is a fine sheep picture by Henry Golden Dearth. The exhibition is one to visit if one happens to have a card of invitation. It lasts through today and tomorrow.

Argentine Sentiment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an expression of sentiment from the South American republic, I beg to inclose copy of extract from a letter from the Cia. Sansinena de Carnes Congeladas, Buenos Aires, dated Nov. 26. We feel that the people of the United States should understand how the victory was regarded in the South American republic.

A. H. BENJAMIN.

[Inclosure.]

Since we last addressed you the international situation has become defined and the Central Empires have surrendered, their power shattered and broken. An event of such transcendental importance could not fail to stir the spontaneous enthusiasm of the Argentine people—always profound admirers of, and stanch adherents to, the allied cause—and the whole country has, ever since the signing of the armistice, been "en fete." Holidays were declared and commercial houses closed, with the notice attached to their doors, "Closed in honor of the victory of the Allies," and many processions, all provoking the greatest enthusiasm, paraded the streets. There is no doubt that Buenos Aires has never before witnessed such celebrations, and it is difficult indeed to imagine this to be a neutral country.

MAYOR SAYS LABOR CANNOT IGNORE LAW

Rebukes the Central Federated Union for Opposing Police on Ferryboats.

ASSAILS MAHER'S POLICY

"Cruel and Inhuman," Hylan Declares, Is His Course Toward Residents of Staten Island.

Mayor Hylan sent a letter yesterday to Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federated Union, in which he takes exception to the action of the union in opposing the employment of the police to keep the municipal ferries running during the recent harbor strike. The Mayor in his letter says:

"I am in receipt of your letter of Jan. 11, in which you assume, on behalf of organized labor, to condemn the action of the city authorities in using city property and city employes to prevent the starvation, not only of the wounded soldiers and sailors in the hospitals on Staten Island and in the other public institutions, but babies and children as well, who were to be sacrificed if necessary as a cold-blooded piece of strategy as a part of the fight plan of certain labor leaders. The city administration and the people of Staten Island had no part in the controversy, neither did the sick and helpless in the hospitals. Before the United States Shipping Board in Washington, on Nov. 29, Captain Maher, representing the committee of the marine workers, stated that the municipal ferries were not and would not be involved, and admitted that there was no dispute about the rate of wages or the hours of employment.

"So far as the city and municipal ferries were concerned there was no dispute about the rate of wages nor the eight-hour day. The city employes, enjoying the benefit of the civil service are a favored class. They are protected in their wages and in their hours of labor, and in their employment. If under these circumstances civil service does not assure the city service, then civil service is a failure.

Calls Maher Policy "Cruel."

"President Delahunty of the Marine Workers' Affiliation stated, so I am informed, that he recognized the situation of the people of Staten Island, where there were hospitals with sick and wounded, was exceptional, and that they should not be made victims in a fight which was not of their making or under their control. Mr. Maher, however, said: 'I will not consent to any change in policy. I do not care how much suffering or inconvenience may come to anybody; the more inconvenience and the more hardship there is inflicted on the people, the better will be our chance of winning.'

"This is a wicked, outrageous, cruel and inhuman policy. The Kaiser, because he had physical power to do so, rode brutally over the unfortunate people of Belgium, regardless of the fact that they were no party to his quarrel, justifying himself on the ground of 'military expediency.'

"When Corporation Counsel Burr called attention to the fact that city employes who accepted the protection of the civil service law had a different obligation than men privately employed, Mr. Maher said: 'I have no regard for the civil service law; the laws are of no use to working men anyhow; the only laws that are any good are those passed by the unions; they can be enforced by the unions if the unions are strong enough, and can be repealed by the unions when necessary without being subject to any interpretation by the courts.'

"Your organizations evidently do not understand the facts or realize that the spokesmen for the unions were satisfied to have organized labor in this country regarded as disciples of Lenine and Trotzky, not only defiant of the laws of the land, but willing to sacrifice the lives of the people, who were not only helpless but in no way responsible for the dispute of the marine workers. Many a man who ordinarily would favor municipal ownership is going to hesitate if he is made to feel that because of a dispute between a private employer and a private employe not related in any way to the public service every city employe can be arbitrarily ordered out on strike in defiance of law and order.

"I have been for many years, and am, a member of a labor union in good standing, and every sane, practical effort for better hours and better wages for the toiler has my heart's quick sympathy and approval, but brutal, strong-arm methods can never win any real substantial victory for the cause of organized labor any more than it did for the Kaiser.

Duty of Employes.

"The law of this State places upon the policemen, firemen, engineers, and other employes a special duty to protect the health and lives of all the people. They are public servants who must not be interfered with by any special interests or made the agents of any side of any controversy. When Mr. Maher reckoned to use his great power to cut off the supplies of the sick and helpless of this community and commanded the city employes to back him up, he not only violated the law of humanity, but by attempting to terrorize the city employes into violating their obligations to all the public, Mr. Maher and these employes ran foul of the penal law regarding conspiracies against the public health.

"All signs point to a slowing down of commercial and industrial activity in this country during what is commonly known as the 'readjustment' period. That means we are going to have hard times for a while. One of the things that your organization ought to do for its members is to advise them of the likelihood of hard times that may come so that they may now try to lay aside enough out of their earnings to carry them over the lean period. I have a duty to perform under oath of office and the strong-arm and unlawful methods used by some vicious labor leaders, the profiteers in the necessities of life, the special privilege seekers, and the exploiters of the people, so far as I am concerned, one and all without discrimination will be treated as the law directs."

The sub-committee of the War Labor Board will meet again this morning at 10 o'clock to take additional testimony on labor conditions at this port. The committee was to have met yesterday in the City Hall, but postponement was made necessary by a meeting of the full War Labor Board in Washington yesterday.

An eight-hour day for marine workers was opposed yesterday in Newark at a meeting of the vessel owners' division. The protest was made on the ground that the eight-hour day would mean a large increase in the cost of transportation, and that it might cause the destruction of many of the water transportation lines. The protest in the form of a resolution was forwarded to former President Taft, one of the Chairmen of the War Labor Board. The division is headed by Joseph H. Wood of the Newark Express and Transportation Company. It is said to represent vessel owners in Newark Bay and the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers.

LOSS IN STATE REVENUE.

Deficit Is Due to Falling Off of the Excise Taxes.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 15.—State revenue for the first six months of the current fiscal year ended on Dec. 31 showed a net loss of $1,400,000, Controller Travis reported tonight. According to the records, this deficit was due largely to a falling off of excise taxes and a like deficiency in revenue returns from the other indirect sources, excepting corporation and direct State taxes, where gains of $1,014,882 and $751,406, respectively, over a corresponding period in 1917 were shown.

Owing to war conditions affecting the high cost of everything required to carry on State Government, increased expenditures were necessary in all of the different departments save the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial, where reductions aggregated $327,391.

TRINITY PEWS FREE TO ALL AFTER MAY 1

Vestry Adopts Dr. Manning's Suggestion to Make the Church Democratic.

SET ASIDE OLD TRADITION

Thirty Pews Are Held in Fee Simple, but Owners Are Expected to Give Them Up.

The vestry of Trinity Parish, it was announced yesterday, at a meeting on Monday night adopted by a unanimous vote the suggestion of the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, the rector of the church, that the renting of pews in the parish be abolished.

Dr. Manning urged this in a sermon on Dec. 29 of last year, arguing that the church should act upon the lessons of democracy taught by the war to abolish apparent discrimination in favor of members of the congregation from whom money was received by the church in pew rentals. The "free pew" idea, which has been the cause of many controversies in the past, came into general favor immediately after Dr. Manning's sermon, and the Vestryman decided to act at once. On Monday night they adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, (1) That the seats in Trinity Church, St. Paul's Chapel, and St. Agnes's Chapel, so far as the same are under the control of this corporation, be made free, as are the seats in the other churches of the parish, and that this action be taken as an expression of thanksgiving to Almighty God for the victory which He has granted to us, and as an evidence of our desire to do all that we can at this great moment in the world's history to make the Church the central place of human fellowship which it should be.

"(2) That a committee be at once appointed to formulate a plan for carrying this purpose into effect, and to report the same at the next monthly meeting of the Vestry in order that those who at present rent pews may have the notice of this change in policy."

Some Held in Fee Simple.

Some of the seats cannot be made free by the act of the Vestry as they are owned in fee simple by individuals or estates. The opening of rented pews to the general public will begin on May 1 at Trinity, as they have always been rented for a year in advance from May.

The members of the committee appointed by the Vestry are: David B. Ogden, clerk of the Vestry; George F. Crane, controller of the parish, and Francis S. Bangs, Vestryman and member of St. Agnes's congregation.

Pews have been rented at Trinity Church for the last 221 years. The revenue derived from pew rental has not been great, it was said, as the rates had not been raised for fifty years, and it is not expected that the church will suffer financially to any material degree from the change in policy.

"It is a striking sign of the times," said Dr. Manning yesterday, "that in a parish with such venerable traditions as Trinity, and where old customs have so strong a hold, this action should be taken unanimously with the desire to make the life of the church as truly democratic as it should be. The proposal made recently that Trinity should take this action aroused widespread interest. Great numbers of letters were received from people in this and other cities commending the project. These letters have come from Jews as well as Christians, and not a few of them from men not connected with the church. The feeling expressed in all of them is that the discontinuance of rented seats will help to bring the church nearer to the life of the people.

"There are in Trinity about thirty pews which belong in fee simple to individuals or estates. Some of them have been held from time immemorial by the families which now own them. It is hoped that some of the owners of these pews will present them to the church, and that all of the owners may be willing to co-operate in the newly adopted policy."

CRUISER IN WITH TROOPS.

St. Louis Brings 346th Field Artillery—3 Transports Due Today.

Another United States cruiser, the St. Louis, arrived yesterday from Brest with troops, having taken thirteen days to make the voyage on account of storms. The cruiser had forty-five officers and 1,255 men of the 346th Field Artillery, including twenty-six ill and wounded. The regiment, consisting of 1 per cent. regulars and the rest men who were trained at Camp Lewis, Wash., saw service in Flanders with the 91st Division. It returned under the command of Colonel Samuel Frankenberger.

The men are chiefly from Minnesota, Washington, California, and Montana. Their Colonel is a native of Charleston, W. Va., and has been in the regular army since 1902. They were met at the pier at West Twenty-fifth Street yesterday morning by twelve Salvation Army officers, including the McAllister sisters, Violet and Alice, who were the first American women to go to France and make doughnuts for the soldiers.

The transport Belgic is due at Pier 58, North River, foot of West Sixteenth Street, at 10 o'clock this morning with eighty officers and 3,188 men, including a number of New Yorkers in the casual companies. The transport Wilhelmina is also due today at Hoboken with 1,000 officers and men from the 84th and 86th Division, including 177 sick and wounded. The supply ship Sagua arrived yesterday afternoon with three army officers on board, who were landed by a naval tug from Liberty Island, where the vessel anchored for the night.

CITY CHAMBERLAIN QUITS.

Mayor Announces Resignation of Alfred Johnson on Dec. 26.

Mayor Hylan announced yesterday that on Dec. 26 City Chamberlain Alfred Johnson resigned his office to take effect upon the appointment of a successor. Mr. Johnson gave up his $12,000 a year place in order to resume active business with Anderson, Burns & Co., a Stock Exchange firm in which he is a special partner.

In his letter, Mr. Johnson asked to be relieved from his duties on Dec. 31, but Mayor Hylan urged him to remain until he could find a successor, so, it is said. Mr. Johnson consented to remain for a short time longer. At the City Hall there is talk that the place may go to the Mayor's Secretary, Grover Whalen.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Johnson writes:

"As you have known, I have for some time felt that the pressure of my personal affairs might make this necessary. Consulting only my inclination, I should have preferred to have remained as long as you would wish it. Now I find I cannot remain longer without a greater sacrifice of my material interests than the situation seems to require. Permit me again to express my appreciation of the high honor of my appointment and of your constant co-operation and support in the discharge of my duties."

Mr. Johnson was appointed City Chamberlain by Mayor Hylan on Jan. 2, 1918. He has been prominent in Democratic politics and was Under Sheriff under Sheriff Nicholas J. Hayes.

PREPARE FOR BIG STRIKE.

Garment Manufacturers Expect 35,000 to Go Out Monday.

A general strike of 35,000 garment workers, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is inevitable, according to sentiments expressed last night at a meeting of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, held in the Hotel Martinique for the purpose of enlisting the support of local independent manufacturers, about 500 of whom attended the meeting. Polling on a strike vote by the unionists begins today and ends Saturday, and if the manufacturers have correctly sensed the situation, Monday should see the garment industry again engaged in a bitter war.

A meeting of all the dress contractors in the city will be held tonight in the Hotel McAlpin to consider the threatened strike.

Last night's meeting was presided over by Morris Weiss, President of the association. The principal speaker was Harry A. Gordon, the organization's general counsel. Judging from questions put by the independents and by their applause, it was thought that they will, for the most part, stand back of the association in the coming fight.

"The gentlemen of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association have come to their decision," said Mr. Gordon, "and they have determined that they will to the limit of their resources, financially and morally, do everything they can to resist this invasion of their rights by the union. We have organized along every line, and the members of this association have pledged themselves in writing to help each other to the limit. We regard this fight as one that will decide the question of life or death for the garment industry. We shall stand together, so that we will not fail."

HENRY J. DUVEEN, ART DEALER, DIES

Senior Member of Duveen Brothers Expires at 64 in Fifth Avenue Home.

GATHERED MORGAN WORKS

Later Paid Millions for Famous Collections—Indicted in 1910 for Customs Violations and Heavily Fined.

Henry J. Duveen, senior member of the firm of Duveen Brothers, international art dealers, with houses in New York and Paris, and also in London until 1914, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 907 Fifth Avenue, after an illness of some time. Mr. Duveen, who was in the sixty-fifth year of his age, was one of the leading art critics in the world.

The firm was started in the '70s in London by Joel Joseph Duveen, his brother, who kept a small shop in Oxford Street, where he sold Dutch potteries and later dealt in period furniture. Before his death in 1908 he was knighted by King Edward as Sir Joseph Duveen, in recognition of his generosity in building a gallery for the pictures Turner, the great artist, had left to the nation.

Henry J. Duveen, the youngest brother, came to New York City about forty years ago and opened a small art shop in John Street, where he handled antique silverware, ivory carvings, rare porcelains, period furniture, and Oriental rugs. He was very successful from the start, and soon entered partnership with the elder brother under the name of Duveen Brothers. They moved into large quarters at Broadway and Eighteenth Street, and a Paris branch was opened. From there the firm moved to Fifth Avenue and Thirty-first Street and a few years ago to its present premises at 720 Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Duveen came to New York when the art life was in a state of transition, and he became closely identified with the formation of most of the celebrated art collections in America, such as those belonging to James A. Garland, J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Altman, Mr. Gould, Mr. Widener, Henry C. Frick, Mrs. Hamilton Rice, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The firm brought to this country furniture which was a heritage of the most luxuriant period which France has ever known. Carvings, bronzes, hangings, and all manner of adornments were combined by the firm in remarkable decorations.

In 1909, Duveen Brothers disposed of their general business in interior decorations and sold their warehouses, and devoted themselves exclusively to the selling of the extremely fine art works. About this time the firm made some purchases which startled the art world. They purchased the art collection of Rudolphe Kahn for $5,000,000, which works were passed into the great American collections like those of the late J. P. Morgan, Mrs. C. P. Huntington, and Mrs. Archer M. Huntington, and a short time later they purchased the Maurice Kahn collection, valued at $2,500,000. Henry J. Duveen's name will be especially remembered because of his efforts in the formation of the late J. Pierpont Morgan's collection, part of which was later purchased by his firm. They purchased the Morgan collection of porcelains for $3,000,000 and were the agents through whom Henry C. Frick bought the Fragonard panels out of the Morgan collection for $1,425,000.

Many years ago Henry J. Duveen was decorated with the Order of the "Legion d'Honneur" as a mark of appreciation by the French Government of his many artistic endeavors.

All members of the firm figured in actions brought by the Government in 1910, it being alleged that they had brought in many costly articles of art without paying the full amount of duty. In civil litigation they paid over to the Government $1,200,000, one-half being said to be for duties due the Government, and the other half for the penalty for failure to pay these duties. Indictments for violation of the customs regulations were also brought; all pleading guilty. Henry J. Duveen, who was said at that time to be suffering from Bright's disease, was fined $15,000; Benjamin J. Duveen, a nephew, was fined a like sum, and Louis J. and Joseph Duveen, also nephews, of the Paris and London houses, were fined $10,000 each, they having voluntarily come to America and entered a plea of guilty. Laxity of the administration of the customs regulations was said to be partly responsible for the undervaluation of the importations.

Mr. Duveen is survived by his wife and son Lieutenant Geoffrey Duveen, of the British Army, who is at present a passenger on the steamer Lapland, due here next Sunday on leave to visit his relatives.

WESTERN MARKETS LOST TO GERMANS

Jobbers Say Enemy Goods Will Not Make Reappearance for Generations.

HEMISPHERE FOR OUR TRADE

100 Notion Buyers in Convention at Waldorf-Astoria Discuss America's Opportunities After War.

German-made needles, pins, and hundreds of other dry goods "notions" of Teutonic manufacture will not make their reappearance in the markets of the Western Hemisphere for a generation or more, it was declared at yesterday's annual convention of the Jobbers' Association of Notion Buyers, held at the Waldorf-Astoria. Big opportunities for the American manufacturer and jobber in developing production and sales of these articles of everyday household use were predicted.

E. C. McCabe of the Arbuthnot-Stephenson Company of Pittsburgh presided at the meeting, which was attended by 100 notion buyers from the country's largest wholesale dry goods jobbing firms.

Leo Lichtenstein of the Vulcanized Rubber Company of this city, who had as his subject "Market Conditions and After-the-War Prospects in Notions," said that a new era had arisen for the American manufacturer, as well as the jobber. Instead of the manufacturer being confined to forty-eight States, and the jobber to a few of his intermediate States, they now had the entire Western Hemisphere in which to do business. The speaker said that no time should be lost in establishing American merchandise in foreign markets.

"Before the war," Mr. Lichtenstein said, "Germany predominated in Canada, Central and South America, because the employes of German manufacturers worked from fourteen to sixteen hours a day, at one-half the wages we paid. This prevented us from getting a foothold, and if the same conditions are ever to return, although I do not expect they will, I believe it will at least require many years before Germany can again transact business in these quarters.

"A few days ago a business man, who, I believe, is in this room, said to me that export business was, in his opinion, a 'rainbow,' for the reason that it would not last. He considered that the financial arrangements of this country were not adequate to transact business with foreign countries. I am now prepared to say to this gentleman that the people of the United States, whenever they make up their minds to accomplish something, always succeed, as has been demonstrated by our army and navy. There is no doubt in my mind, but that means will be devised whereby this country will be in a position to do business in the Western Hemisphere and do it successfully."

The speaker predicted that with world markets open to American goods the day of surplus stocks here was gone, and for that reason he thought the United States would be able to uphold its present standard of wages, or something near their standard, which he considered the nucleus of prosperity, and indicating that the situation with respect to business conditions in the future was bright.

The program called for discussions on the attitude of the notion buyers toward merchandise of enemy origin, and what foreign markets notion buyers should draw from for supplies, with German and Austrian sources a thing of the past. It seemed to be the general opinion that the time was distant when goods of enemy production would make their appearance here in quantity, while the suggestion was made that American manufacturers set to work to produce notion supplies formerly procured abroad.

Discussion of price tendencies and buying policies for 1919 brought out that most of the notion buyers held that lower prices were inevitable, while several manufacturers, present in their capacity as associate members of the association, gave it as their view that labor, raw material, and manufacturing costs generally would operate to hold selling prices close to last year's levels.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President—Vertner M. Smith, Carter Dry Goods Co., Louisville, Ky.; Vice Presidents—N. B. Dieterich, Tootle-Campbell Dry Goods Co., St. Joseph, Mo., and Otto R. Rick, of Adam, Meldrum & Anderson Co., Buffalo; Members of the Executive Committee—Emil Stern, Sanger Bros., Dallas, Texas, and J. E. Osborne, Johnston & Larimer Dry Goods Co., Wichita, Kan.

Dr. T. Iyenaga of the East and West News Bureau spoke last night at the annual dinner of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association, held at the Waldorf-Astoria, when F. A. Patrick of Duluth, Minn., presided. The dinner was attended by 900 dry goods jobbers, textile manufacturers, and selling agents from all sections of the country.

"I am confident," Dr. Iyenaga said, "that a League of Nations will not stand in the way of Japan's occupying the paramount position in the Far East—the fruit of her patient and laborious progress during the last half century. All of us know that some concern has been felt among the British people about the construction of the 'freedom of the seas.' Nor are we unaware that the American people will never consent to see the efficacy of their cherished Monroe Doctrine impaired in any way by a League of Nations."

John S. Lawrence of the Commission for Relief in Belgium told of the large supplies of old clothing accumulated by his organization for relief work abroad. The other speakers were Dr. Stockton Axson, Secretary of the American Red Cross, and the Rev. Isaac J. Lansing of Ridgewood, N. J.

The annual convention of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association will open this morning at the Waldorf.

RAILROAD TAX RATE STANDS

New Jersey Board Denies Application to Have It Reduced.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—In a decision that will effect a saving of several hundred thousand dollars to the commonwealth and to the various municipalities, the State Board of Taxes and Assessment today denied the application of all the principal railroad systems operating in New Jersey for a reduction in the "average tax rate." The original rate certified to the board for Jersey City, and used in connection with the rates from the other taxing districts in arriving at the "average tax rate," was $1.73. The "average tax rate" computed by the board was $2.37. The railroads asked the State Board to substitute the rate of $1.29 for that of $2.37.

In the matter of Jersey City's request for a total increase of more than $30,000,000 in the levy on all railroad property of the second class in that municipality, the board allowed an increase of $185,870 in the value of the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal property, raising it from $2,253,137 to $2,439,007.

$500,000,000 NEEDED FOR RAILROAD LOANS

Congress May Even Be Asked for More to Cover Improvements and Extensions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Another appropriation of $500,000,000 or more will be asked of Congress soon by Director General Hines for the Railroad Administration's revolving fund, to be used mainly in extending loans to railroads to cover the extensive program of improvements and extensions, for which more than a billion dollars probably will be spent this year. Most of the half billion dollars originally appropriated for the revolving fund was spent in financing improvements or purchase of equipment last year. Loans generally are to be made at 6 per cent. and will be repaid to the Government.

Mr. Hines, in a statement today, said that the Railroad Administration's function of financing necessary improvements, as differentiated from the function of the current operation of railroads, "is the reason which will require an early request for a large appropriation."

He explained that capital expenditures of railroads in 1918 and 1919 for extensions of lines, new buildings, bridges, cars, locomotives, and similar purposes are calculated at about $1,627,000,000, including $350,000,000 estimated as necessary in 1919, and $1,227,000,000 authorized for 1918. Of the authorized capital expenditures budgets last year, only $588,000,000 was actually used, and $689,000,000 remained to be spent in 1919.

This means that the Railroad Administration's program for railroad extensions and betterments in 1919 calls for an outlay of $1,039,000,000, or three times as much as was spent by all railroads annually for several years before the war.

In view of the approaching Fifth Liberty Loan campaign, officials believe the railroads would have considerable difficulty floating publicly sufficient securities to pay for improvements which the roads and the Railroad Administration consider advisable to bring the lines up to a high state of efficiency. For this reason, Director General Hines advocates continuance of the policy of Government assistance, regardless of whether Congress extends the period of Federal control.

Referring to the contemplated capital expenditures for 1919, Mr. Hines said: "While a substantial part of this total may not actually be expended during the calendar year 1919, it is apparent that it will be necessary during the year for the Government and the railroad companies to provide in the aggregate a very large amount of money for these improvement purposes. A careful analysis of the situation is on the point of being completed with a view to preparing an estimate for Congress for the necessary appropriation to meet this situation. While it is impossible at present to make an exact estimate of how large an additional appropriation will be needed, it is possible that it may exceed $500,000,000."

URGES ERIE BASIN CLAIM.

Construction Company Wants Award for Land Taken by State.

The hearing in the matter of the claim of the First Construction Company against the State for the appropriation by the State of about 1,500,000 square feet of the Construction Company's property in the Erie Basin, Brooklyn, for a terminal for the new State Barge Canal, was resumed before Judges Ackerson and Paris of the Court of Claims in the Trial Room of the Bar Association yesterday.

The witnesses included Edward Hinman and Walter Lindler, the latter an attorney employed by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. At one point in the testimony Deputy Attorney General Mone asserted that the transaction of buying the property by the First Construction Company was arranged by a syndicate and that its purpose was to obtain from the State a special or extravagant award for its property.

Counsel for the claimants interjected that the syndicate was one of bankers. Mr. Mone learned from Lindler that the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, in making the loan of $1,400,000 for the purchase of the property had paid $500,000 in cash and took a mortgage for $500,000, in addition to the assignment of the award made by the State for its appropriation of the property. It is this award which has been held up by a decision of the Court of Appeals which ordered the present trial of the issue. The hearing will be resumed this morning.

WILL HEAR TAX LIEN SUIT.

Justice Faber to Determine Foreclosure Under Sale by City.

Justice Leander B. Faber will be the first judicial officer to consider an application for a judgment of foreclosure upon a tax lien purchased at a sale by the Department of Assessments and Arrears of New York City since the investigation into the methods of the purchasers of these liens by the Mayor's Committee on Taxation. In the Queens County Supreme Court yesterday he set next Monday for the hearing. The action of Justice Faber may have an important bearing on future proceedings of the Mayor's committee.

Theodora I. Schwartzman, who has been examined in the proceedings had by the committee, is attorney for the plaintiff, Paul Weishart of Brooklyn, who has brought an action to foreclose a lien amounting to $74 against Jacob Aaron and others, residents of Brooklyn. The lien was upon a plot on Ridgewood Avenue, Richmond Hill, and was for $74 and was sold at the Bureau of Assessments and Arrears in Long Island City on June 27, 1916.

INHERITANCE TAX DECISION.

Referee Decides Federal Law Is Not Retroactive.

Edgar M. Cullen of Brooklyn, ex-Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, acting as referee in an action brought by the trustees under the will of Anson Wales Hard, Sr., has decided that the Federal inheritance tax law passed on Sept. 8, 1916, is not retroactive, and does not apply to trust estates created prior to the passage of the law. Mr. Hard died at his home in Lawrence, L. I., in 1917. In addition to his own estate there passed at his death two other large estates held by him in trust for the benefit of his children.

The heirs paid $75,000 to the Government as an inheritance tax on Mr. Hard's own estate, but objected to paying any tax on the trust estates, both of which were created prior to Sept. 8, 1916. The matter came up yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Callaghan in Brooklyn when application for the fixing of allowances for the attorneys and guardians who appeared for the children was filed.

Auctions of British Wool.

The Textile Alliance, Inc., has been informed by its London representative that auction sales of Australian and New Zealand wools will be held in that city as early as possible, probably beginning in April, at the rate of 100,000 bales per month, or more if the market requires. Prices will be fixed not very much lower than present issue prices, and efforts are being made by the British authorities as well as the Dominion and French to stabilize prices. The proposed State purchase of the South African clip has been abandoned and wools from South Africa will be liberated from all import restrictions. There will be no relaxation of the present order on South American wool, as the authorities are opposed to encouraging such imports on account of the exchange position in South America.

Reports on Men's Neckwear.

Information received from salesmen who are now out with the Spring lines of men's broad silk neckwear, is to the effect that business is not as good as was expected. In some sections, however, quite liberal buying is being done by the retail stores. In other sections buyers are holding off in anticipation of lower prices. The local trade is very steady, and there are reports of good buying in all quarters.

Women's Skirts Selling Well.

The last few days have seen a decided increase in the sale of women's skirts. It was said yesterday that, so far, this year's business for Spring delivery is as good as and on some lines better, than it was last year. In the South the sales are very brisk, but in the West and on the Pacific Coast business is said to be more quiet. In nearly every case buyers are asking for a high grade of merchandise, and there is very little discussion in regard to price. Fancy plaid wool skirts and novelty silk goods are meeting with much favor.

Ban Off Castor Beans and Oil.

The Textile Alliance, Inc., is advised by the War Trade Board that the supervision of castor beans and castor oil is no longer required. The alliance therefore cancels its Bulletin 24 in so far as it pertains to the commodities in the United States. Should there be any further importation of the articles consigned through the alliance they are to be released as heretofore. Importers should inform their representatives in foreign countries to release the alliance and consignee on further shipments in order to obviate the necessity of releasing them through the alliance and the resultant charges.

Woolen and Worsted Men Meet.

Suggestions were made yesterday for helping exports in woolens, through the newly formed Textile Alliance Exportation Company, to the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers at a meeting held in the Waldorf-Astoria. The plans thus far are in a tentative stage. A report was also presented showing the way in which the Government is proceeding with regard to canceled contracts, and assurance was given that everything would be done to keep in observance the rule that deliveries of fabrics shall be free on board mill. In addition to this the association resolved to increase the number of its Directors from fifteen to twenty-one in order to have a wider representation of interests.

Underwear Prices for Fall.

Naming of prices for underwear for next Fall was expected yesterday, but most of the mills deferred doing this until next Monday. Three of the mills at Utica gave out price lists on a few of their lines yesterday and the figures interested the jobbers in the market. The prices are higher than last year's, but are below those recent current. Thus the standard 16-pound union suit which was offered last Spring at $14 is now priced at $16.50. A short time ago it was $18. On two-piece suits the new prices are proportionate. The levels are said to represent only a fair profit above production costs, and it was stated yesterday will be followed, according to grade, by mills from other portions of the country.

Gray Goods Prices Soften.

A spurt of activity was shown in the local gray goods market yesterday. Fair sized sales were reported of printcloths as follows: 39-inch 68-72s at 13 cents, 38½-inch 64-60s at 10½ cents, and 64-48s at 9¼ cents. These prices showed a weakening from those of the day before, and, what was regarded as significant, the sales were from first hands. More of the 64-60s, furthermore, could have been had at the price stated, but buyers withdrew some of their bids at the figure and were not disposed to pay more than 10 cents. In sheetings there were a number of sales of 36-inch 5.50s at 9½ cents and of 48-square, same width, four-yard, at 13½ cents.

Demand for Trimmings.

Reports from various sections of the country to manufacturers of dress trimmings are that the demand in the retail stores is for the better grades. Judging from the orders that are being received from the men on the road, these goods are going to be used very extensively this season. Beaded and flat braid girdles are very popular this year. Among the high-class retail shops there is a good sale for double-headed fringe and combinations of beads and fringe with screw tassels.

Chemical and Drug Reductions.

Large accumulations of foreign botanicals, especially from North African ports, continue to be shipped to New York and London as rapidly as ships can be obtained for the purpose, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Heavy receipts here have reduced greatly prices of some products. Importers of menthol have cut the price 75 cents to $1 per pound. Quicksilver has been reduced $5 to $110 per flask. Declines in coal tar crudes and intermediates are also noted. In heavy chemicals there was a slight reduction in the prices of caustic soda, sal soda, and soda ash.

DR. PRICE ASSAILS HEALTH BOARD HEAD

Says Copeland Is Destroying Work Done by Previous Regime.

FIXES BLAME ON THE MAYOR

Objects to Taking Industrial Hygiene Work from Dr. Harris.

The action of Health Commissioner R. S. Copeland in removing the work of industrial hygiene from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, of which Dr. Louis I. Harris is director, is part of a "consistent determination of the present health authorities to destroy the constructive work accomplished in the department under the previous régime," said Dr. George M. Price, Director of the Joint Board of Sanitary Control, in a statement issued yesterday.

Dr. Price, who, in 1915, was a member of the Advisory Committee of the Board of Health, and also a chairman of the special committee which reported on the advisability of the creation of a Special Division of Industrial Hygiene, also charged in his statement that the work of the Bureau of Child Hygiene has been materially curtailed by Commissioner Copeland.

"Commissioner Copeland claims that the reason he transferred the Division of Industrial Hygiene to his own office and away from Dr. aHrris was, in the first place, because the work of the division has to do with general sanitation, ventilation, &c., and, therefore, should not be in the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, and, secondly, that he himself is interested in the work of the division and wishes to have it under his control," said Dr. Price.

"The first argument is, of course, absurd. If the Division of Industrial Hygiene must be transferred from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases because it has to do with light, ventilation, and general sanitation, then the Commissioner to be logical should transfer the functions of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases as to typhoid fever to the Department of Water Supply because typhoid is a water-borne disease, and all the activities against typhus fever to the eDlousing Station of the Bureau of Disinfection, because it is well known that typhus fever is carried by 'cooties.'

"Since the advent of the new administration the work of the Department of Health has ben woefully disorganized. From the first, the Mayor has openly shown his contempt for experts and, as the Health Department contained the largest number of these experts, the Mayor seemed to be determined to destroy almost all the constructive work that had been so successfully done under the previous administration."

Health Commissioner Copeland, in a statement issued yesterday, said that the work of the new Industrial Hygiene Division which he intends to create falls into the Sanitary Bureau, because it has to do with heating, plumbing, &c., into the Bureau of Child Hygiene because the question of child labor is involved, and into the Bureau of Preventable Diseases because of the necessity of considering industrial life as a factor in the production of disease. As to the latter bureau, the Commissioner said he had never had in mind the taking away of the study of industrial life as a factor in the production of disease from that bureau.

The public must understand, said the Commissioner, that the Bureau of Preventable Diseases is charged with the protection of the citizens against diphtheria, scarlet fever, smallpox, typhoid fever, infantile paralysis, pneumonia, influenza, tuberculosis, hydrophobia, cholera, and typhus. "It seems," he says, "that the bureau has a large contract on its hands without taking over the new division which, in no way whatever, supersedes or destroys the functions the Bureau has always had."

BUSINESS RECORDS

In Town.

PREMIER COSTUME CO., INC., manufacturer of dresses at 12-14 West 32d St., has made an assignment to Marcus Helfand. A petition in bankruptcy was also filed against the company by the following creditors: Alfred M. Steiner, $150; J. M. Nelson, $400, and M. H. Schwarts, $5. Frank Drucker of Marcus Helfand's office said that the liabilities are $35,000 and the assets $25,000. The failure was caused by purchasing materials at the high prices prevailing before the armistice was signed and the influenza.

CULLEN MOTOR TRUCKING CORP. of 1 Broadway.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against this corporation by the Pierce-Arrow Trucking Co., Inc., a creditor for $525. The Cullen Motor Trucking Corp. made an assignment on Dec. 24 to Charles W. Walter.

BELL TALKING MACHINE CORP. of 44 West 37th St.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against this company by these creditors: Bronx National Banking Corporation, $500; Edwin C. Barnes & Bros., $45, and J. T. Aghassi, $8.

ROCKAWAY WOODWORKERS' INC., manufacturers of toys of 949 Broadway, has made an assignment to William Henkel, Jr., and Irving S. Dorf. A petition in bankruptcy was also filed against it by these creditors: Abraham Robinson, New York, $1,000; M. P. ANTONIO MENDEZ of 206 West Ninety-ninth Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $5,000 and no assets. The liabilities are all on judgments taken in January in Kings County in favor of five persons for injuries in an automobile accident at Rockville Centre, L. I. The judgments are in favor of James Fessler, $3,000; Irene Fessler, $500; Frank Fessler, $500, and Rose and Charlotte Ryan, $500. He said that he was taken by the Sheriff of New York and lodged in Ludlow Street Jail on a civil process on the judgments. He was employed at $17 per week by a company, but that ceased when he went to jail, therefore he asked to file the petition as a poor person.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Dull, with Strong Spots—Steel Orders Larger Than Expected.

Stocks which were able to make particular appeals to traders in yesterday's market displayed a fair degree of strength, but their number was in the great minority, and the general tenor of business was dull and uninteresting. While prices were irregular, reflective of few influences at work on either side, the day's news was not without encouraging items as affecting industry. Reports from steel trade centres were to the effect that buying since Jan. 1 had been larger than the general impression outside the trade indicated, although it was noted that orders were more for the purpose of completing delayed work in structural and other lines rather than in the way of new expansion efforts. The shipments of finished products in December are reported large, which probably had considerable to do with the substantial decline of orders on hand reported by the Steel Corporation as of Dec. 31. The Iron Age noted, however, that mill operations were not quite as active taking the industry as a whole, as a week ago, and mentioned signs of a surplus of labor at various points. A deduction to be made from reports from steel centres is that the slackening of operations which naturally followed the cessation of war work has so far been gradual and has not afforded a comprehensive survey of what is yet to come. It stands to reason that with 60 per cent. activity at plants there is less employment than when war work was being carried on at a maximum pace. Still, if the backlog of accumulated commercial orders has been supplying work for 60 per cent. of the present great capacity of the country's mills during the weeks when price uncertainty checked new buying, it may well be that the plants will continue as active until the demand for steel at home and abroad begins to expand.

The railroad stocks continued apathetic, and traders hardly looked for any other attitude until new positive developments came to light in the discussion of the railroad future now going on in Washington. The counsel for the Association of Railway Executives offered another argument before the Senate Committee against the proposal of five years of Government control by referring to the possible large and overlapping debts which the roads would have at the end of the period. The Street never took kindly to Mr. McAdoo's proposal, and events of recent weeks have gone to support the contention in financial circles that a railroad plan may be worked out in two years. The steadiness of railroad stocks and bonds has appeared to reflect a belief that prolonged Government control will not be allowed by Congress, but in this sentiment alone there has been nothing to promote a forward movement in the securities. What railroad shareholders are waiting for is the presentation and public comment on a program which will insure the carriers of an unincumbered future, and progress to this end may be looked for in the next few weeks.

The cotton market suffered another substantial decline, and speculators and spinners both seemed to study more closely than before the figures on consumption in December. With hostilities over it was not unnatural that war manufacturing in textile lines declined last month as compared with the same month last year, but market comment indicated that the cotton trade was somewhat disappointed over the extent of the decline and was impressed also by knowledge that operations in foreign mills had slackened. Call money again loaned at 4 per cent., and the foreign exchange market attracted interest through an advance of Swiss rates.

WILL SHARE ITS PROFITS.

Guaranty Trust Adopts Plan for Benefit of Employes.

The Guaranty Trust Company adopted yesterday a profit-sharing plan providing for payments to its employes and officers in addition to their regular salaries. One of its principal features is that through a primary fund the employes of the company are to receive compensation, based on the earnings of the company during any calendar year, in which fund the officers shall have no share. The plan further provides for the setting aside, after dividends, of a secondary fund in which both the officers and employes will share.

The purpose of having two funds is to provided that the employes, through the primary fund, shall be assured of a fairly uniform payment of additional compensation. Through the secondary fund, in prosperous years, the employes will have an increased share and both employes and officers will benefit with the stockholders in the prosperity of the company. This affects more than 2,200 employes and gives each a direct personal interest in the operation of the company.

Popularizing Foreign Securities.

In anticipation of increased listings of foreign securities in the near future, the New York Stock Exchange began issuing yesterday a list of the bid and asked closing prices for all foreign Government and municipal securities traded in. This list, which appears elsewhere, will be put out each day. It is the belief that the market here for foreign securities will broaden greatly within the next year, and in preparation for the increased business the Stock Exchange only recently installed a bond ticker service. Eventually the New York market may have a scope as to world securities similar to that in London and Paris.

The Rise in Stromberg Carburetor.

An explanation for the strength which has been apparent in the shares of the Stromberg Carburetor Company ever since they were first listed on the Exchange last week, was furnished yesterday when it was announced that the Studebaker Corporation had closed a contract with the carburetor company whereby all its cars would be equipped with this device. On the basis of somewhere near capacity production by the Studebaker Company this means the sale of about 40,000 carburetors.

Jump in American Sumatra.

American Sumatra Tobacco was a centre of interest in the early trading yesterday, an advance of more than 8 points being recorded on a comparatively small turnover. The immediate reason for the rise was the announcement of the redemption of $850,000 three-year 5 per cent. notes, part of an original issue of $1,000,000, which were met out of cash funds.

Westinghouse Notes to be Paid.

It has been announced by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company that its $15,000,000 one-year 6 per cent. notes which mature on Feb. 1 will be paid upon presentation at the office of the Central Union Trust Company. It has been provided, however, that those note holders who so desire may exchange the maturing issue for new 6 per cent. notes running for one year from Feb. 1, the indenture securing the new issue being similar in form to that of the old maturity. The announcement of the new note issue into which the old is exchangeable has been made through Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Guy E. Tripp, Chairman of the Board of the Westinghouse Company, states that on Jan. 1 of this year the company had on hand unfilled orders amounting to more than $95,000,000, exclusive of munition orders amounting to $1,500,000. At the close of business Nov. 30, 1918, the company's assets totaled more than $110,000,000, while the liabilities were about $41,000,000. Net income of the Westinghouse Company for the eight months ended with Nov. 30, after payment of capital stock, State and municipal taxes, was about $19,018,000. Interest charges for the same period were $1,567,680, leaving nearly $17,500,000 applicable to Federal income, excess profits taxes, and dividends.

A Turn in the Market.

The setting of a price of $92 a share at which employes of the United States Steel Corporation might subscribe to the 1919 allotment of common stock served in a measure to check not only the pressure against this company's issues yesterday, but also tended to a strengthening of the entire list during the early trading. Apparently the Street has been waiting for some determining factor of influence and found reason for greater confidence in security values when it was realized that there was to be no postponement of the Steel subscription until after the dividend meeting at the latter part of this month. The declaration of a dividend by the Steel Corporation is now looked forward to expectantly as giving a line on what may be the course of business conditions during the coming year, according to the interpretation by the Directors.

A Suggestion.

One of the many plans for the future use of Government constructed ship tonnage that has received more than passing attention is the suggestion that the standardized steel ships which were launched to beat the German submarines should be chartered to private operators on a time charter arrangement. In connection with this plan it has been proposed by shipping men that the question of efficiency of operation, wages, and discipline would be solved provided the Government supplied and paid officers and men employed on the ships.

Money Rates Easy.

There was plenty of loanable money on the Stock Exchange yesterday at 4 per cent. despite the proximity of the Fourth Liberty bond payment date today of 30 per cent. of subscribed amounts. Ease in the money situation has been manifest for some time despite the fact that credits were tense in anticipation of Governmental demand. Bankers hold an optimistic view of conditions because, while purchasing of raw materials has not been much in evidence on a large scale, there has, nevertheless, been no stagnation in retail trade, buying continuing on a scale that has done much to reduce inventories.

Texas Company.

Substantial demand for the shares of the Texas Company appeared in the early trading yesterday, one block of 1,700 shares changing hands at 190. The opening quotation was 188¾, and on good buying the price advanced steadily to 195, easing off in the later trading to 194 at the close. Consistent accumulation of the issue in the past few weeks has caused it to move in a course of its own and independent of the fluctuations of other oil share prices.

Pabst Brewing Company.

As the result of the apparent trend of sentiment in the direction of prohibition the Pabst Brewing Company of Milwaukee has sent a circular letter to preferred shareholders offering them the opportunity of tendering their stock for sale to the company on or before Jan. 20. This offer shows that the company is planning to reduce its outstanding securities, which consist of the $1,590,100 7 per cent. cumulative preferred, $9,764,000 common stock, and $1,574,400 first mortgage serial 4 per cent. bonds. The preferred stock is subject to redemption at $115 and has preference as to the company's assets and dividends. In well informed quarters it is understood that tenders to the company should be not lower than $100.

The Future for American Industry
Even a pessimist will admit that America is in the most fortunate position of any country to re-establish industrial prosperity at home and abroad. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the securities of ably managed American industries are the safest investments in their class in the world. Some particularly desirable examples are explained in our Investors' Letter No. A-17, sent on request.

RAILROAD DEFAULTS ON BOND INTEREST

Clover Leaf Receiver Fails in January Payment on $9,075,000 Prior Lien Issue.

GOVERNMENT HAS FUNDS

Trustees Look for Early Settlement of Differences with Federal Administration.

As the result of the refusal of the receiver for the Toledo, St. Louis & Western Company to accept the Railroad Administration's recent allocation of equipment, a refusal which the United States District Court in Toledo, Ohio, upheld, it became known yesterday that the January interest on the company's $9,075,000 prior lien 3½ per cent. bonds due in 1925, has not been paid. The Farmers Loan and Trust Company as trustee of the mortgage has sent to holders of the bonds a communication which discloses the facts concerning the nonpayment of the interest. It reads in part:

Inasmuch as the receiver's cash had all been turned over to the Government, the receiver found himself without funds as the date of maturity of interest upon the prior lien bonds approached, and in an endeavor to finance himself pending his controversy with the Government he saw fit to file a petition with the above court (the Federal Court at Toledo) seeking to have $1,000,000 of certificates issued with priority over the mortgages, including the prior lien mortgage, in order to raise the money wherewith to pay interest on the mortgage, principal, and interest of equipment obligations and other receivership expenses during 1919.

We have been notified under order of the Court of this application, communicated at once with holders of some of the large blocks of prior lien bonds, and at their request interposed an answer vigorously objecting to the issuance of certificates, as did the trustee under the first mortgage. The result of the whole complicated situation was that the Court authorized the receiver to endeavor to settle his controversy with the Government by accepting a very much smaller number of cars, and pending the negotiation in that direction the Court adjourned the application for receiver's certificates.

We are expecting any day to hear from the receiver that he has settled his controversy with the Government, as he was very hopeful about it, and in case the controversy is settled he is also hopeful of obtaining necessary financial assistance from the Government pending the negotiation of a just compensation contract to cure this default in interest and to finance the receivership in the immediate future.

The Toledo, St. Louis and Western was the first railroad to resort to the courts in an effort to refrain from paying war prices for equipment which was alleged to be unnecessary and which the Director General of Railroads had ordered the road to purchase. The action attracted considerable attention in the railroad world, and it was intimated yesterday that the outcome of the discussion between the Clover Leaf receiver and the Railroad Administration might have some bearing on the attitude of other carriers which have had heavy equipment allocations thrust upon them.

FOR EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

Meeting to Explain Use of Trade Acceptances Here Tuesday.

A campaign to expand the use of bank and trade acceptances in business throughout the country is to be launched next Tuesday at a meeting in the Merchants' Exchange half of the Woolworth Building, when W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and Paul M. Warburg, his predecessor in office, are scheduled to speak. At the meeting the American Acceptance Council is to be formed to succeed the American Trade Acceptance Council, which has been developing the field for the last two years. Bankers, corporation heads, and members of business firms and credit organizations from many cities to the number of 250 are expected to attend.

The formation of the new council has been completed after several months' work by a committee including Beverly D. Harris, Vice President of the National City Bank; Lewis E. Pierson, President of the Irving National Bank; Percy H. Johnson, Vice President of the Chemical National Bank; Jerome Thralls, President of the Discount Corporation, and J. H. Tregoe of the National Association of Credit Men. When the organization was proposed by the committee, it was learned, applications for membership came from all parts of the country.

"The council's chief purpose," said Mr. Johnson yesterday, "is to carry on the educational work in the use of acceptances which was first undertaken by the old organization. No differentiation will be made between bank and trade acceptances in the organization's work, and it is expected that within a short time branch councils will be established in various cities. It is proposed to have an Executive Committee of fifteen members, and the actual business of the council will be conducted by a Managing Director, assisted by a Director of Publicity."

Mr. Johnson said that virtually every bank and trust company in New York, as well as many banking firms and commercial houses, had already gone on record as supporting the new council.

NOTE MORTGAGE INCREASE.

Title Company's Business Shows Dullness of Real Estate Market.

In his report to stockholders of the New York Title and Mortgage Company at their annual meeting yesterday Harry A. Kahler, President, stated that the company's outstanding guaranteed mortgages increased in 1918 $21,976 to $41,005,637, reflecting the dullness of the real estate market in the last year. Mr. Kahler asked stockholders to use their best efforts to aid in the development of the American Trust Company's business. The new concern, which is owned by the New York Title and Mortgage Company, will soon open for business.

Mr. Kahler said that in the year 1918 the demands of the Government for funds to carry on the war greatly restricted investments in mortgages, as well as in other securities. The volume of the company's new mortgage business was, in consequence, reduced. Nearly all loans were for small amounts, but with more than the normal margin of security value, he said. He added that money for mortgages is still in limited supply, particularly for the larger mortgages, but the amount available had been increasing quite noticeably within the last few weeks.

REPORT TOBACCO PROFITS.

British-American Company Shows Net of £3,140,174 for the Year.

In the year ended with September, 1918, the British-American Tobacco Company reported net profits amounting to £3,140,174 after allowing for income and excess profits taxes. The company has also declared a final dividend of 6 per cent., making total disbursements of 30 per cent. for the year.

In their annual report the Directors say that the factories in England in the course of the year have been largely engaged on supplies for troops abroad. Despite the advanced costs of tobacco leaf the net profits for the year of £3,140,174, compare with £3,105,002 in the preceding year before the deduction of excess profits in that period.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

A. E. Ames & Co. are offering at 85.91 and interest to yield approximately 5.50 per cent. $1,625,000 Province of Quebec 4½ per cent. coupon gold bonds due June 1, 1946.

Hughes & Dier have prepared an interesting booklet entitled "Silver and Mexico," which contains information about modern mines in that country in their relation to the future supply of silver.

Lindley M. Garrison, former Secretary of War and now receiver for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, will speak in the Bond Club at its luncheon Jan. 24 at the Bankers Club.

Ensign Hamilton Fell has received his discharge from the service and is back at his desk with Baker, Carruthers & Fell.

Edward S. Moore, who was Assistant Secretary of the Guaranty Trust Company when he joined the navy for the period of the war, has become associated with Gude, Winmill & Co.

J. B. Harris & Co. have prepared a special circular on Cities Service debenture bonds, which is ready for distribution.

"Poor's Complete List of Securities Maturing Jan. 1, 1919, to Dec. 31, 1921," is ready for distribution. Because of increased costs the list is being issued annually and is limited to 1,000 copies.

It is expected that the earnings statement of the Cities Service Company for December and the twelve months of 1918 will be issued early in the coming week.

ARMOUR & CO. SHOW DECLINE IN INCOME

Company Reports Net of $15,247,837, as Compared with $21,293,563 in 1917.

SURPLUS IS $69,366,766

Delivered to Government and Allies Goods Valued at $241,000,000 from Plants Here.

Armour & Co. in the annual report for the year ended Nov. 2, 1918, show a net income of $15,247,837, as compared with $21,293,563 in 1917, and $20,100,000 in 1916. Gross income after deducting all charges, with exception of interest on bonds, debentures, and current loans, was $26,128,610. The gross sales in 1918 amounted to $861,000,000, an increase of $236,000,000 over 1917. Attention is called to the fact that despite the increase, the net profit in 1918 was 1.8 cents on each dollar of sales, as compared with 2.7 cents in 1917. The net profit for the year was at the rate of 9 per cent. on the average net capital invested, and was 14.7 per cent. on the common stock, after provision for the preferred dividends. The report says that increasing demands for additional business facilities made it necessary to reinvest more than $18,000,000 in the business, this being the balance after the payment of the preferred stock dividend and 2 per cent. on the common.

The company's surplus is shown in the report to be $69,366,789, as compared with $56,126,680 in the year previous. The balance sheet places the inventory at $150,894,067, an increase of nearly $50,000,000 over 1917. An increase also is shown in net working capital from $108,869,281 in 1917 to $173,092,199 last year.

In commenting on the company's affairs J. Ogden Armour in his report to stockholders says:

"Our profit account shows that we, along with the consumer, have suffered because of high prices. Our business is predicated on a rapid turnover of a big tonnage at a small margin of profit, and high prices are not conducive to quick turnover. We are helpless in the matter of reducing prices. They are high because of the heights to which live stock and labor have gone. Our labor costs last year were $30,000,000 more than the preceding year. The same number of pounds of live stock cost us in 1918 $100,000,000 more than in 1917. The United States Government, through the agency of the Food Administration, compels us to pay a minimum of $17.50 per hundred pounds, live weight, for hogs, which cannot, at that figure, produce cheap bacon, pork, and other hog products, and cattle at $16 or more per hundred pounds on the hoof cannot produce cheap beef. Stock raisers assert that such prices are necessary to pay them for the increased cost of production, and we realize the need of prices which will encourage continued agricultural effort. While the extraordinary demand from Europe continues there is little prospect of lower prices.

"The United States Government, through the Food Administration, formulated on Nov. 1, 1917, regulations limiting our profits in a more drastic manner than was prescribed for any other industry. Thus our profits were limited to 2.5 per cent. on our volume and 9 per cent. per annum on the capital invested in the meat-producing lines. We were able to earn only a very small fraction of the amount allowed on volume, and only about one-half of the authorized return on invested capital.

"During the year we delivered to our Government and to its European associates food products of a value of $241,000,000 from our plants in this country alone. We sent forth thousands of tons of food and got back a minimum of complaint, and not a word of criticism as to the efficiency of our service."

FOR CONVERSION OF BONDS.

Glass Would Extend Time for Holders of 4% Liberty Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Secretary Glass of the Treasury Department today wrote to Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee informing him that more than a billion dollars' worth of 4 per cent. Liberty bonds of the First and Second issues remained in the hands of bondholders unconverted, and stating that it was Mr. Glass's intention to submit to Congress a provision intended to extend the conversion privilege. The letter read:

"Washington, Jan. 15, 1919.

"Dear Mr. Kitchin:

"The total amount issued of 4 per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted was $568,316,450, of which there remain outstanding as of Dec. 31, 1918, in the hands of the public, unconverted, after deducting bonds purchased and retired by means of the Bond Purchase Fund and bonds held by the War Finance Corporation, $200,680,000.

"The total amount issued of 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan was $3,807,862,350, of which there remain outstanding as of Dec. 31, 1918, in the hands of the public, unconverted, after deducting bonds purchased by means of the Bond Purchase Fund and bonds held by the War Finance Corporation, $866,800,000.

"Total 4 per cent. Liberty bonds outstanding as of Dec. 31, 1918, $1,067,480,000.

"Under the terms of the contract with the holders of these bonds the conversion privilege expired on Nov. 9, 1918, six months after it arose. Every effort was made by Secretary McAdoo to give publicity to the fact of the conversion privilege and its approaching expiration, and that privilege remained open for six months. My belief is that those who did not avail themselves of the conversion privilege within the period fixed by the terms of the contract which the Government made with them fall among the class of small holders who are unaccustomed to bond investments, and who, on account of the very wide distribution of Liberty Loan bonds, were not reached by general publicity and could not, except in the case of registered bonds, be reached by department circulars.

"Insistence upon the letter of the contract will result in loss to a group of patriotic bondholders toward whom a special duty of consideration exists. The United States has suffered nothing by their failure to act promptly in the exercise of the conversion right, and it is my judgment that the conversion privilege should be extended. I propose to submit to your committee in connection with the bond bill, which it will be necessary for me to present at an early date, for your consideration, a provision intended to extend the conversion privilege, so that the higher rate of 4¼ per cent. shall be effective from the semi-annual interest payment date next succeeding the date of presentation for conversion.

"I am writing this letter to you now and giving it to the press in order that the holders of these bonds may be informed of my views concerning the matter.

"I am sending a copy of this letter to Senator Simmons. Very truly yours,

"CARTER GLASS."

NATIONAL BISCUIT REPORT.

Net Earnings in 1918 $5,135,839, Surplus $1,353,004.

The report of the National Biscuit Company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1918, shows net earnings of $5,135,839, compared with $4,622,348 in the eleven months ended Dec. 31, 1917. After the deduction of preferred dividends the balance available for the $29,236,000 common stock was approximately $3,299,494, or $11.02 a share. In the eleven months ended Dec. 31, 1917, $9.87 was earned on the common stock after the deduction of the preferred dividend.

The surplus after payment of both preferred and common dividends amounted to $1,353,004 for the year, which compared with $839,513 in the preceding year, making the profit and loss surplus as of Dec. 31, 1918, $17,761,784, against $16,408,780 the year before.

The report states that the company adhered to the rulings of the Food Administration, and that it prepared large quantities of hard bread for the Government.

BETHLEHEM STEEL RESISTS WAR BOARD

Challenges Labor Commission's Right to Enforce Decree, as War Has Ended.

DRAWS REBUKE FROM TAFT

Chairman Questions Good Faith of the Company—Dispute Over Back Pay Award.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The authority of the National War Labor Board to enforce its decrees now that hostilities have ceased was challenged today by counsel for the Bethlehem Steel Company, who had been asked to appear to answer complaints that awards made by the board during the war had not been carried out.

Joint Chairman Taft of the board questioned the good faith of the company and said its present attitude "colors the whole situation with a sense of injustice which makes one yearn for judicial power to compel compliance." He added that the board did not have this power, but would meet Saturday with employes' representatives to determine "what there is possible to be done in this situation."

Representatives of machinists and electricians employed by the Bethlehem Company complained that awards of back pay were not carried out, and that men who complained through the Plant Committees established by the board were discharged.

"Our position is that the award does not apply today," said Guy Currier of Boston, attorney for the company, "though during the war we were prepared to accept anything the board recommended. We don't feel now that this board can go on adjusting grievances between employes and managements of the industrial plants."

Chairman Taft read a letter which the board received last September from E. G. Grace, President of the Bethlehem Company, who expressed willingness to enforce the award and allow the men to organize committees. He said, however, that the payment of the back wages under the increases would be contingent upon the readiness of the War and Navy Departments to increase the payments to the company for the production of munitions.

"Now doesn't the Bethlehem Company intend to show any good faith with the board?" Mr. Taft demanded. "You entered into the agreement to enforce the award in this letter. I don't consider that your present attitude shows good faith. You intend to flout what has been done."

Mr. Currier objected to the construction placed upon the action of the company by Mr. Taft. He said that the War and Navy Departments had not allowed increased payments on the company's war contracts and asked that a special section of the board be appointed to investigate the matter.

The attorney said the Bethlehem company was laying off large numbers of men and that the production of munitions which was its principal business had entirely stopped. He said that members of the shop committees created by the board had not been discharged in larger numbers than had other employes.

"This is a very painful situation to me," Mr. Taft said in adjourning the session. "We wish to secure what these workers are entitled to have under our previous award. The present attitude of Mr. Grace and his company in refusing to accept after what has been done colors the whole situation with a sense of injustice which makes one yearn for judicial power to compel compliance, but this board has not that power. I declare this meeting adjourned now to meet on Saturday with the employes' representatives to determine as nearly as we can what there is possible to be done in this situation."

IRON INDUSTRY IMPROVING.

Peace Time Business Larger Than Supposed, Says Iron Age.

The Iron Age states that an incomplete analysis indicates that the aggregate of peace-time business is larger than generally supposed, with bookings on Jan. 1 probably less than 10 per cent. below those of December. The Iron Trade Review also is more optimistic in its review of the week. The former says in part:

"Generally the producer describes conditions as better than expected. The trade has been so long used to full steam activity that it is not yet accustomed to the present period of low demand. With operations not quite so good as a week ago, it is to be expected that reports are numerous of plant shutdowns. The industry cannot, of course, expect 60 per cent. operation and not have idleness. A surplus of labor has already become apparent at steel works, with offers to work at lower than existing wage schedules. The December estimated output of steel ingots, 2,992,306 tons, is, with the same number of working days, only 2 per cent. less than the November production and there was no noticeable stocking of the rolled product, a fact which is favorable."

After paying final dividend of six per cent. carry forward will be £3,005,578.4.4.

From a letter addressed to us by C. L. Holman, Esq., President of the Company, we summarize the following:

These bonds are now secured by a direct mortgage lien upon all the Company's physical property, and upon retirement of the First Mortgage Bonds, due May 1, 1919, will share equally in the lien of the then existing first mortgage of the Company.

The issuance of additional bonds is carefully safeguarded under the mortgage.

The physical condition of the property is excellent in every respect, it being the policy of the management to maintain its plant at all times in first class condition.

Net Earnings of the Company show a wide margin over all interest requirements.

Saint Louis is a manufacturing and distributing city of great importance, population having increased from 451,770 in 1890 to a present estimated population of 850,000. The Laclede Gas Light Company does all the gas business in this city, which is the fourth largest city in the United States.

COMPANIES APPEAL IN CABLE SUITS

File 64 Exceptions to Federal Judge Hand's Decision Denying an Injunction.

HOLD RULINGS WERE FAULTY

Declare Suits Were Against Burleson and Carlton and Not President, as Court Decided.

Federal Judge Learned Hand yesterday filed the formal order dismissing the suits of the Commercial Cable and Commercial Pacific Cable Companies for an injunction restraining the Government from taking over the lines. There was also filed a list of sixty-four exceptions to the court's action by the companies. The companies secured permission to appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The exceptions were prepared by William W. Cook, solicitor for the companies. They say that the court erred in his decision, that there was an error in holding that the suits were against President Wilson of the United States because in fact they were directed against Postmaster General Burleson and his assistant, Newcomb Carlton, because of the statement that the lines were taken over on Nov. 16, and that the action was within the provisions of the joint resolution of Congress of July 16, 1918.

It is further claimed that the court was wrong in stating that it had no power to question the act of the President and by holding the seizure of the cables necessary for the national security and defense, and that it was not within the power of the court to review the action. It is contended that the holding that the court had no jurisdiction to review the system of Government under the Constitution was unworkable and unthinkable.

After criticising the decision of the court in the matter of compensation at 6 per cent. without first obtaining an appraisal of the physical property and an allowance for earning power, the exceptions state that the court greatly erred in not holding as material and as a cause of action the intention to intermingle and consolidate the two companies with those of its competitor together with its good-will, to the end that the plaintiff might be forced or persuaded to abandon competition and to acquiesce in the defendant's plan for Government ownership of all of the cables.

It is further contended that the court should have held that within the spirit and purpose of the joint resolution of Congress the war ended when an armistice was signed, and that it was an error not to hold that the seizure of the cables was unreasonable and arbitrary and adversely affected the future income and the properties of the plaintiff. The court should have held, according to the list of errors, that it was illegal to take the plaintiff's property and to deprive the plaintiffs of moneys and profits without due process of law and without just compensation when there was no real public need for them. It is expected that the appeal will be heard by the Supreme Court on Feb. 3.

LIQUIDATION WORKS TO DEPRESS COTTON PRICES

Prices Recede From 85 to More Than 100 Points Under Heavy Selling Orders.

Prices in the cotton market yesterday again broke sharply under very heavy selling. The liquidation was heaviest through the morning session, when cotton appeared in such large quantities that the break, extending to all contracts, disclosed declines ranging between 50 and 75 points under Tuesday's closing. Selling later in the day widened the price declines 85 to 106 points. The selling was general, being participated in by local, Wall Street, and Southern operators, as well as from outside speculative sources, the pressure from the South following the weakness in futures at New Orleans. There was but little, if any, support to the market, the principal buying by Liverpool interests on the scaledown, as well as by spot houses, seemed to play but a minor part as a halt in the declining values of the staple.

First prices showed January unchanged at 26.90c., with declines in the other options running 3 to 21 points below the preceding day's final prices. Almost immediately after opening prices had been marked up the selling movement worked values back substantially, and with little cotton to meet the liquidation went on establishing new lows. Around midday a covering by the shorts and profit taking by early bears rallied prices 20 to 30 points, but this was short lived, with a renewal during the afternoon of the early selling. At 2:30 January was selling at 25.84c., a decline of 106 points; March, 24.50c., off 90 points; May, 22.99c., down 97 points; July, 22.04c., down 94 points, and October at 20.05c., off 85 points from the closing on Tuesday. A rally in the last half hour netted some gains from these prices, and the closing was fairly steady at levels but nominally above the bottom prices of the day. No exports were reported yesterday, and spot cotton, at 30.05c., was down 85 points.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was a strong tone to the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, the result of a good demand that made its influence felt from the outset. The effect was substantial net advances at the close in the active stocks, with one or two exceptions. In the latter, Marine preferred was most notable. Business was fair in volume and centred in the industrials. Railroad issues were quiet, with prices steady. Steel shares, with the exception of Bethlehem B, were firm throughout the session.

Dated New York, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1919.

To the Holders of Five Per Cent.
First Mortgage Gold Bonds
OF
The Northwestern Terminal Railway Company

Issued under the Mortgage indenture dated July 1st, 1906 (and supplements dated September 27th, 1909, and January 2, 1915), made by said Company to The Mercantile Trust Company (now Bankers Trust Company), as Trustee:

The Northwestern Terminal Railway Company (herein called the Terminal Company) has defaulted in the payment of the semi-annual interest due January 1, 1918, July 1, 1918, and January 1, 1919, upon the above issue of bonds. The 1916 and 1917 State taxes upon its property are unpaid and delinquent. We are advised that its terminal railway properties in and near Denver, Colorado, were taken, and now are, under Federal control. All the property of The Denver and Salt Lake Railroad Company (herein called the Salt Lake Company) was placed in a creditor's bill receivership in the District Court of Adams County, Colorado, in August, 1917, and such receivership is still in effect, except that the railway and transportation system of the Salt Lake Company is in Federal control. Under existing agreement whereby the Salt Lake Company occupied and used (and the Federal Railroad Administration is now occupying and using) properties of the Terminal Company, the Salt Lake Company agreed (in effect) to pay, as rental, among other things, the interest upon the Terminal Company's First Mortgage Bonds and taxes upon its property.

The undersigned, holding and representing large amounts of the First Mortgage Bonds of the Terminal Company, believe it to be essential that the holders of such bonds be in a position to take prompt and concerted action for the protection of their interests, and therefore have agreed to act as a committee for that purpose. This Committee is the result of an agreement whereby former committees organized separately, in New York and Denver, have been dissolved, and succeeded by the undersigned.

It will be to the advantage of the Bondholders promptly to deposit their Bonds with the Committee in order to participate in the benefits to be gained by concerted action on the part of the majority of the Bonds. Bondholders are therefore urgently requested to deposit their Bonds, with the January 1, 1918, and subsequent, coupons, on or before March 1st, 1919, with The International Trust Company, Denver, Colorado, the Depositary under an agreement, dated December 18th, 1918, providing for such deposits; or with Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall Street, New York, the Agent of the Depositary. Transferable certificates of deposit will be issued therefor.

The Committee will promptly pay any interest which may be received by it on the Deposited Bonds to the holders of the certificates of deposit representing the Bonds in respect whereof such payments of interest shall be made, deducting any income tax required to be withheld.

Copies of the Deposit Agreement may be obtained by application either to the Depositary or to its Agent above mentioned.

Dated, Denver, Colorado, January 3, 1919.

S. M. PERRY, Chairman.

JOHN C. MITCHELL,

REAL ESTATE FIELD

A new apartment house will soon be erected in the choice residential section of Fifth Avenue, at the south corner of Sixty-sixth Street, in the same block with the former Colonel John Jacob Astor mansion, now owned by Vincent Astor. The property to be used for this latest tall Fifth Avenue structure is owned by the Grant B. Schley estate, including the large Schley residence on the immediate corner, and three smaller dwellings on Sixty-sixth Street. Adjoining the Schley house on the south is a residence owned by the Astor estate, and the remainder of the block, including the Sixty-fifth Street corner, is occupied by the large Astor house.

Associated with the Schley estate in the operation are William Henry Barnum & Co., which has erected several large buildings, and J. E. R. Carpenter, who has been associated in the erection of a number of the newest Park Avenue apartment houses. The property has a frontage of 50.6 feet on Fifth Avenue, being the frontage of the Schley home, and, with the three smaller structures, 160 feet on Sixty-sixth Street.

The new apartment will be eleven or twelve stories in height. It has been entirely financed, the Barnum Company furnishing the building loan. Mr. Carpenter and Cross & Cross will be associate architects. The plan will probably involve but one suite to a floor of about twenty rooms. It is expected to be ready for occupancy by the Summer of 1920.

The brokerage details of the transaction were arranged by the firm of Pease & Elliman. On the Sixty-third Street corner of Fifth Avenue is a twelve-story apartment completed a few years ago on the old Progress Club site, and further north are four other tall multi-family houses.

Daniel H. Jackson Buys $200,000 Midtown Loft.

An important deal in the midtown loft zone was closed yesterday by Daniel H. Jackson, operator, who purchased from the B. F. & G. Realty Company, 106 East Nineteenth Street. The property consists of a twelve-story loft building occupying a plot 25 by 100, located 175 feet east of Fourth Avenue. It is fully leased, with an annual income of $22,000 and was held at $200,000.

$30,000 Investment Purchase on Greene Street.

J. Early Wood has increased his holdings in the lower part of the city by the purchase of 81 Greene Street from the Wilton Holding Corporation. The property consists of a five-story loft with electric elevator, on a plot 25 by 100. Negotiations are pending to lease the building to a Manhattan firm for a term of years at $3,600 per annum. The property was held at $30,000. The Charles F. Noyes Company negotiated the sale.

Negotiations Pending for Sale of Braender Apartments.

Negotiations are reported pending for the sale of the ten-story Braender apartment, on the southwest corner of 102d Street and Central Park West. The house, which was erected by the late Philip Braender, occupies a site fronting 100.11 feet on Central Park West and 117 feet, on 102d Street. It has been valued by the estate at $400,000. It has an annual rent roll of about $52,000. In 1912 Mr. Braender sold the property to the New York Real Estate Security Company, which acquired more than 100 houses on the upper west side before it was forced into bankruptcy. After prolonged negotiations Mr. Braender bought back the property.

The property has been acquired for one of the trunk line railroads and will be developed for piers and railroad purposes.

Manufacturer of kerosene vaporizer for both marine and automobile motors finds itself unable to keep pace with increasing demands, due to insufficient capital. This manufacturer will either sell outright its patent rights for Canada, England, and America, or will consider passing control in both the marine and auto field to parties with sufficient capital to properly take advantage of the demand already created. This device is used as standard equipment by several manufacturers, and references can be furnished of its pre-eminent success. Address Franklin P. Shumway Company, 453 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Education Notes.

P. S. 62, Manhattan, will hold its graduating exercises at 8 P. M. on Jan. 29 in the school auditorium, Hester and Essex Streets. There will be nearly 600 graduates.

There will be a teachers' rally at P. S. 171, Manhattan, 103d Street and Fifth Avenue, at 4 P. M. on Jan. 17. The Teachers' Union will present the main features of the salary bill, which will receive the backing of organized labor.

The Art Department of the Bronx Evening High School calls attention to the establishment of a new class in photo-retouching and catalogue drawing. It will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:45 P. M. to 9:45 P. M., beginning Feb. 4. The registration is open to young women and men preferably interested in this work through the fact that they are actively engaged in an office or studio where such work is done. Application for entrance may be made any evening from Monday to Thursday after 7:30 P. M. The school is situated at Prospect Avenue and Jennings Street.

Dr. James P. Haney, Director of Art in High Schools, will speak on "The Great Art of Spain and France" in the lecture room of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at 4 P. M. on Jan. 17. All teachers of French and Spanish are invited to attend.

The Board of Superintendents has asked the Board of Education to authorize the organization of another probationary school for unruly boys in P. S. 37, on East Eighty-seventh Street.

The Advisory Board on Industrial Education has asked the Board of Education to authorize the appointment of a field secretary at $3,000 a year.

The Board of Superintendents has recommended that the by-laws of the Board of Education be amended so that no deduction shall be made from the salaries of teachers whose absence from school is due to death in the immediate family, provided that said teachers submit the fact in writing and that the Principal attaches the statement to the payroll and notes the absence thereon.

The Heads of Department Association of Brooklyn presented to the Schedule Committee of the Federation of Teachers Associations at its meeting on Jan. 13 a statement of its position in regard to salary revision. It assumed that a head of department or assistant to Principal should receive compensation greater than that given to the holder of any license the requirements for which are less than for the license of assistant to Principal. The proposed federation salary schedule for 7A-9B teachers gives $1,600 minimum, $2,500 maximum, plus $300 bonus for boys, and for heads of department or assistants to Principal $2,600 minimum, $2,900 maximum, plus $300 bonus for boys. It pointed out that under these schedules, a 7A teacher of boys at maximum salary would receive $2,800, while a head of department in a girls' school would begin at $2,600, although holding a higher license. The evaluation of the license of assistant to Principal is not localized—one status in a girls' school and another status in a boys' school. It is a certificate of higher rank than that held by any class teacher in the Kg.-9B group, and if the principle of priority of license is not to be abrogated, the minimum salary of a head of department must be greater than any salary given to a Kg.-9B teacher, whether that salary be an initial sum or an initial sum augmented by a bonus. The minimum salary of the head of department or assistant to Principal must be, at least $2,900.

Post Office Notice.

Postmaster Patten has been advised by the Third Assistant Postmaster General at Washington that money orders may be issued for the parts of Palestine and Syria occupied by the allied armies, but the extent of the territory thus occupied is not precisely defined by the authorities abroad, and it is inferred the occupied territory is continually enlarging. In cases where money orders are intended for places not known to be within the occupied territory they will still be forwarded if desired, but at the risk of the remitter, and in such cases the British Government, which acts as intermediary, has been requested to cancel the money order, if it proves not to be payable, with the view of refunding it to the remitter.

BOARD CANCELS BIDS FOR TRANSIT LINE

Commission Finds Its Engineering Force Insufficient to Prepare Drawings.

RECALLS OTHER CONTRACTS

Action Follows Curtailment of Force Due to Lessened Appropriation—Whitney Discusses the Situation.

Following the action of the Board of Estimate in curtailing the appropriation of the Public Service Commission so that many of the commission's engineers had to be dismissed, the commission announced yesterday that it had canceled the bids received last week for the elevated part of the Fourteenth Street-Eastern District line and had recalled from the Board of Estimate three contracts which had been awarded for the construction of a part of the elevated structure in Westchester Avenue.

In explaining the action of the commission Acting Chairman Travis H. Whitney said that when the bids for the Fourteenth Street line were called for by advertisements it was expected that there would be enough engineers to furnish the contractor structural drawings within four months, and so a provision to this effect had been inserted in the contract. Because this provision could not be kept with the reduced engineering force it was deemed advisable to cancel all the bids and to readvertise later. Concerning the Westchester section of the rapid transit lines, Mr. Whitney said, it became necessary to include the contracts in the main contract, with the result that the work will be greatly delayed. The part of the work which the commission has expressed anxiety to complete comprises an extension across the New Haven Railroad tracks and the Bronx River.

In discussing the result of the enforced dismissal of more than 370 employes, many of them engineers, Mr. Whitney said:

"Construction work on the rapid transit lines is already undermanned. All of the men engaged in making final estimates have been transferred to field work, and the contractors are likely to complain because delays will result in withholding payments. The commission has been very reluctant to make changes in the force, for it means delays in completion, increased cost, and possible damages as well as additional claims by contractors.

"The engineers left with the commission have complained that they are unable to supervise the work properly and will be unable to certify that the work has been performed or to certify the monthly payments to contractors. I do not know of any situation more serious than that relating to subway work arising from the present demoralization of the engineering force. Not only have more than 370 employes, many of them experienced and valuable, been laid off, but the remaining engineers are uncertain, and doubtless many of them will leave, for contractors and corporations have already been prompt in picking up a number of the best men whom we were compelled to let go."

Appraise Mrs. Sage's Property.

Appraisers have begun the task of determining the value of the property on Long Island owned by the late Mrs. Russell Sage. They have started at Sag Harbor, where "Harbor Home" was one of Mrs. Sage's country houses. The house as originally planned by Colonel Benjamin H. Hunting, who commenced its construction, called for an outlay of only $50,000. After Mrs. Sage purchased the uncompleted dwelling in 1907 she spent more than $100,000 on the property.

NATION VOTED DRY; 38 STATES ADOPT THE AMENDMENT

Nebraska Clinches Approval as 36th State, Missouri and Wyoming Following.

PROCLAMATION NEXT STEP

Amendment Construed as Effective One Year After Secretary of State So Acts.

NOW PLAN ENFORCEMENT

Bills for Drastic Observance to be Presented to Congress and Legislatures.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The American nation was voted dry today by Constitutional Amendment, when the Legislature of Nebraska, the home of William Jennings Bryan, one of the foremost champions of prohibition, ratified the proposal.

Ratification by 36 of the 48 States was necessary to make prohibition a valid part of the American Constitution. Nebraska was the thirty-sixth State. Two other States, Wyoming and Missouri, by action of their Legislatures, also ratified the amendment today, making thirty-eight to act favorably. By tomorrow night the prohibition leaders expect to have not less than forty States in line.

Only ten States remain to act on the amendment—New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin, Minnesota, New Mexico, and Nevada. Prohibition leaders expect most of these States to ratify by the end of the month. They do not count on New Jersey.

Proclamation to be Issued.

Under its express terms the national prohibition amendment becomes effective one year from the date of its ratification by thirty-six States. State Department officials assert that under the laws and practices the ratification of the amendment by the required number of States must be proclaimed by the Secretary of State after he has received proper official notification from thirty-six of the States. No action on the part of the President is required by Constitution or law. State Department officials assert that the validity of the amendment as part of the Constitution will run from one year after the date of the proclamation of the Secretary of State announcing that the proposed amendment has been ratified by three-fourths of the States.

National prohibition leaders do not challenge this construction of the law. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America, said tonight:

"When thirty-six States ratify the prohibition amendment, and the Secretary of State proclaims the result, Federal amendment becomes operative one year from that date."

The prohibition amendment will be known as the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution. The income tax Amendment, the Sixteenth, was proclaimed in force as part of the Constitution February 25, 1913. Following that came the Seventeenth Amendment providing for the direct election of United States Senators by the people. The Seventeenth Amendment was declared in force May 31, 1913.

With the ratification of the amendment by the needed number of commonwealths, national leaders of the dry movement, who have one of the most effective and complete legislative organizations in the country, with headquarters here, in the agency of the Anti-Saloon League of America, will turn their attention toward procuring the enactment of the necessary national and State legislation to make national prohibition effective. They have already laid plans for a national prohibition law, and for the appointment of a National Prohibition Commissioner by the Federal Government, with sufficient power to see that the national bone-dry act, which will be sought from Congress, is fully enforced.

Basic Features of Enforcement.

The twenty-five national prohibition and anti-saloon organizations have already agreed on the main provisions of the bone dry act to be presented to Congress. The basic features of the bill were disclosed tonight by the Anti-Saloon League of America, as follows:

"1. The appointment of a Federal law enforcement Commissioner with sufficient and adequate power and assistance to secure the enforcement of the act.

"2. A provision for the abatement of liquor nuisances by injunction.

"3. Conferring of power upon the law enforcement Commissioner to prescribe rules and regulations, with approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, for the manufacture and distribution of wine for sacramental purposes and alcohol for nonprohibited purposes.

"4. Conferring of all necessary authority on officers and fixing of adequate penalties for violation of the act.

"5. The sale, manufacture, transportation, importation, exportation, and possession of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes should be prohibited.

"6. All intoxicating liquor illegally possessed, manufactured, or sold, and all implements used in the illegal manufacture of such liquors shall be considered contraband.

"7. The phrase 'intoxicating liquor' should include distilled, malt, fermented,

America and Britain Join In Hastening Food to Rumania

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The British Foreign Office has sent the following telegram to the British Minister at Bucharest:

"The British and United States Governments have taken emergency action with a view to securing that supplies arrive in Rumania, and the case of Rumania, including provision for financial credits for the purchase of foodstuffs, is being considered at the present session of the Interallied Supreme Council of Supply and Relief now sitting at Paris.

"The Government and people of Rumania may rest assured that the council will do its utmost to secure that adequate measures shall be taken for the furnishing of supplies as early as possible."

STATE ENFORCEMENT ACT

Prohibition Commissioner and Staff Proposed—Liquor Interests to Fight.

Prohibition leaders and adherents in New York hailed the news that the Federal prohibition amendment had been ratified as the gratifying result of many years of effort. They proclaimed their determination to press the fight for worldwide prohibition, and announced their intention of devoting themselves energetically to drafting and getting through the Legislature a State enforcement code with "teeth" in the nature of penalties for violation of the prohibition amendment, and severe punishment for officials for failure of enforcement.

Both in a formal statement and in interviews with leaders of the movement there was a disposition to minimize the declaration of liquor men that they would fight the amendment by raising questions of constitutionality. The anti-saloon forces insisted that no plausible attack from this direction could be initiated, and maintained that they were entirely unworried by the opposition.

On behalf of the distillery and brewery interests it was asserted that the attack on the constitutionality of the amendment would be pressed, and that every effort would be made to convince the Federal courts that the subject was one for State and not Federal action. Other points to be raised in the attack are that the amendment was submitted by a two-thirds vote of a quorum in Congress only, and not a two-thirds vote of the membership, and that the clause allowing seven years within which the States might ratify made the amendment null and void.

Another angle of attack lies in the question whether the Legislature cannot be forced to submit its action to the voters in States where there is a referendum. A fight along this line already has been begun in California, where the State courts granted a temporary injunction preventing the Governor from certifying to the Federal Secretary of State that the amendment had been ratified by California. Argument on a motion to make the injunction permanent is to be heard Jan. 20. The opposition forces assert that the contention has no merit in law and that should the State court grant a temporary injunction, the Federal Courts would upset it, since the Legislature has acted according to the Federal Constitution.

According to figures compiled yesterday the Prohibition Amendment will drive out of business in the United States 116,000 retail liquor stores, 233 distilleries, and 992 breweries.

It will also throw out of work 749,418 employes who are paid annually $453,000,000. It will involve $1,294,000,000 of capital invested in the brewing and liquor business.

Statement in Behalf of Brewers.

A statement denouncing the amendment and urging New York State to record vigorous protest against it was issued yesterday by William H. Hirst, attorney for the New York State Brewers' Association and counsel for the Society of Restaurateurs of New York. Mr. Hirst said:

"National prohibition will instantaneously make hundreds of thousands of violators and evaders of the law and as many more hypocrites. The liberty-loving people of the United States will never give up wines and beers in their homes and clubs and at their meals so long as nature furnishes the material out of which they may be made and shows man how these materials may be brewed into wine and beer.

"National prohibition violates the laws of nature. It assassinates the Federal system of government and will endanger the union of States. It tears up the Charter of Home Rule of the various States by hysterical revolution. It destroys the liberty of people in their homes, which is just as dear and sacred to them as the freedom of speech and free choice of religious worship. It is but a short step from the gagging of the press. It tears down the citadel of democracy and enthrones intolerance.

"For these reasons, the State of New York should reject the amendment, no matter what action the other States may take. Not only should New York refuse to ratify, but it should proclaim to the rest of the States that there is no warrant or authority for depriving the State of New York of the right of dealing with in absolutely local matter in its own way and without interference from the outside. This is not nullification, but an assertion of the legitimate sovereignty of the State. If the Legislature is hesitant, turn the matter over to the people and let them act. They certainly will not subscribe to an amendment which will wipe out the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution that freed the negro and substitute in their stead one for the en-

BERLIN, Jan. 15, (via Copenhagen.)—The Ebert Government has prepared a draft of a new Constitution which will be submitted to the National Convention soon after it assembles, probably on Feb. 10.

The draft provides that the President shall be elected for ten years by direct vote of the whole people. He may be re-elected.

The union of States yet to be formed will be on the American principle. Statehood being accorded to any population over 2,000,000. It is planned to divide Prussia into eight separate States, as follows:

First—Silesia, with German Posen and German East Bohemia.

Second—The German parts of East and West Prussia.

Third—Brandenburg, Pomerania, and Mecklenburg.

Fourth—Greater Berlin and its suburbs.

Fifth—Lower Saxony, Hanover, and Schleswig-Holstein.

Sixth—Westphalia and the Lippe principalities.

Seventh—The Rhineland.

Eighth—The Prussian Province of Hesse and the Grand Duchy of Hesse.

Other States, as proposed, are to be:

Ninth—Thuringia, including certain parts of old Prussia.

Tenth—The former Kingdom of Saxony, including parts of Prussian Saxony.

Eleventh—Baden.

Twelfth—Württemberg.

Thirteenth—Bavaria, with the German parts of northwest Bohemia.

Fourteenth—German Austria.

Fifteenth—Vienna and its suburbs.

New Troops Enter Berlin.

Many soldiers marched into Berlin last night and during this morning. They have now occupied the centre of the city, especially the newspaper district, which they search from house to house, arresting all suspicious persons and confiscating all arms and munitions.

Some streets have the appearance of army camps, the soldiers being fed from so-called "goulash guns." At Potsdamer Bruecke a large poster reading "Don't proceed any further or you might get shot," warns the people that the Spartacides have been driven from that quarter.

A nest of Spartacides has been discovered on a housetop opposite the Equitable Building on the Friedrichstrasse. Ten men in Russian uniforms were captured, of whom seven were Germans. They had one machine gun, a dozen rifles, and much ammunition.

Westarp Deplores Peace Terms.

Count Westarp, for many years the Conservative leader, made his parting speech at a meeting of the German National People's Party last night, having decided to quit politics on account of ill-health.

Count Westarp said that there had never been a chance for a peace without victor and vanquished, of which some Germans had dreamed. Germany had accepted the most awful peace conditions instead of the honorable, just peace which had been talked about so much.

He denied that Ludendorff had asked

FIND 46 I. W. W.'S GUILTY OF PLOT

California Jury Quickly Renders Verdict Against Sacramento Workers.

TAKEN AFTER DYNAMITING

Attack on Governor's House Led Authorities to Round Up Scores of Suspects.

Special to The New York Times.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 16.—All the forty-six defendants in the I. W. W. conspiracy case were found guilty by a jury in the Federal District Court tonight. The verdict was returned at 6 o'clock, after the jury had been out since 4:35 o'clock. Sentences will be imposed tomorrow by Judge Frank H. Rudkin.

The jury retired after Robert Duncan, chief Government prosecutor, made a statement for the people, in which he concluded:

"The I. W. W. recognizes no country, no flag, no color line. They respect no flag but the red flag. They would drag us all down to the level of the lowest man. They do not recognize difference of ability in man, but would give the unworthy the same privileges for which the worthy have to strive so hard."

In his charge to the jury, Judge Rudkin said:

"The mere fact that these defendants are Industrial Workers of the World should not justify a verdict of guilty.

"The fact that they may be found to be conscientious objectors to war should not be held against them in the consideration of this case. Opinions which they hold in opposition to war, and which undeniably stand alone, are not an evidence of guilt."

Judge Rudkin interpreted the legal meaning of conspiracy and read parts of the Conscription act which the defendants are accused of conspiring to violate.

Referring to the "silent defense" of forty-three of the defendants, who have spoken no word and have been unrepresented throughout the trial, Judge Rudkin said that such silence should not be held against them.

Seattle Demonstration Stopped.

SEATTLE, Jan. 16.—Approximately 500 workers, leaving an open-air mass meeting and starting a parade through the city's business district singing "I. W. W." songs, were dispersed early tonight by twenty mounted police officers, supported by five automobiles containing police armed with carbines and behind these a platoon of police with clubs.

The I. W. W. conspiracy case had its inception with the investigation of the dynamiting of the home of Governor William D. Stephens the night of Dec. 17, 1917.

More than thirty alleged I. W. W.'s were arrested five days after the explosion. Later three indictments were found against eighty alleged members of the organization.

The case is similar in many respects to the Chicago I. W. W. conspiracy case which resulted in the conviction of William D. Haywood, Secretary-Treasurer of the organization, and about ninety other men. The defendants in the Sacramento case were alleged to have conspired with Haywood in the Chicago case.

The general charge in all the indictments was a conspiracy to violate the Constitution of the United States and the Espionage act. Specifically the defendants, among whom was one woman, Theodora Poliak of San Francisco, were charged with attempting to obstruct war activities of the United States Government.

One section incorporated in all of the indictments charged that the defendants sought to accomplish the object of the organization by threats, assaults, injuries, intimidations and murders of persons, and the injury and destruction of property by sabotage, the forcible resistance to the execution of all laws, and finally the forcible revolutionary overthrow of all existing Governmental authority in the United States.

The third indictment, in which nineteen men were named, embodied specific charges that the defendants set or encouraged the setting of fires in various parts of California.

Montenegrins Revolt Against Serbs; Ask Protection of American Troops

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Occupation of Montenegro by Serbian troops has resulted in a revolt by the Montenegrins, according to an official statement issued here tonight at the Montenegrin Legation.

Insurgents numbering about 20,000 have succeeded in occupying several towns from which the Serbian forces were driven.

The insurgents, the announcement says, have sent a delegation to King Nicholas at Paris asking that American troops be sent to Modtenegro to preserve order.

Some weeks ago the State Department was informed by the Montenegrin Committee for National Unity that a convention of representatives duly chosen by the Montenegrin people had met and deposed King Nicholas and voted to join the country with the federation of the Serbs, Slovenes, and Croats under the Serbian dynasty. Later representatives of the assembly went to Belgrade to report this action, and the country was formally accepted by the King Regent as a part of Greater Serbia.

The Montenegrin Government has insisted, and has so informed the State Department, that the assembly which deposed King Nicholas was without authority, as it never had been legally formed. The legation's statement tonight called attention to the fact that the victorious associated nations had decided that Montenegro should have a representative at the Peace Conference.

Minister of Ports and Telegraphs—Signor STRADENETTO, in place of Luigi Fera.

GIANBATTISTA MILIANI, Minister of Agriculture, is understood to have accepted a more important post.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—News of the resignation of the Italian Cabinet has been received here. The present crisis is said to be due to the conflict in the Orlando Ministry between those favoring and those opposing the policy of Foreign Minister Sonnino for the largest possible territorial annexation and for no concessions, particularly to the Jugoslavs.

The Italian peace delegates here express the belief that the resignation followed when it became known to Premier Orlando that the United States representatives were not in entire agreement with Baron Sonnino's views concerning Fiume.

The Progreso Italo-Americano prints this special dispatch from Rome this morning announcing several changes in the Orlando Cabinet:

"According to the latest intelligence in regard to the ministerial crisis the following Ministers have resigned portfolios:

"Minister of the Treasury, Nitti; Minister of Agriculture, Miliani; Minister of Justice and Ecclesiastical Affairs, Sacchi; Minister of Posts and Telegraph, Fera; Minister of Marine, Admiral del Buono; Minister of War, General Zupelli.

"They have been thus replaced: Commendatore Stringher has assumed the portfolio of the Treasury; Signor Facta that of Justice; Signor Fradeletto, Posts and Telegraph; Admiral Thaon di Revel, Marine; General Dall 'Olio, that of War.

"The official announcement will be published at noon tomorrow."

General Dall 'Olio, who is slated as Minister of War, was formerly Minister of Arms and Munitions. General Pietro Badoglio, the Lieutenant Chief of the General Staff under General Diaz, was first mentioned in connection with the post.

Signor Nitti's successor at the Treasury, Signor Stringher, is the President of the Bank of Italy. Admiral Thaon di Revel, aside from his naval duties and Ministerial officer in a former Government, has written much to uphold Italy's claims to the Adriatic.

All the new ministers named in the Progresso's dispatch have been noted for their uncompromising attitude in regard to Italy's maximum claims in "Italia Irredenta."

All along Baron Sonnino has adhered to the Treaty of London, the terms of which he has declared must be confirmed by France and England before proceeding with the peace negotiations proper. The pact of Rome last April and subsequent acts of Italy, France, England and the United States recognized the rights of the Jugoslav to revolt against the Hapsburgs, but not their political and territorial entity, which they had declared by the compact of Corfu, July, 1917. Many Italian papers, led by the Corriere della Sera of Milan, then began to acknowledge the claims of the Jugoslavs, which were contrary to the Treaty of London, as at

League of Nations Plan Already Drafted As "Covenant" by Cecil, Lansing and House

PARIS, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—The draft of proposals for the League of Nations in the form of treaty enactment has now proceeded much further than generally supposed, as a result of recent conferences between Lord Robert Cecil, Secretary Lansing, and Colonel House, at which the best features of the various projects were embodied in a concrete form of enactment.

This is called a covenant instead of a treaty, and embraces thirteen articles and eight supplementary provisions, which bring together the main features of all the plans presented.

The covenant, while still subject to much revision, will probably be ready for the congress or committee whenever the subject is considered.

China's President for Peace League As a Safeguard of His Country

Says Far East May Be First Region Dangerously Affected If Plan Fails at Paris—Would End All Militarism and Have China Unfettered in Development.

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.

PEKING, Jan. 10.—"If unfortunately the proposed League of Nations fails to become a fact, the result will not only be that a world aspiraiton will remain unrealized, but that the Far East may become the first region dangerously affected. It is our earnest hope that, seeing the calamity militarism has wrought in Europe, the powers will check the inordinate ambitions of militarists in every part of the world."

After an audience which I had the honor of having with China's President, Hsu Chih Chang, at which the League of Nations and the solution of Far Eastern difficulties formed the leading subjects of conversation, the Chief Executive prepared a statement for THE NEW YORK TIMES embodying the above sentences.

In the opinion of the President, as in the minds of all Chinese statesmen, future world peace in the Far East depends upon the allied decisions in Paris. China, knowing that unless all the powers unite now to solve justly and fairly the problems of spheres of influence, concession rights, and commercial policies in China, these same powers later may be drawn into the Far Eastern conflict, is looking forward to the conference regarding the League of Nations with intense interest and sympathy.

One cannot travel through the Far East today, and I have been through Japan, Siberia, and China, without realizing that, while one war is over in Europe, another is rapidly getting under way in the Pacific. There are conflicts in interests and policies in Siberia, Manchuria, and China which should and can be peacefully adjusted in Paris if only the facts can be placed before the great powers. Because China will be involved, whether there is conflict or peace, her Government is naturally interested and working for the latter, which her statesmen foresee in a League of Nations.

During my stay in Peking, while I have had opportunities of talking with many officials, no conversation has been as interesting as that with the President. After the preliminary arrangements, which included the submission of written questions, I was escorted through the ancient streets of the capital in an American-made automobile to the President's palace by Philip Tyau, counsellor of the Foreign Office, who is a graduate of an English university. At the palace the Master and Assistant Master of Ceremonies, the latter a Harvard graduate, and both dressed in Prince Alberts, received me in the executive chambers, where tea was served in the ancient custom.

A few seconds before the appointed hour the President walked from his residence to the reception room, escorted and followed by troops. Immediately I was ushered into a large room with Chinese interior decorations and modern furniture. The President stood in the centre of the room, his hands folded, acknowledging the repeated bows of those who were introduced by an interpreter. The President was clothed in a tight-fitting black silk jacket, a blue figured silk skirt, and Chinese silk boots. Tall, strong, and powerfully built, he presented a striking contrast to the others.

After we were seated tea was again served. As the interpreter translated the questions I studied the features and expressions of the President, whose gray hair and mustache were the only indications of age. Hsu Chih Chang, chief executive of a nation of nearly 400,000,000, might be called the Wilson of China, because of his scholarly attainments and his ideas regarding international affairs. He is a statesman who has the respect and confidence of the people, and whose strength lies not in any military organization, but in a policy of national and international peace.

Hsu's Resume of His Remarks.

After conversation upon many topics the audience ended and the President prepared the following résumé of his remarks:

"The Peace Conference in Paris will shortly take place. Being aware of the evil effects of militarism throughout the world during the last four years, every nation cherishes the hope that permanent peace may hereafter be established. Every one, therefore, expects that the conference will not only end all wars, but will also definitely remove all those things which may give rise to misunderstandings and irritation between nations. Thus its bearing on the welfare of all nations and peace on earth is certainly of tremendous importance.

"China is particularly interested in this conference, because she has always loved peace and always cherished the desire of maintaining it above all else. It really needs no reiteration that she as a nation desires peace both within and without her territory, but largely owing to the distance separating her from Europe and America it is more than probable that foreign nations have not in the past known or understood her aims and ideals. I am therefore particularly happy that you, the accredited correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, are here today, because it is through the services of men like yourself that China's case can be intelligently placed before the world generally and the allied countries in particular. China is confident in the righteousness of her aims and claims.

"Since I became President of this republic I have paid special attention to the means whereby peace could be restored in this country between what is usually described as the north and south, although these terms are somewhat erroneous, the mass of the nation being united and uninfluenced by the personal antagonisms of various leaders. Evidence of this is afforded by the unity of their views and activities in foreign affairs and commerce.

"Ever since my inauguration I have taken upon myself the duty of solving these domestic dissensions. I have listened with willing ear to expressions of opinion from every possible quarter with the view of extinguishing permanently these dissensions. Delegates have now been appointed to negotiate with the leaders in the south in a conciliatory spirit in order to work out a compromise which will assist our political progress and industrial development and create a new China. Thus it can be truly said that the disagreement between the north and south no longer is a dangerous problem, either internally or externally, and offers no challenge to peace in the Far East.

"The long duration of the war being due to the militarism of the Central European Powers, the President of the United States has now proposed the formation of a League of Nations. China shared with America her desire for peace, and naturally is ready to help to her utmost in the fulfillment of such a policy.

"As for China's own hopes concerning the effect of such a league on the maintenance of peace in the Far East, that depends upon what the league can actually achieve throughout the world, and not merely the Far East. If, unfortunately, the league fails to become a fact, the result will not only be that the world's aspiration will remain unrealized, but that the Far East may become the first region dangerously affected.

"It is our earnest hope that, seeing the calamity militarism has wrought on Europe, the powers will PARIS, Jan. 16.—The protest lodged with President Wilson last night by a delegation of American newspaper men against yesterday's conference decisions regulating communications with the press brought quick action. The British correspondents were equally successful with their representations to Premier Lloyd George and Mr. Balfour.

The French Government called a meeting of newspaper men at the Villa Dufayel, a famous mansion in the Champs Elysées, which is being turned into a journalists' club. A representative of the Government took the chair, supported by Ray Stannard Baker, representing the Americans, and Sir George Riddell representing the British. The Chairman expounded the difficulties in the way of admitting newspaper representatives to the Peace Conference sittings. The British spokesman explained the newspaper men's attitude, and, after Mr. Baker had intimated that the American peace delegates were in sympathy with the justifiable claims of the American press, Herbert Swope, who had been elected Chairman of a committee at a meeting held earlier in the afternoon, presented the American correspondents' point of view and read a series of resolutions passed at that meeting, calling for a full measure of representation of the American press at all sessions of the conference.

Up to this point all was plain sailing, but when it came to the question of giving practical shape to the principle of the demands put forward by the American and British resolutions and subscribed to by a number of French and Italian journalists present, there was some trouble. A long discussion ensued, in which representatives of other allied nations besides the four great powers mentioned took no little part. Serbia was heard from at length, and Belgium contributed her quota.

Toward 7 o'clock the French Government representatives remarked that it would be necessary to arrive at a decision in time to report to the Council at its meeting tomorrow morning. Sir George Riddell came to the rescue by inviting a number of correspondents to dine with him tonight and formulate the desire of the meeting before separating, so that a report might be prepared for tomorrow's meeting. The invitation was accepted, and three delegates for each of the four great powers concerned were chosen. Then the passage of another resolution that the other allied nations should be represented by one delegate created a new complication, namely, that there would be thirteen at table. Sir George again came to the rescue by inviting a fourteenth man.

France Clings to Censorship.

From the information available today it appears that yesterday's decision respecting the ration between the conference and the press was large in the nature of a compromise. To some extent also it is an experiment susceptible of considerable modifications. President Wilson's request that the censorship be lifted for America and, of course, be agreed to, though the French Government, even at the outset, advanced some objections from their special point of view.

The British Government, which also expressed some reserve, nevertheless followed the American lead and an official announcement of the abolishing of the censor, so far as reports of the conference in the British papers were concerned, was issued yesterday.

This step was only decided upon after considerable discussion, the exchange of views between the British and French authorities having extended over several weeks. Foremost among the objections which the French Government raised was one which has already taken tangible form. This was that if the censorship was lifted for America and Great Britain, it should also be raised for the French press.

Emphatic demands along this line have been made, particularly by the Socialist newspapers, and in the long run the French Government may have to make concessions in favor of its own national press.

Bald Official Communique Issued.

PARIS, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—The meeting of the Supreme War Council at the Foreign Office this morning, occupying two hours, was the only formal gathering of the peace delegates today. As summed up in the official communiqué, the Russian situation and the conference's relations with the press were the only subjects treated.

The communiqué reads:

The President of the United States of America and the Prime Ministers and Foreign Secretaries of the Allied Powers, assisted by the Japanese Ambassadors in Paris and London, met today at the Qual d'Orsay from 10:30 A. M. to 12:30 P. M.

The question of the relations between the conference and the press was first taken up. It was decided to call a meeting of the members of the press of the allied and associated countries at the Press Club, 80 Avenue des Champs Elysées, today at 5 o'clock for the interchange of views as to the method to be adopted.

The meeting then took up the question of the situation in Russia and agreed that the Governments should acquaint each other with the latest information at their disposal, with a view to the joint examination of the question.

The next meeting will be held tomorrow, Friday, at 10:30 A. M.

The Supreme Council, it developed later, appointed a committee to discuss the subject of publicity, and the British and American correspondents this afternoon met separately in caucus to formulate the position they would take at the later conference with the Council's Committee. Afterward the British and American newspapermen met in joint caucus in an effort to harmonize their plans.

The committee named by the Council comprises Sir George Riddell, for Great Britain; Ray Stannard Baker, for the United States; MM. Commert and Corbin for France, and Signor Aldrovanda for Italy. Japan is not represented on the committee.

Lansing on Partial Secrecy.

The question of whether deliberations were to be open or secret had reached a stage before today's decisions where some authoritative statement on the subject was sought. Just before today's meeting, Secretary of State Robert Lansing authorized the following as his view:

"The American policy is that fullest publicity consistent with the rapid and satisfactory discharge of important business which must come before the Peace Congress should be accorded. It is possible that sessions should be open when business is advanced to a point where it can be regarded as ready for final action. It may be, however, that in the earlier stage, when subjects are being discussed between groups, or in committees or in meetings of all the delegates, with a purpose of reaching agreements on controversial phases, it would be inadvisable to conduct these discussions openly. There might never be an agreement otherwise.

"That would not be secret diplomacy in any sense, however, for no agreement so arranged could be effective until approved by all the delegates in open session."

The complaints which the British correspondents have made to Mr. Lloyd George and which the Americans have submitted to Mr. Wilson concede that it may be incompatible with public interest to disclose certain phases of controversial questions while they are being discussed, but protest against the "gentleman's agreement" which forbids any one of the delegates from giving any information whatever, outside of the official statements, on which public opinion may be formed and guided.

Full Attendance in the Council.

The council had a full attendance of its members at the session. There were present, for France, Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon; for the United States, President Wilson and Secretary Lansing; for Great Britain, Premier Lloyd George and Secretary Balfour; for Italy, Baron Sonnino, Foreign Minister, and for Japan, Viscount Chinda and Baron Matsui.

Vittorio Orlando, the Italian Premier, was the only absentee. He is still detained in Rome.

President Wilson arrived at the meeting place accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and her secretary, Miss Benham.

After the meeting, President Wilson, Premier Lloyd George, Secretary Lansing, and Mr. Balfour remained for some time in the antechamber of M. Pichon's office in earnest conversation.

The discussion of the Russian situation appears to have been confined to an agreement to exchange available information, though the determination to have a joint examination of the subject, as stated in the official communiqué, indicates that the Russian situation will be one of the subjects to be taken under the earliest consideration.

Premier Clemenceau said today that the French Government had no intention of changing its policy with regard to Russia.

Besides Premier Clemenceau as presiding officer at the Peace Conference, provision has been made for several Vice Presidents, among whom will doubtless be an American, sitting alongside M. Clemenceau at the head of the conference table, and occasionally alternating with him in presiding over the deliberations of the congress.

Wilson May Be a Vice President.

The American delegation has not yet designated any one for this function. It is generally understood, however, that the Premiers of the various countries will act in this capacity, and as President Wilson occupies a position similar to that of the Premiers, the Congress naturally would call on him, if he so desired it, to act as a Vice President, though it is thought that he would prefer that some other member of the delegation take his place.

In that case, it would probably fall to Mr. Lansing, as Secretary of State, or else to Henry White, who, as temporary presiding officer, would have an advantage, being a linguist, when addressed by delegates speaking only in French.

A Vice Presidency, in addition to being a highly honorable post, gives its holder the practical advantage of a position at the head of the table with the Premiers and also of conducting the deliberations when M. Clemenceau is absent or yields the chair.

President Wilson, has indefinitely postponed his visit to the invaded regions of France in order to keep in touch with the Peace Conference activities in Paris.

Jan. 15.—No one outside of the delegates to the Peace Congress knows anything about the discussion which preceded today's decision to keep proceedings of the congress secret and to limit information divulged to official statements.

This decision will preclude the American delegates, even Mr. Wilson himself, from discussing the formal announcements that are issued. It will likewise stop the practice of Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain of discussing affairs with British correspondents for the purpose of guiding them in forming public opinion in England.

It has been believed here by persons close to President Wilson that he would contend for open sessions as far as possible. That he still feels the same way is the opinion generally expressed here tonight.

Hints Secrecy Is To Hide Discord.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—A Reuter's dispatch from Paris compares the situation created by the decision for secrecy of peace parleys to a theatre when the curtain jams. "The stage is set, the actors are ready, and the audience is eager, but the curtain refuses to budge," the dispatch says.

"If the curtain rose prematurely," it concludes, "it would throw the glare of the footlights on the fact that even among the five Great Powers there exist sharp and not diminishing discords."

SENATORS ASSAIL SECRET DIPLOMACY

Representatives Also Condemn the Policy Announced by Paris Conferees.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Secret diplomacy at the Paris conference was assailed today by Senators and Representatives in interviews with THE NEW YORK TIMES. While some agreed that in the early preliminary stages there might be matters, not bearing directly upon peace terms, that should be debated behind closed doors, the unanimous feeling was that the fullest publicity ought to be given the proceedings, and that the tendency appeared to be against it.

It was remarked that President Wilson had evidently found himself embarrassed to keep the promise he had made to have the American people "fully informed" as to what went on at the conference because of the attitude of delegates of other nations who preferred secret negotiations. Hope was expressed that the Executive would find a way to extricate himself from this embarrassment and to bring about the open diplomacy that he had advocated when the war was on.

Here are the views of members of Congress as expressed tonight:

Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Colorado—The President assured the American people that they were to be kept "fully informed" as to what occurred at the Peace Conference, and I assume that he will endeavor to make good his promise. I hope he will succeed in doing it. I have noticed that France and Great Britain seem determined upon a policy of secret diplomacy, at least through the preliminary stages of the conference. That puts the President in an embarrassing position on his assurance to the American people, but I hope he will find the way out of it.

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah: "There is a great difference between preliminary talk and actual discussions upon the peace terms. I do not think the position of the President in favor of open negotiations and his opinion as to secret diplomacy would prevent preliminary conversations between representatives at the Peace Conference. I do not see how it would be possible to proceed in an orderly way and reach concrete and definite results within a reasonable time without preliminary discussions and quasi negotiations between all, or a part, of the delegates.

Senator McCumber, Republican, of North Dakota—I favor secrecy at the Peace Conference at the beginning of the discussions, where so many complex and very delicate questions must arise which, if made public, would be very likely to create more or less friction between the various States represented. As the situation now stands I think the conferences ought to be in secret. When the conferees agree on something definite, something fundamental, then the American people ought to be informed of what is going on. Open diplomacy was assured them and they ought to have it.

Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho—I can hardly express my regret over the turn which things have taken as to the secrecy of the proceedings at Versailles. It is very clearly indicated that the proceedings are to be secret to the most marked degree. It is a repetition of the old Vienna program. If we could feel that they would, at the end of each day, really give out the substanceof what had occurred at the day's proceedings, I, for myself, would be glad to overlook the conversational secrecy.

Senator Sherman, Republican, of Illinois—The American people ought to have all the available information that would be of value in determining whether the treaty that is to be ratified by the Senate is the character of treaty they want their Government to make. To force secrecy at this time is a distinct blow to the President's idea of the League of Nations.

Representative Henry D. Flood, Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Democrat—I am opposed to a secret peace conference. It is opposed to our ideas of a new diplomacy, although I can see where it may be necessary to proceed in secret in the early stages. But I think it would be better to give out everything possible and let the public know what is doing.

Representative Nicholas Longworth, Republican, of Ohio—It is a surprise to me that there should be any question as to the character of the Peace Conference. The American people have been led to believe that every publicity would be given the proceedings, and that it was going to bear at least the substance of what was going on during the different steges of the negotiations.

REFUSES TO DISCUSS WORK OF CONFERENCE

Clemenceau Asks Deputies Not to Embarrass It by Interpellations.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—When asked in the Chamber of Deputies today on what day the Government could discuss interpellations on the Peace Conference, Premier Clemenceau replied that the objects of the conference had already occupied five or six sittings, and the Government could not discuss them anew.

"I refuse to attend an afternoon meeting of the conference in order to be here," he added. "The conference continues its work in the spirit of the sincerest conciliation. The right to interpellate cannot be suspended during the conference, but it ought not to embarrass the conference.

"It is the first time that delegates of all the nations of the world have met together. It is the first time that the idea has come to the minds of men to rise above more or less narrow considerations in order to strive to make conditions of a general peace which will assure tranquillity to civilization.

"It is a great prospect, difficult to realize, and it cannot be realized unless Parliament supports us. The policy of inciting certain men of the Government against others ought to be renounced."

LOOK TO WILSON TO END SECRECY

American Correspondents Feel Sure He Will Oppose the Closure Rule.

ACTION CAUSES GLOOM

Writers on All Sides Regard It as an Act of Bad Faith.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Information which comes to me from reliable sources—for in spite of the closure resolution the human desire for conversation with one's fellow men has not been suppressed—indicates that President Wilson is entirely unsympathetic with the action taken yesterday by the Interallied Peace Conference binding the delegates to give no statement to the press, other than that contained in the cryptic and colorless official communiqués. And I think it is not going too far to say that Mr. Lloyd George and other British delegates share the President's sentiments.

The protests yesterday by the British and American correspondents already are having some effect, for the first matter that came before the interallied conference this morning was the stir its closure resolution had caused.

The conference decided to take cognizance of the dissatisfaction expressed, and it was agreed that the delegations of the United States, Great Britain, France, and Italy appoint representatives to meet the correspondents to discuss the situation. The meeting was held this afternoon with Sir George Riddell representing Great Britain and Ray Stannard Baker for the United States. Nothing has yet come to light to show clearly whether the resolution will be modified, but it is quite apparent that if it continues in force the deliberations and decisions of the peacemakers will be seriously hampered by a widespread suspicion that their work is being conducted in accordance with bygone principles that won't bear the light of day.

One thing that the correspondents of American, and, I think, most British newspapers find difficult to understand is how the American and British plenipotentiaries allowed themselves to be bound by any such arrangement. It is true that in matters of procedure in the conference a majority vote prevails, and in this case the French, Italians, and Japanese are credited with outvoting the British and Americans.

But it has been emphasized to the American correspondents by those privileged to speak for the United States Commission that no majority rule can overcome the right of any nation to follow its own course of action in everything that comes before the conference.

For illustration, if a majority of the delegations decided to put in the general peace treaty a provision abrogating the Monroe Doctrine, no power on earth could compel President Wilson and his fellow commissioners to sign the treaty. In every such case there is necessarily unanimous agreement just as in all matters of mutual contract, for that is all treaties are.

However, American correspondents are feeling less resentful today in view of their belief that President Wilson sympathizes with their position and in view of the action of the conference in appointing a committee to consult them.

Correspondents Depressed.

It is impossible to exaggerate the depressing effect the closure resolution has had on the representatives of the American newspapers. In a journalistic experience covering many years I never knew a time when American newspapermen were so thoroughly filled with an unselfish and patriotic desire to help their country, and for that matter the entire world. This feeling extends to the younger as well as the older writers. Furthermore, the correspondents for American newspapers came here in the belief that the Paris conference would be conducted on a new method which was symbolized in the first of the President's fourteen points, "Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at," which with the other principles laid down by the President was accepted by all the allied powers.

They also felt assured of the abolishment of secret methods of diplomacy by the interpretation they placed on Mr. Wilson's explanation to Congress of his reason for taking over the cables—that it was for the purpose of giving free flow to communication between America and France during the Peace Conference.

It is not forgotten here how the American press, people, and Congress made indignant protest when it was reported that a representative of the Committee on Public Information would come to Paris to censor the news of the conference, and which emphasized that the whole country realized the importance of knowing concurrently how the destinies of the world were being disposed of by their own and allied plenipotentiaries.

In all these understandings the American correspondents feel that they have been subjected to an act of bad faith and look to their President to correct what they regard as the institution of a censorship, for that is the effect of the new rule limiting the Peace Conference news to a few unilluminating paragraphs.

NEW JUGOSLAV PROTEST.

Croats and Slovenes Want to Sit in the Peace Congress with Serbs.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Serbia cannot take part in the Peace Conference unless represented in a delegation from the combined Serbo-Croatian-Slovene State, the Jugoslav Committee here declares in a protest issued against the decision of the Supreme Council to admit delegates from the Kingdom of Serbia, but not of the United Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes.

The committee says that this action threatens to provoke a conflict which may have serious consequences, and that the refusal to accept the delegates of the united State would make it impossible for Serbia herself to participate in the conference.

The protest concludes by saying that the Council, in arriving at its decision, did not take into account the new situation in Serbia, and thus will be obliged to examine the question anew.

PARIS PAPER PROTESTS

Figaro Wants Constant Publicity, but Temps Opposes Giving Germans Information.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—An almost universal protest against the limitation of news from the Peace Conference has gone up this afternoon from the London press. The action of the conference is declared to be absolutely contrary to the announcement made only yesterday that the censorship on the dispatches of British correspondents had been removed, and The Star surmises that the American and British delegates, who were present at the meeting which made the decision—Wilson, Lansing, Lloyd George, and Balfour—have been overruled by the French, Italian and Japanese representatives—Clemenceau, Pichon, Sonnino, Chinda, and Matsui.

The Westminster Gazette says it is "not favorably impressed" by the turn things have taken, and remarks:

"We do not believe the British delegates have willingly agreed to any such silence. We are quite certain the British people will not accept the arrangement. It is a strange beginning of the end of secret diplomacy to allow to escape from the Peace Conference only such an account of the day's proceedings as can be agreed upon by a press committee consisting of two delegates of each of the five principal powers."

The Pall Mall Gazette dwells on the importance of educating the general public on certain topics which can be done only by way of the publication of the news. It says:

"To take the League of Nations alone; whatever progress can be made in turning that conception into reality depends on the democracy becoming familiar with its design, its objects, and its methods. A cut-and-dried scheme produced from behind the curtain of the conference will have neither the weight of tradition nor the appeal of a work in which the public interest is enlisted by reason of its share in its production. But the effect upon the work of the conference will be quite as harmful in restricting the news of its proceedings to bald official communiqués. The widest scope will be given to rumor and to the German aptitude for sowing intrigue, suspicion, and resentment."

One Paper Belittles the Protest.

The only newspaper to take the opposite view is The Evening Standard, which pokes a little fun at "those who have gone to Paris to seek high journalistic adventure," and says:

"Highly colored and intimate versions of the proceedings issued from hour to hour would be likelier to lead to unseemly wrangles than to peace. Discussions in camera are not 'secret diplomacy' so long as at the end of each day the result of the deliberations of the plenipotentiaries are put before the judgment of the world."

The Star extracts some comfort from the opinion of a member of the London staff of the American Committee on Publicity, who said that there was no need of indignation meetings, with hundreds of picked correspondents of both hemispheres in Paris.

"Suppose the first official communiqué is colorless and tells you nothing. It will be the last. The whole bunch of correspondents will buttonhole the delegates, and it won't be speculation, but the real proceedings inside which will leak out in the dispatches cabled abroad."

Meanwhile such Government officials as are left in London refuse to discuss the proceedings in Paris at all, and profess their own ignorance of developments there.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Morning newspapers give much prominence to Paris dispatches referring to the decision that the proceedings of the Peace Congress are to be secret and contrast it with the official statement that there would be no censorship, which was issued yesterday. They point out that it furnishes an inexplicable puzzle. None of the papers comments editorially, but the most of them express surprise and disapproval by big headlines and brief introductory sentences.

Protests are made that the regulation, if maintained, will keep the public completely in the dark as to some of the important features of the negotiations. Some believe it will be difficult to carry out this "Draconian decision."

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The decisions of the Supreme Council as regards both publicity and representation, announced last night, are freely criticised in the French newspapers of this morning. Le Journal, commenting on the question of representation, after pointing out that the British and Americans together have fifteen votes out of the total, asks why, if the British Dominions are represented separately, the French colonies and protectorates are not similarly represented.

"Morocco, Tunis, Cambodia, Annam, and Laos, which have given us many fine soldiers, are sovereign States protected by France," says the newspaper. "Really, have not they as much right to be represented as Liberia? Since the small States have been so generously treated, why have San Marino and Andorra, which declared war, been forgotten? To admit them would not be any more comic than to admit a delegate from Montenegro."

This quotation may be taken as a fair example of the views expressed by most of the other morning newspapers.

As regards the decision on the publicity question, Le Figaro says:

"The public must be kept constantly posted on the subjects dealt with, the questions under discussion and the solutions reached. Reporting by hearsay is certain to be dangerous. Will not it be obvious that the result of the method adopted will be to substitute gossip for news?"

"The problems of the relations between the peace delegates and the press, that is, between the Governments and public opinions, is made particularly delicate," says Le Temps, "by the following considerations:

"On the one hand, equality of treatment for the press of all countries must be assured. As the United States and Great Britain are reluctant to impose restrictions on their newspapers, the only course is to allow the widest tolerance to all.

"On the other hand, it would be harmful to lay bare to the enemy Governments differences of opinion which inevitably arise in discussions between delegations. The very essence of every debate is that contradictions should arise. Such contradictions will assuredly be reconciled, but it would be very unfortunate that Germany should know the details, day by day, and seek to make capital out of them."

WISE SAYS WILSON SHOULD STAY IN EUROPE

Regrets That He Must Return in February—Demands United American Support.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Chairman of the American Zionist deputation, who has been in England and France for the last month, will leave Paris tomorrow for America. I asked him what he would say at home concerning the Peace Conference and President Wilson's presence here.

"The chief thing to be done by America," he said, "is to keep President Wilson in Europe. If the American people knew how imperative is the President's presence in Paris at the present time, they would beseech him to stay here throughout the Conference. It is greatly to be regretted that he must return to America in February because of the adjournment of Congress. His business is Europe's Peace Conference in France. America has a great work to do, and President Wilson above all men is needed to do it.

"Another thing to be urged upon Americans is that we must not allow our domestic differences to be magnified into grave national disputes. If any Americans come to Paris in the hope of lessening the prestige of the President, let them frankly say so, that all Americans may know. An unbelievable rumor reaches me that men of great distinction in American life are arriving in Paris, nominally to serve as newspaper correspondents or in one capacity or another, but actually to fight the President. The President can take care of himself, and the American people will take care of these gentlemen, whatever their motives or whoever their clients, when the day of reckoning comes.

"America enters the Peace Conference mightily advantaged on two grounds. We ask nothing, we desire nothing, save a just and durable peace. In our disinterestedness lies our strength.

"In the next place, America is represented by the man who has come to command the confidence of the people of Allied countries as no other living man has. The faith of the Allied peoples in Wilson is a moral asset analogous to the faith of the American people in Wilson throughout the years of the war.

"Two things are needed. The President must remain in the Peace Conference. The American people must stand united behind him in making peace as in making war. America is not asked to surrender its independence of judgment to any Presidential fiat. I have seen and heard things in London and Paris that give me the right and make it my duty as an American citizen to lay it upon the hearts of my fellow-citizens to stand behind the President now."

CHINA'S PRESIDENT FOR PEACE LEAGUE

check the inordinate ambitions of militarists in every part of the world.

"The proposal of President Wilson for making the league one of the terms of peace and for the cancellation of the doctrines of spheres of influence and balance of power in Europe and elsewhere naturally receives the whole-hearted indorsement of China. If the proposed league becomes a fact, the nations of the world should stand on an equal plane, and secret diplomacy will then naturally be deprived of its sanction. If this is not so, the principle involved in the proposed league will not prove really effective or a source of benefit to the undeveloped powers.

As to China's Railroads.

"Some Western people hold the view that it would be a great benefit to China if the railroads, present and prospective, could be internationalized until such time as China could take full control of all the leased zones and concessions, and likewise be internationalized as a temporary measure. From the point of view of China, however, a very different policy receives general indorsement, namely, that, with the view of preserving her territorial integrity, all railroads, leased zones, and concessions should revert to her absolute and complete control, internationalization being unthought of.

"However, this matter obviously depends upon our national strength and the standard of the people, and not upon empty words. What China's policy should be until the time comes when she can assume full control can hardly be decided upon in a moment. The right to construct new railroads, as well as existing concessions, is governed by agreements and cannot be dealt with in a summary way. The Government is now deliberating upon the best policy to meet this problem.

"It is China's heartfelt desire that, in consequence of the development of commerce and industry, her relationship with the other nations will become closer and more friendly, certainly not that her sovereign rights should suffer from such development. It is hoped that the friendly powers will understand that this desire will work toward its fulfillment."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS OUTLINED BY LANE

Secretary Insists He Has No Knowledge of What Is Being Done in Paris.

PLAN TO ENFORCE RULES

Offending Country, He Says, Isolated by Order of Tribunal, Could Not Stand Such a Boycott.

An address on the League of Nations made yesterday by Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, at a luncheon of the Merchants' Association at the Hotel Astor, took on especial significance to the business men because it went into considerable detail as to what the American conception of such a league should be. Secretary Lane was careful to say that he had no knowledge "of the propositions that are made in Paris." The Chairman was Lewis E. Pierson, First Vice President of the association.

After pursuing the line of argument that war does not pay, Secretary Lane explained that a League of Nations might organize two bodies—a council to formulate a body of an international law and a court to decide on violations of compact between the nations.

"Now, international law is filmy, gauzy, founded upon precedent and without certainty, decision, or definiteness," he said. "Suppose that council had the power to take into its own hands an effort, first, to inquire as to what the trouble between nations may be; second, to make an effort at conciliation; third, to bring about arbitration if possible; fourth, to call upon the nations to encompass the delinquent and make its social and economic life impossible, and fifth, as a last resort, to bring about war.

"Now, the first thing that council would do would be to declare upon paper just what the rules are that govern as between those nations which entered into that compact. First, the nations would agree upon, not the machinery, but the principles—what the law is. Then there would be established a court that could decide whether there had been a violation of the compact that had been entered into by all the nations. That would not bind us if we went into it to accept anything except that which was brought back and which we approved of.

"First, then, a council which would declare what the rules of the game were, and we do not know what the rules are now; second, the court, that could enforce those rules. That is not unreasonable, that is not visionary, that is not a dream.

"And how are they to be enforced?

"First by the pressure of the nations of the world—and don't belittle that. In these days of newspapers and telegraphs, of merchants' associations, of all the thousand organizations—and there are 864,000 different organizations in the United States today—in these days of organizations, when opinion can be quickly crystallized, opinion is not to be flouted as a matter of coercion.

"Then as a body the inquiry could be made and the facts ascertained upon which that opinion could act; then if arbitration were brought about the parties to that arbitration would be bound to submit, in the first instance, all of their questions to arbitration which did not involve national independence, did not involve their integrity. They would be bound to submit those questions to the public of the world, and before that public they would be judged. And we have an effort that can be made this side of the war. Take any country that you please in your mind and let me picture what might happen to it:

"We could put a circle around that country, cut off every postal combination, so that no letters could go in or out, cut off every bill of exchange, cut off every export, if you please; cut off every ship, cut the railroad lines at the border, cut off all diplomatic communication, isolated that nation; and there is not a nation that ever has made war that I know of that could stand such a circle of iron brought around it by the combined effort of the nations of the world; and if that nation, in violation of its pact, does attack one of the nations within this league or this council, this association, then we must adopt the motto of the Three Musketeers, 'One for all and all for one.' But there is not one case in a million in which that resort would be forced upon us.

"I do not know what may come out of Paris. I have no knowledge of the propositions that are made in Paris. But I do know that we are bound to champion the idea of a League of Nations, of an association, as the President put it—a general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small nations alike. I have heard it said that under any such league or any such council of nations, any such effort at international co-operation, the Monroe Doctrine would be scattered to the winds. I want to ask you to read that line of the President's, and see if it is not the very incarnation of the Monroe Doctrine itself."

PEACE TABLE A HORSESHOE.

Americans and British to be Close Neighbors at Plenary Sessions.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The formal opening of the Peace Congress on Saturday will be carried out with ceremonies befitting such an occasion. A detachment of troops will pay honors to the arriving delegates, and Stephen Pichon will receive President Wilson at the head of the steps of the Foreign Ministry and accompany him to the room where the meeting will begin at 3 o'clock sharp.

The plenipotentiaries will sit around a horseshoe table, the middle part of which will be reserved for officers. The delegations will be grouped by States in alphabetical order, as they appear in the Almanach de Gotha. American delegates will be at one end, then those of the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan in the order named. After them will come representatives of other States, also seated alphabetically.

When all are seated President Poincaré will enter and take the Presidential arm chair to make the opening address. He is expected to refer to the immense task of universal reconstruction which will be laid upon the conference and the high ideals of justice which will be observed during the deliberations of the congress. He will then conclude by declaring the session open and will withdraw.

Premier Clemenceau will take his place in the chair as chief of the French delegation, this being his right, as the congress is meeting in the capital of France. He will request the assembly to elect officers. Regulations for the congress will then be read. It is expected that they will be ratified as they stand, after which they will be made public.

Formal invitations to attend the first sitting were sent out last night by the French delegation to Ambassadors and Ministers of various countries. These invitations announce the number of representatives accorded to each country and ask the diplomats to transmit invitations immediately to the person or persons chosen to attend.

The great Salle de la Paix at the Foreign Office was today being prepared for the first meeting of the congress, at which it is not expected that any of the large questions aside from those of organization and procedure will be considered. Except for the addresses by President Poincaré and Premier Clemenceau there will be no speechmaking, and it is not believed that the subject of the League of Nations or the question of Russia will be taken up. Their consideration will await the first business session of the congress.

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—President Wilson was invited today by Mayor Peters to come to this port on his return from France. Will you grant us this privilege by returning to America through the Port of Boston?"

LUXEMBURG CALM IN POLITICAL SHIFT

Seeks Closer Ties with Allies Through Deposal of Former Grand Duchess.

DEEP AVERSION TO GERMANY

Customs Union with France Wanted, While Preserving Local Independence.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LUXEMBURG, Jan. 11, (via London, Jan. 15.)—I expected to come into a grand duchy. What I am in I cannot be sure of.

In these days no man knows whether the State for which he sets out will be there when he arrives. East of Belgium and France no man is quite certain whether the Government of tonight will be in office tomorrow morning. In many places it does not seem to make much difference.

When I left Cologne this morning I knew there were chances of a change in the policy of Luxemburg. But as I crossed the frontier, where, to illustrate the complexities of the organization or disorganization of modern Europe, it was an American sentry who challenged me, I was quite unaware that Luxemburg had changed its policy already; and nothing in the picturesque, well-worked countryside suggested a revolution.

The capital itself was preserving absolute calm. It was not until I had been for some time in conversation with a genial citizen that he mentioned as odd but not important the fact that the Grand Duchess had quit her throne.

My powers of description cannot express the disinterested calm which reigned in the city. Everybody, with mild geniality, was attending strictly to business. The stranger who was persistent found it more and more difficult to believe that anything definite had happened.

Was there distress in Luxemburg? Not in the least. They are rationed, but no one lacked anything.

Was the Grand Duchess unpoular? Before the war, I was told, everybody liked her. During the war there was much disapproval of her attitude regarding the Germans. Now the Germans are duly beaten, and it is felt that the Grand Duchess is the wrong woman in the wrong place.

Such, I am assured, are the sentiments of the town. But the country people are as loyal to her Highness as ever.

Now for an exact history of the revolution. A deputation from Luxemburg went to Paris a little while ago to urge French action in the affairs of the State. A discreet answer was given; but Luxemburg became impatient.

There was unrest in the Chamber and out of it. The army—for Luxemburg has an army—became uneasy. A Welfare Committee, a sort of Committee of Public Safety, was formed to bring the Duchy in close concert with the Allies, especially France and Belgium. It was believed by a strong party that this could best be secured by proclaiming Luxemburg an independent republic.

The Grand Duchess offered no opposition. She placed her tenure of power at the disposal of the people. She is not now in the capital city, but at her palace of Colmar, some miles away.

On Tuesday it is expected that the decision will be made by the Chamber or a plebiscite will be decreed as to the future form of the Government. The alternatives are the accession of another Princess of the reigning dynasty of Nassau Braganza or the proclamation of a republic.

Jan. 12.—I had this morning the advantage of talking over the situation with M. Luchousse, the Burgomaster of Luxemburg. Apart from disgust for everything German, which was roused by the outrage of the invasion of 1914, the causes of the present change are economic. Before the war, you remember, Luxemburg, an independent State, was included in the German Customs Union.

The chief industries of the little State, which numbers 260,000 people, are in iron and iron ore. Its natural economic connection, therefore, is with the power which holds the iron and coal of Lorraine and the Saar Valley. I am assured that both the iron workers and the commercial classes are strongly in favor of the new orientation of economic policy, and the great majority are in favor of some form of customs union with France.

There is no question of any other connection. All Luxemburg stands together for independence. The events of the last four years have only strengthened the desire of the little State for complete freedom. Whatever the flag, republican or ducal, autonomy is its blazon.

What the movement means is the recognition that the economic reconstruction of western Europe is at hand. The people of Luxemburg read the signs of the times and mean to be prepared.

ORDERS RUMANIANS OUT OF BUKOWINA

Ukraine Government Sends an Ultimatum and Moves Troops Toward the Frontier.

BERNE, Jan. 14.—The Ukrainian Government has sent an ultimatum to Rumania demanding the evacuation of Bukowina, according to a telegram received from Kiev today. Ukrainian troops, it is announced, are moving toward the Bukowina frontier.

Simultaneously, the message adds, the Ukrainian National Council has telegraphed to President Wilson in Paris a request for permission to delegate two American Ukrainians to represent the Ukraine at the Peace Conference and act otherwise as representatives of their nation in Paris.

ARMY SCATTERS REBELS MARCHING ON MUNICH

Attempt at Bavarian Overturn Crushed—Eisner Party's Vote 75,000 Out of 2,750,000.

MUNICH, Jan. 15. (Associated Press.)—An attempt to overthrow the Bavarian Government was planned for today. Government forces, however, intercepted Spartacides who were marching from Stuttgart and Augsburg to Munich and dispersed them.

Two hundred Bolsheviki were arrested in a raid on local hotels and many of them were beaten severely by angry soldiers.

BERLIN, Jan. 14. (Associated Press.)—Nearly complete returns from the Bavarian elections show that the party of Premier Kurt Eisner polled only 75,000 votes out of a total vote in excess of 2,750,000. The Clericals polled more than 1,000,000 votes and the Majority Socialists 900,000.

The Eisner party and the Independent Socialists secured only four of the Assembly's 156 delegates and the Majority Socialists 50, while the combined bourgeois parties have 102 representatives.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Advices from Berne regarding the situation in Bavaria report that in order to prevent members of the Spartacus group and Bolshevist agitators from reaching Bavaria the Government has drastically amended its passport rules. In future, even German subjects will need passports to enter Bavarian territory.

DAVIS HAILS BRITAIN AS OUR AID IN PEACE

Churchill Lauds Wilson in Speech at Dinner to the American Ambassador.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Practically the entire British Cabinet and the full bench of judges helped the American Society tonight to welcome Ambassador Davis at a dinner at the Savoy Hotel. Opportunity was taken by Winston Churchill in proposing the health of President Wilson to explain how during his visit he had allayed all British feare concerning his attitude toward British naval power.

"President Wilson," he said, "made us understand how sympathetically he understood the special needs, dangers and conditions of our island empire; how it is dependent from month to month, and from year to year upon its naval strength and power; dependent for its surety as well as its integrity; dependent hour by hour for the whole of its prosperity and for its daily bread four days out of five. In fact, he made us realize that he grasped and understood, in a spirit of true comradeship and sympathy, our unique situation and special condition in regard to all that concerns the security of Britain on the seas."

He also emphasized the readiness of Germany to foster in other countries the Bolshevism it suppressed in its own, and the need of sympathy and confidence between England and America in fighting it and restoring order to the world.

The Ambassador, who has already established his reputation here as a polished orator, in speaking of the need of each country, said:

"We have seen, he said, American battalions commanded by British officers and British ships under an American Admiral; also, he said, we had seen King and President ride side by side, and he had himself heard a British Tommy whistle 'Marching Through Georgia,' but that, he said, did not mean that America and England would never disagree. They would have lost their vitality, he declared, if they sank to a perpetual dull agreement. They could afford, he said, to disagree and yet work together to restore peace and to bring back orders and happiness to the world.

LONDON, Jan 16, (Associated Press.)—"It is on the firm rock of friendship and understanding between the English-speaking peoples that the foundations of a League of Nations must be laid," said John W. Davis, the American Ambassador, in his speech tonight at the dinner given in his honor by the American Society.

The Ambassador's theme was the friendship and co-operation existing between Great Britain and the United States, and he urged the preservation of the ties on which "depends so much of the freedom and happiness not only for ourselves, but for all the world besides."

"It is the glory of our kind," Mr. Davis continued, "that we can not only learn from one another, but can disagree and talk our differences out without making it necessary for our neighbors to call in the police or our nations to put their armies on the march.

"In the long century of unbroken peace between our countries there has been more than one question on which we found ourselves unable to agree, but not one which we were not willing to submit to the calm and candid judgment of impartial men. * * *

"We are about to urge this manner of life upon other nations of the world as the best insurance against ceaseless war. Let us rejoice that we can offer at the council board both the precept and the example."

Mr. Davis said that the American people had reason to be gratified that they had shared the struggles and sacrifices of the war with Great Britain and the Allies. "But," he continued, "we shall, I am sure, be prouder still if hereafter history shall write that at the close of the great war humanity entered upon a new era of peace, order, and happiness in which America and Great Britain were common laborers, if not, indeed, the pioneers.

"I covet for my country a great place among the nations. I wish nothing less than that America may be first in service to mankind."

CONFER ON ARMISTICE.

Marshal Foch Meets German Delegates at Treves.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Marshal Foch, Allied Commander in Chief, arrived in Treves yesterday morning to meet the German armistice delegates for discussion of the extension of the armistice. The Marshal received Mathias Erzberger and General von Winterfeldt, the German representatives, in his car.

Discussion over the renewal of the armistice began at once, and the first dispatch from Marshal Foch reached Paris last night, says Marcel Hutin, in the Echo de Paris, but nothing has been made public as to the result of the conference.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Rosa Luxemburg, one of the most active of the Spartacide leaders in Berlin, has been murdered, according to a dispatch from that city received by the Exchange Telegraph Company by way of Copenhagen.

BERLIN, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—A search of the house formerly occupied by Rosa Luxemburg has disclosed lists with the names and addresses of all the Spartacide leaders, with other valuable details.

KOLCHAK PROCLAIMS NATIONAL ELECTION

Russia's Destiny Can Only Be Decided by Constituent Assembly, He Says.

ONLY TEMPORARY DICTATOR

Will Retire as Soon as the Crisis Confronting His Country Is Past.

OMSK, Central Siberia, Jan. 13, (Associated Press.)—In the opinion of Admiral Kolchak, supreme head of the Omsk Government, the destiny of Russia can be decided only by a National Constituent Assembly. "Whether the future of Russia is a monarchy or the most radical republic does not concern the present Government," was the utterance he made today to The Associated Press.

Admiral Kolchak, confirming his statement that an opportunity would be given to the people to register their desires, signed in the presence of the correspondent a document proclaiming an All-Russian national election at the earliest practicable moment. He said he was anxious that the American people should alter their conception of his program of reconstruction, adding that the work of the dictator was liable to cause misunderstandings.

He explained that the two great necessities of Russia were the creation of an army and the destruction of Bolshevism. He considered that a directorate over the country was not feasible, first, because the military situation demanded that power be placed in the hands of one man, and second, some members were partisan and used their influence to disorganise the army. He pointed out that different dictators in history were usually military leaders who proclaimed themselves dictators. He, on the contrary, was chosen by his colleagues for the purpose of leading Russia through her crisis. He was delegating civil matters entirely to colleagues. His power was temporary, and when order was restored and the crisis was passed he would retire and leave everything to the representatives of the people.

Three Groups in the Country.

Discussing the internal political situation, he explained that there were three clearly defined groups in the country, the people supporting the Government in its efforts to reconstruct Russia along constitutional lines, the reactionary element, which was striving for the restoration of the monarchy, and the revolutionary Socialists, who might at any time fall back into Bolshevism.

Asked if he favored allied and American intervention, he said:

"Russia today is terribly disorganized and needs financial, economic, and industrial help from America and the Allies, but especially requires munitions and clothes for the army, which is suffering from lack of essential garments. Concerning intervention east of the Urals, I would welcome detachments of Americans, English, and French troops, not for fighting necessarily, but for the moral effect they would produce on the Russian Army. Communication with Russia is difficult and enemy propagandists are active. If the troops with their own eyes saw America and the Allies backing them in their cause, the fight against terrorism would be won.

"This would not be intervention in Russian affairs. It would help with the salvation of the nation. My present army of 250,000 men is sufficient to conquer the Bolsheviki if clothed and supplied with munitions. But any allied military or economic help depends entirely on the maintenance of the railroads, which are disintegrating. The transportation problem is dominant and must first be solved."

Discussing General Semenoff, he said Semenoff was a local leader and unimportant, but added that the powers had intervened and, therefore, the controversy was now an international question. He said that postponement of a settlement was embarrassing and added that if Semenoff would leave the line of the Trans-Siberian Railroad he could do anything he liked.

P. V. Vologodsky, Premier of the Omsk Government, in an interview expressed the view that Russia could be saved from violent reaction to autocracy only by the publication of a moderate political program.

"The reconstruction of Russia is necessary to the world," he said, "because the world needs Russia's riches, including wheat, minerals, and raw materials. Succor to Russia will, perhaps, be a tribute to Russia's service in the war and a mark of sympathy for the enthusiasm and idealism of the Slav race."

AGREEMENT WITH JAPAN IS COMPROMISE ONE

Stevens to Direct Siberian Railway—Japanese to Head Military Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — Viscount Ishii, the Japanese Ambassador, presented today to Frank L. Polk, the Acting Secretary of State, a plan based on an understanding between the United States and Japan, reached at Tokio, for the creation of an inter-allied committee under the Presidency of a Russian, for the restoration of the Trans-Siberian Railway and the Chinese-Eastern Railway.

It was stated today that the question of rehabilitation and management of the railway had been the subject of prolonged negotiations between Washington and Tokio, and that the agreement was in the nature of a compromise.

Japan is said to have objected to control by a foreign power of a railway system so close to Japan's doors. While the Chairman of the technical board will be an American, John F. Stevens, who was originally employed by the Russian Provisional Government, it is assumed that the Chairman of the military board, whose appointment is provided for in the agreement, will be a Japanese General.

International control of the Transiberian and Chinese Eastern Railroads will come to an end whenever a regular Government is established in Russia. At that time, if Russia desires foreign advisers, she may employ them, but Japan will not assent to continuance of the international control, or to the placing of the management of the road under the authority of any foreign Government.

The object of the military board will be to safeguard the railway, prevent interference with its operation, and protect its employes. Japan now has fewer than 26,000 trops in Siberia, all of whom have been withdrawn from the interior, where order has been re-established, to positions near the coast, where only a small force will be maintained.

BIGGEST U-BOAT AT BREST.

U-139 Arrives Two Weeks Late, Owing to Damaged Condition.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—The German submarine U-139 has arrived at Brest a fortnight later than other U-boats turned over to France, owing to her damaged condition. She is the world's largest submarine, being 354 feet long and having a displacement of 2,900 tons. She made only one cruise before the armistice was signed.

FRAME REPUBLIC OF NEW GERMANY

for peace at any price, characterizing Prince Max's statement to that effect as misleading. It was Prince Max's fault, he said, since the war could not have been worse than are conditions now, even had Germany been actually vanquished in battle.

Count Westarp emphasized that he and his party had never believed that an end without victor and vanquished was possible. There was only one alternative: conquer or be destroyed. That was why he wanted to fight to the bitter end. Annexationist intention never prolonged the war, he asserted, but the result would have been quite different had the U-boat war started twelve months earlier.

He said that the National People's Party, as successor of the old Conservative Party, could continue the latter's work with a clear conscience, because it had no hand in ending the war and no responsibility for what happened afterward.

PROCLAIMS ORDER RESTORED.

Ebert Cabinet Makes Big Show of Force to Awe Rebels.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Order has been restored in Berlin, it is announced by an official wireless appeal to the German nation sent out by the German Government today and picked up here.

The appeal, which was signed by Premier Ebert, Philipp Scheidemann, Herr Landsberg, Gustave Noske, and Herr Wissell, members of his Cabinet, says that the Government is determined to prevent by every means at its disposal a repetition of "similar abominations."

The address refers to the coming elections under the "freest suffrage in the world to determine the constitution of the German state." It adds that the present Government is preparing a draft of a constitution which protects the free right of self-determination of the nation "against all counter-revolutions or efforts at terrorism."

Efforts are being made, it is said, to "arrive at a peace safeguarding the freedom of the German nation, and which will render possible the foundation of a union of nations that will give protection against the danger of a fresh war."

After declaring that there is necessity of defending the nation against the Polish annexationists, the appeal concludes:

"No less is it our task to protect our frontier against fresh Russian military despotism, which wants to force upon us by means of warlike power its anarchistic conditions and unchain a new world war of which our country would be the theatre. Bolshevism means the death of peace, of freedom, and socialism."

The German Government, says the Tageblatt, is making a great display of force. The whole inner city of Berlin is occupied by troops and heavy artillery is stationed in the Donhoff-Platz and the Spittel-Markt.

LIEBKNECHT REPORTED CAPTURED BY TROOPS

Said to be Held in Berlin Hotel —Snipers Still Active Against Ebert's Troops.

BERLIN, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Spartacide leader, has been captured, it was learned late tonight, by officers and men of the Division of Mounted Rifle Guards who arrived in Berlin today.

The Spartacide leader is said to have been seized and taken to the fashionable Hotel Eden, in the western part of Berlin. Private telephone communication with the hotel was cut off abruptly soon after it was reported that he had been taken there.

Spartacide snipers continued their activities last night in some parts of the city, and especially in the newspaper section, where the Wolff Bureau office and the Tageblatt building were the objects of their fire. Other snipers rendered the district around the Halles gate in the southern part of the city unsafe, and there was also some scattered firing in the northern section.

Hot but futile firing went on all night around the Stettin railway station.

Rifles Seized in Search.

The systematic search of the Moabit district by the Government forces continues. More than 2,000 rifles, four machine-guns, and an uncounted number of revolvers have been recovered. The authorities intend to extend the search to other sections of the city.

More than 500 persons have been arrested on the streets for carrying weapons without a permit, which is a serious offense.

The work of finding weapons is being done in a most thorough manner. The correspondent in a walk of one mile last night was stopped three times and asked whether he had weapons. He was required to show his special pass before being permitted to proceed.

Herr Noske, the Military Commander of Berlin, has issued a decree pointing out that the troops assembled in Berlin under his orders are not counter-revolutionary tools, but are merely intended to restore order. All street gatherings have been prohibited and the inhabitants have been admonished to keep off the streets, especially after dark. The public has also been informed that telephone service will soon be employed almost entirely for military and police purposes and is requested to limit its use of the telephone to the minimum.

The ferment in the city is plainly growing less serious and the authorities believe that they are gradually overpowering the hoodlums and robbers who are now principally responsible for the disturbances at night.

Food Wanted from Poland.

If rural Germany desires to punish Berlin for the misbehavior at the capital by withholding food shipments it would probably find its ambitions frustrated by the system of national distribution evolved two years ago and still in operation.

Provincial Germany (that is, the agrarian sections) turns in its food products under this system to local receiving stations, whence they are sent to various sections of the country. The producer is rarely aware of the destination of his wheat, potatoes, vegetables, or cattle, all of which are apportioned according to the needs of the various communities.

The municipalities making up Greater Berlin are merely distributing agents, on the food supply is likely to be nil, and they usually keep the metropolitan population of some 4,000,000 supplied two or three weeks in advance.

While disgust with Berlin over the rebellion is unconcealed in all parts of Germany, the influence of this feeling on the food supply is likey to be nil. The only immediate menace appears to be the shortage in rolling stock, although the possibilities of the Polish invasion of Posen are serving to complicate matters.

Emmanuel Wurm, the national Food Commissioner, informed the correspondent today that the situation in Posen was threatening to become acute, and that its immediate effect upon the shipment of wheat and potatoes to Berlin was already being felt.

"The Polish authorities," said the Commissioner, "have been demanding coal in exchange for foodstuffe. Germany has supplied the fuel, but the Poles have failed to reciprocate. They have not only failed to ship wheat and potatoes, but have retained the rolling stock which carried our coal to them."

Herr Wurm said he believed that the present critical food situation in Germany's eastern provinces and its effect on the Berlin supply would be quickly dissipated when Poland's political aspirations were once adjusted and the Polish Government was stabilized.

"Prussia is the only food buyer in those sections, which need our industrial products, as they are purely agrarian, said the Minister.

"The internal unrest in Germany is due to the failure of the Entente to conclude a speedy peace. Instead of doing this, it is complicating the negotiations with new demands. When the boundaries and other interstate relations are once definitely fixed, commercial relations can be promptly resumed.

"Our present supplies will enable us to hold out for four months, but unless peace brings us food relief by that time we will be at the end of our present limited desources."

DIVIDE ON GERMAN AUSTRIA.

Centrists Favor Union, but Strong Influences Oppose It.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Jan. 15, (via Geneva.)—According to special information from Germany the Centre Party, representing the Catholic elements, has decided to support the plan of a German-Austrian Union with Germany.

Austrian feeling regarding the proposed union is divided. The plan is supported by the German Nationalists and Social Democrats, while opposed by the Christian Socialists and manufacturing class, who incline towards a federation with the other newly formed Austrian States, if possible.

Owing to a shortage of flour, the public bread ration in Vienna for next week has been reduced one-half.

REVOLUTIONISTS SET UP SEPARATE REPUBLICS

Communist Rule at Bremen—Boundaries Planned for a Northern Federation.

BERLIN, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—Details of the proclamation of the Independent Communistic (Spartacide) Republic of Bremen are contained in a dispatch to the Lokal-Anzeiger.

The Governing Council is composed of three members each from the Independent Socialists, the Spartacides, and the Soldiers' Council. The Senate has been compelled to surrender its authority. The press has been placed under a preventive censorship and compelled to publish proclamations of the new Government.

The Spartacides are carrying on a vigorous agitation throughout Northwestern Germany. Attempts to seize power at Delmenhorst and Wilhelmshaven failed.

At Delmenhorst the citizens joined the Majority Socialists in putting down the agitators. At Wilhelmshaven the Spartacides seized the offices of the Tageblatt and Zeitung, but loyal soldiers compelled them and the Independent Socialists to lay down their arms.

Dispatches dated at Wilhelmshaven on Tuesday said that a barracks in which were quartered 400 marines who had joined the Independents had been surrounded by Government troops. It was said that they would probably be obliged to surrender in a few days.

Jan. 14.—The boundaries of the "Central North German Federal Republic," as proposed in a proclamation issued by the Government of Brunswick, are:

Starting from the northern limit of the free town of Hamburg, thence along the river Elbe almost to Burg, near Magdeburg, thence in a straight line to the northernmost point of the former principality of Anhalt and along the boundary of Anhalt to near the town of Bitterfeld. From Bitterfeld it runs along the boundary of Anhalt to near Nordhausen, thence through Prussian territory over the region of Göttingen to the southernmost portion of Brunswick to the northernmost point of the district of Holzminden and thence eastward to Hanover and eastward to Celle and thence on a straight line to Hamburg. (This includes parts or all of the States of Saxony, Anhalt, Brunswick, and Hanover.)

It is proposed that a Federation similar to Switzerland be formed, with the Republic of Anhalt, Brunswick, and Hamburg retaining their independence, and that new independent cantons be formed from the portions of other territory to be included in the new republic.

President Kuhnke of the "Republic of East Friesland" has been deposed by the Majority Socialists, who have installed a new Government at Oldenburg. Kuhnke was an Independent Socialist.

Reports from Essen say that the Spartacides are compelling the miners in that district to go on strike against their will. Clerical election speakers in that region have been attacked by Bolsheviki.

Spartacides who attempted to seize the plant of the Volkszeitung at Dresden have been arrested, together with many other disturbers of the peace in that city.

RIGID ENFORCEMENT IS PLANNED HERE

Measure Drafted by the Anti-Saloon Attorneys to be Offered at Albany.

TO NAME COMMISSIONERS

Twenty Inspectors to Keep Watch in State—Restrictions on Druggists.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Legislation to enforce prohibition in New York State after the Federal amendment becomes operative, in January, 1920, has been prepared for introduction in the Legislature as soon as the question of ratification by the lawmakers of this State has been settled.

The proposed enforcement bill, drafted by attorneys of the Anti-Saloon League, will be introduced by Assemblyman Walter S. McNab of Schenectady, and, possibly, by Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara.

Under the bill, the enforcement of the prohibitory law would be vested in a Prohibition Commissioner, who would supplant the State Excise Commissioner and take over, in part, the duties now performed by that official. Whereas the Excise Commissioner's chief function has been to collect the liquor taxes, the principal task of the Prohibition Commissioner would be to enforce prohibition and to supervise and control the manufacture, distribution, and sale of alcohol for medicinal, mechanical, and pharmaceutical purposes and of wine for sacramental uses.

The commissioner, who would be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate, would be authorized to appoint a Chief Deputy to have charge of the fiscal affairs of the department. In addition, he would select at least twenty inspectors charged with the particular duty of enforcing the prohibitory law. The commissioner, his deputy and the inspectors would be vested with certain powers granted to Sheriffs and to District Attorneys, in that they would have authority to issue warrants for the arrest of alleged violators and to prosecute the cases.

The bill would compel every person arrested for intoxication to tell the court the name of the person from whom he procured liquor, failure to give such testimony consituting a contempt of court punishable by a fine of from $5 to $100.

Stringent regulations are laid down in connection with the sale of alcohol and wine by druggists. No sale would be made for medicinal purposes, except upon a physician's prescription, and an affidavit would be required of all persons purchasing for mechanical, chemical, or sacramental purposes. A pharmacist's license to sell alcohol or wine would be issued only to druggists who have never been convicted of illegal sale of liquor, whose stock of alcohol on hand shall not represent more than 1 per cent. of the value of all the goods in his place of business, who are of temperate habits and not addicted to the use of drugs, and who will not sell to any person known to be in the habit of using alcoholic beverages.

The sale of toilet, culinary, medicinal, antiseptic, and flavoring extracts and patent medicines the manufacture of which requires payment of a United State liquor dealer's tax would be prohibited. No one but a licensed druggist would be permitted to sell certain proprietary compounds and patent medicines named in the bill, except upon the prescription of a licensed physician.

Physicians would be required to keep a record of all prescriptions issued by them for alcoholic compounds, and the doctors allowed to issue such prescriptions would first have to give bond of $2,000 for observing the provisions of the law and be licensed by the Prohibition Commissioner.

Advertising of intoxicants would be unlawful, the prohibition covering all newspapers and periodicals, circulars, signs, and billboards. In this connection the bill sets forth:

"Any advertisement or notice containing the picture of a brewery, distillery, bottle, keg, barrel, or box, or other receptacle, represented as containing intoxicating liquors or designated to serve as an advertisement thereof, shall be within the inhibition of this section."

Notice was given in both houses of the Legislature today of a hearing on the prohibition ratification resolution, to be held next Tuesday afternoon. "Like a Coroner's inquest," as Senator Davenport said in announcing the hearing.

The "Wets" still insist that not enough votes will be forthcoming in the Senate to pass the resolution. Senator Thompson predicts that the Legislature will ratify the amendment, if for no other reason than to get into the "honor column" of States. It has even been suggested that the Senate caucus on the matter, in order to get the pledge of all the Republican members to vote for the resolution.

The nation going dry will mean a large loss in revenue to New York State. The total receipts from the sale of liquor tax certificates and the volume tax for the year ended Sept. 30, 1918, were $22,616,442.77, an increase over 1917 of $1,838,934.21.

The number of certificates issued for 1917-18 was 25,755. Of this number 21,387 were issued to saloons and hotels and 2,039 to places where liquor sold was not to be drunk on the premises. For 1918-19 only 16,408 certificates were issued to saloons and hotels and 1,707 to the second class of holders. The decreased license tax accounted for the decrease in the number of holders of certificates.

AMERICAN LIQUORS TO BE SOLD ABROAD

Corporation Is Formed to Export Much of the 100,000,000 Gallons in Storage Here.

The exportation of a large quantity of the whisky and other liquors now held in storage in this country is planned to begin shortly through the formation of the Transoceanic Commercial Corporation, an export concern, which will represent the Distillers Securities Corporation in foreign markets. The new company is incorporated in this State with a capital of $1,000,000. Norman R. Sterne is President and one of the Directors, the others of whom are Henry Wehrhane, Thomas F. Reynolds, Alvin W. Krech, and Julius Kessler.

It is estimated that there are about 100,000,000 gallons of beverage and non-beverage distilled spirits in storage in the warehouses of this country, most of which comes under the first-named classification. Of this amount the Distillers Securities Corporation holds about 40 per cent. The liquor on hand is far beyond that which would normally be sold in this country during a period of twelve months. The distilling interests are, however, contemplating a free sale of liquor only until July 1, when the war-period prohibition becomes effective. This, it is understood, has made it imperative that means be taken to dispose of the surplus quantity abroad.

The statement was made yesterday that the new export concern was not directly brought into being by the approach of prohibition, as the plan is to do a general exporting business. The Distillers Securities Corporation is not planning to liquidate, but will continue in business even after prohibition becomes a fact, as many of the company's plants are already being adapted to the manufacture of industrial alcohol, for which it is expected there will be a big demand abroad. The European countries, it is said, will not be in a position to manufacture alcohol in commercial quantities for a long time, as the raw material is not available.

It is understood, however, that the most pressing need now is the disposal of the surplus whisky stock. The company's plants are running day and night bottling the liquor, and a representative of the new export concern is already in Europe negotiating sales there. The foreign representative is D. K. Welskopf, and his instructions, it is said, are to negotiate sales in every European country, with the exception of those of the Central Powers. The company also has a number of salesmen in South America, where it is expected big supplies will be taken.

These representatives will be maintained abroad to continue the business of the export concern in industrial alcohol. It was announced yesterday that the Distillers Securities Corporation might branch out into other fields of activity, some of which were now under consideration, but that no statement as to the plans would be forthcoming for some time.

FOOD BILL IS REPORTED.

Senate Expected to Pass $100,000,000 Measure with Little Opposition.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—With little opposition a favorable report was ordered today by the Senate Appropriations Committee on the House bill to appropriate the $100,000,000 requested by President Wilson for food relief in Europe. No record vote was taken. Senator Kenyon, Republican, of Iowa, and Senator Hardwick, Democrat, of Georgia, reserved the right to oppose the measure in the Senate.

Much opposition to the bill had been manifested, even since President Wilson appealed for prompt action, with a warning that only food could stop the wave of Bolshevism sweeping westward in Europe. This opposition was allayed by information presented by Food Administration and other officials. Democratic and Republican leaders joined in the prediction that the measure would be passed promptly by the Senate, with brief debate and little opposition. Chairman Martin plans to call up the bill for consideration tomorrow.

The only amendments made by the committee were offered by Senator Weeks, Republican, of Massachusetts. These strike out the words "where practicable" in the clause requiring auditing of the expenditures, and require itemized instead of general statements of expenditures.

SPEAKS FOR BRITISH LABOR.

Barnes Thinks Food Question Most Pressing in the Peace Congress.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The views of British Labor on the peace problems were thus explained before he started for Paris by George N. Barnes, the representative in the War Cabinet.

"On political questions my influence will be given in aid of the freedom of nations within their racial boundaries and for binding them together to preserve future peace. In industrial questions, I want to see some authority established responsible after the Peace Conference to a League of Nations, and to do what it can to promote humane conditions of labor in all countries.

"In the meantime, the first, because the most pressing, problem is how to take bread to the starving European peoples, and, in addition, to promote peace in the countries now tortured by anarchy."

As Mr. Barnes has accepted a post in the Cabinet, he is not considered by the regular Labor Party as a member of it, but he was elected to Parliament as a Labor member, and claims the right to speak for Labor. Moreover, the Premier included him in the Cabinet as a representative of Labor.

slavement of the entire American people. We certainly have gone mad if we actually understand and approve the extreme tyranny possible under the national prohibition amendment."

Effect on Taxation.

In another statement the brewers called attention to the fact that New York City had given a majority of 265,000 against a Prohibition candidate for Governor, and hence had placed itself unmistakably on record against the amendment. A statistical survey of the effect of prohibition on New York City compiled by the brewers gives these figures, so that "the extent of its devastation may be visualized by noting the ruinous increase of taxes and the vast destruction of property."

The amount of the extraordinary appropriations made by the Legislature of 1918 amount to	$81,525,271.31
This was made up as follows:
Liquor tax revenue	$22,828,675.50
Tax on corporations, franchises, automobiles, &c.,	45,424,526.81
Direct tax	13,272,069.00
Of the direct tax the City of New York will pay over 64 per cent. or	8,522,629.61
The part of the liquor revenue derived from the City of New York was	14,062,237.67
There reverts to the City of New York three-quarters of this, sum, which is	10,546,678.23
This is more than enough to offset the city's share of the State's direct tax, leaving a balance in favor of the city of	2,024,048.62
The assessed valuation of real estate in New York City for 1918 is $8,339,638,851. This constitutes approximately 70 per cent. of the taxable real estate of the State and means that the city contributes at least 70 per cent. of the entire expense of the State Government, besides paying the expense of the city Government for which the tax in 1918 amounted to $203,400,812.80.
The loss of the liquor tax revenue under which the city would cause the city to lose its share of that tax amounting to	$10,546,678.23
Besides, it would have to pay the direct tax of	$8,522,629.61
And the 70 per cent. of the total liquor tax revenue of the State, or	15,980,072.85
Making a total added tax of	24,502,702.46

"For every one million dollars of direct tax the tax rate of the city goes up one point.

"To the Federal Government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1918, the State of New York paid for revenue on the manufacture and sale of malt, spirituous and vinous liquors, the sum of $88,767,308. Of this, at a conservative estimate, 70 per cent. was paid by the City of New York, amounting to the sum of $62,137,535.60. This deficit could only be made up by adding to the already enormous income and excess profits tax paid by the people of New York City.

"These are figures to conjure with when it is remembered that the city pays approximately 70 per cent. of the appropriations by the State for the Highways Department, Canal Maintenance, Canal Construction, Education Department, Agriculture Department, Conservation Department; and that the Excise Department maintains itself in addition to giving the State $22,500,000 yearly. The appropriations of the State of New York for 1919 from the general fund for items specified were as follows:

Highway department	$7,321,459.00
Canal maintenance	2,993,963.00
Canal construction	681,158.80
Education department	2,630,973.21
Agriculture department	2,118,119.01
Conservation department	1,024,824.61
Total	$15,985,437.71

"This sum was more than taken care of by the liquor tax revenue of $22,826,675.50, leaving a balance to the State of $6,843,237.79, which is less than $1,000,000 short of expenditures for canal construction in 1918, from bond moneys which were $9,784,739.76.

"The tax problem would be the same for the other cities of the State and in proportion to their assessed valuation of real estate and other taxable property.

"There are these additional important facts concernnig the City of New York:

The total number of licenses issued to the City of New York for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1918, was	10,403
The minimum number of stores and buildings which would be vacated in the event of prohibition is	9,000
A conservative estimate of the direct investment in property having license privileges for manufacture and sale of liquors, exclusive of dependent and allied industries, places it at	$725,000,000

Anti-Saloon League Plans.

This statement was issued by the Anti-Saloon League:

"The Anti-Saloon League fully expects that all but one or two of the States of the Union will have ratified the amendment before the present legislative session is over, the ratifying States to include New York. The national leaders of the Republican Party can clearly apprehend the disadvantage under which that party will labor in 1920 if such leading Republican States as New York and Pennsylvania do not ratify the amendment.

"The work of the Anti-Saloon League, however, will neither cease nor lessen when the amendment goes into effect. Already the groundwork is being laid for a national enforcement code to be enacted by Congress. This will have to be supplemented by comprehensive enforcement codes in the several States. In addition to this there is the grave problem of maintaining in office administrations and officials determined to enforce the law, and so enable the nation with all possible speed to slough off all remnants of the liquor habit and the liquor appetite, and the proneness of corrupt political elements to try to profit by a grafting relationship with the remains of the de-legalized traffic.

"In addition, educational effort must become more intensive than ever for the purpose of lifting public intelligence and desire universally up to the level of the law. And, finally, as a means of making permanent this great national achievement, our aid must be given in the pressing of the battle against the liquor traffic to the ends of the earth. There can be no question but that economic considerations will effectively aid every industrial nation to hurry the achievement of prohibition there also, as none realize more clearly than the heavily drinking nations how tremendous is the handicap under which they will labor in world-wide competition with so intelligent and resourceful a nation as the United States advantaged further by deliverance from the wastes, inefficiencies, and destructions which have always grown out of the beverage liquor traffic.

"There is great work ahead for years to come, but the situation will be different from that obtaining now. Heretofore the liquor traffic has had the advantage of position. Henceforth all its advantages of position will be gone, all its respectability will be swept away, and it will be a hunted and harried outlaw instead of an arrogant and intrenched power.

"The three grounds upon which the liquor interests have been accustomed to base their charges of unconstitutionality respecting the Federal prohibition amendment are:

"First—That it is improper matter for incorporation in the Federal Constitution.

"Second—That it was not submitted by a real two-thirds vote of Congress, and

"Third—That the seven-year limitation provision in it renders its submission null and void.

"The first has never been regarded as of any consequence. A constitution which admitted an amendment forbidding slavery is an equally appropriate place for an amendment forbidding the liquor traffic. With respect to the second allegation, it has already been decided twice that a two-thirds vote of both branches of Congress means a two-thirds vote of a quorum, the first decision being by United States District Judge Hollister of Cincinnati, and the other decision being by no less an authority than the Supreme Court of the United States in a recent decision respecting the same point on the vote required to pass the Webb-Kenyon law over the President's veto. And with respect to the seven-year limitation objection—the charge that because the amendment as submitted by Congress provided that it must be ratified within seven years to become a valid part of the Constitution that issue could arise only provided more than seven years were consumed n the ratifying. Inasmuch as it has been ratified in thirteen months, that limitation has not entered into the case at all. Furthermore, Constitutional lawyers of the highest order hold that had there been necessity to put it to the test, it would be found that the limiting provision was valid.

"The liquor threats to bring referendum votes reviewing the ratification action of fifteen State Legislatures is futile and foolish. Members of a Legislature when voting upon a Federal Constitutional amendment are not acting under State law but Federal law. By virtue of the State law they hold office as legislators, but the only law which entities them to vote on a Federal amendment is Federal law. And since that Federal law makes legislative action final, no State review is possible. A State cannot modify or change the method of amending the Federal Constitution merely by adopting the referendum with respect to its own State legislative acts."

Efforts for Enforcement.

In amplification of the league's announced intention to devote itself at once to the question of enforcement, the Rev. Dr. Rollin O. Everhart, editor of The American Issue and one of the leaders of the league, explained that Wayne B. Wheeler, who has led in the prohibitionists' legal fights for many years, already was at work on a State code which would be presented at the present session of the New York Legislature.

"This code," said Mr. Everhart, "will be modeled after the national enforcement code which Mr. Wheeler already has prepared for submission to Congress, so far as its provisions are applicable. We do not anticipate any difficulty in getting it passed, because we do not believe the State legislators would refuse to aid in enforcing the national law. A particularly strong weapon in this State is the fact that women can vote, and women are naturally prohibitionists leaders. The politicians will hardly dare flaunt the defiance of this law in the faces of the women.

"As to enforcement, we admit that we expect New York to be the most difficult of all places, particularly because of its foreign population. Experience in industrial cities of the Middle West, where prohibition is in effect has shown, however, that while these people are difficult to reach through propaganda, example works splendidly with them. Even though they have learned to drink in their own countries, the vast majority of them quit when they have to go 'ramming around' for illicit alcohol instead of getting it easily, comfortably, and legally.

"There are two main reasons why the strongest effort of all will be made to make prohibition a success in New York. One is that just because it is so difficult, successful administration here will be an answer for all time to those who say it can't be done. We know it can, and we will prove it. The other lies in the fact that foreign peoples are in more intimate contact with New York than with any other city of the country, and if we can show them here that prohibition is both practical and beneficial they will go back to prohibition advocates and will spread the worldwide movement that we intend to press."

Search for Precedent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—Discussion as to whether the prohibition amendment becomes a part of the Constitution now that thirty-six States have ratified it or whether it becomes a part of the basic law only when each State has certified its action to the Secretary of State led today to a search for precedent, which showed that the only two amendments ratified in the last half century, providing for income taxes and direct election of Senators, were considered effective immediately the thirty-sixth State had taken affirmative action.

Senator Sheppard, author of the prohibition amendment, holds that national prohibition becomes a permanent fact Jan. 16, 1920.

Only fourteen of the States have certified their action to the State Department. The vote of the Mississippi Legislature, the first to act, has not been received at the State Department. The Mississippi Secretary of State said today at Jackson that the certificate had been mailed to Washington immediately after the Legislature acted and that a duplicate would be sent if the original had been lost.

Only a minimum of unemployment is expected to result, as the cumulative severity of successive restrictive measures adopted since the war began already has caused many distillers and brewers to seek other uses for their plants. Hundreds of millions of dollars are invested in distilleries and breweries.

More than half the territory of the United States already is dry through State, action or local option elections. Until recently the movemrnt between States of limited quantities of liquor for personal use was permitted, but the Supreme Court ruled several days ago that the Reed "bone dry" amendment made such traffic illegal.

NATION VOTED DRY BY RATIFICATION

vinous, alcoholic, or any intoxicating liquors.

"8. An adequate search and seizure provision, similar to those which have proved effective in the enforcement of prohibitory laws in the States.

"9. The sale of alcoholic patent or proprietary medicines which are possible or capable of being used as a beverage should be surrounded by the same safeguards as the sale of alcohol.

"10. Provisions to prevent any scheme, device or subterfuge to evade the provisions of the act.

"11. In accordance with the National Prohibition Amendment the several States shall provide legislation in harmony therewith to carry out its provisions.

"12. Such other provisions as will destroy every vestige of the beverage liquor traffic throughout the United States and its possessions."

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, when asked tonight for a statement as to the meaning, as viewed by national prohibitionists, of the ratification by the necessary thirty-six States today of the amendment and subsequent proclamation by Secretary Lansing, first pointed out that in any event the nation was to go dry under war-time prohibition July 1 next, and that war-time prohibition was expected to run into Constitutional amendment prohibition. Then Mr. Wheeler added:

"When Secretary Lansing proclaims the ratification of the amendment it will mean that:

"The Federal amendment becomes operative one year from that date

"Congress is given notice it is its duty to enact a Federal prohibition law.

"The wet States are also notified to enact prohibition laws in harmony with the Federal amendment.

"The dry States will retain and strengthen their laws if needed.

"No license laws for beverage use of liquor can thereafter be enacted or enforced.

"The Federal and State authorities will have concurrent power to enact and enforce laws within their respective jurisdictions.

"Congress will have power to enact laws in the nature of police regulations to make prohibition effective."

Announces Victory to Senate.

Senator Sheppard of Texas, its author, who, ever since his advent in Congress, nineteen years ago, has fought for national prohibition, announced in the Senate the ratification of the amendment by the action of Nebraska.

"Within less than thirteen months after its submission to the States for ratification," he said, "the amendment becomes part of the Federal Constitution, the shortest time within which any amendment has been ratified, with the sole exception of the amendment abolishing slavery.

"For the first time in history one of the leading nations of the world embodies in its national organic law a provision prohibiting traffic in intoxicating liquors, a traffic which ultimately would have undermined the foundations of its being. The adoption of the amendment marks the advent of a new day. It is the first step in the new process of legislation for human welfare which must follow the great war for democracy and civilization in Europe, if the lessons of the conflict are to be grasped and utilized."

Senator Kenyon of Iowa felicitated Mr. Sheppard upon his efforts for nation-wide prohibition.

"This marks the successful ending of the greatest moral battle waged in this country since the abolition of slavery," he said. "The power of the saloon is broken in the United States. As it passes to its grave it can go with the knowledge that it has been responsible for more misery and crime, more destruction of homes, and debasement of character, more poverty, sorrow, and tears than any other agency the world has ever known. No one will weep over its demise. The United States will be a better, more prosperous nation, its citizenship will be more happy and contented than ever."

DIE CAST BY NEBRASKA.

Thirty-sixth State to Ratify, Missouri and Wyoming Following.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 16.—The Legislature completed at 10:32 A. M. today ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment, when the Senate voted to concur in a House amendment to a Senate joint resolution providing for ratification. To eliminate any possibility of being enjoined from certifying to the State Department of the United States Nebraska's action approving the amendment, Governor Samuel R. McKelvie today dispatched this State's approval in a registered special delivery letter.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 16.—The Legislature today ratified the Federal prohibition amendment when the House concurred in the Senate resolution by a vote of 104 to 36.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Jan. 16.—The Legislature today unanimously ratified the prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, both houses acting before noon.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Jan. 16.—The Senate voted in favor of the ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment today 24 to 4. When the Senate resolution reached the House it was referred to the Federal Relations Committee without action. Earlier in the day a resolution introduced in the House had been sent to that committee, together with the official copy of the Federal amendment, and Chairman W. C. Belknap raised the point that the action of the upper body in passing the resolution for ratification without having the official copy before it was irregular. Leaders said final action probably would not be taken until after hearings had been held.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 16.—The Federal prohibition amendment probably will be sent to the General Assembly by Governor Holcomb with a special message next week, presumably Tuesday. Its supporters claim passage by the House. Control of the Senate has been disputed. Today many Senators predicted that concurrent action would not be actively contested, in view of the prohibition victory.

Special to The New York Times.

CARSON, Nev., Jan. 16.—The Legislature, which will convene here next Monday, will ratify the Federal prohibition amendment by a practically unanimous vote. All the counties in the State went dry, and their legislative candidates were in favor of prohibition.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 16.—Attorney General Guy H. Sturgis today said: "In my opinion, the referendum provision of the Constitution of Maine has no bearing on the sufficiency of the adoption of the Federal constitutional amendment by our Legislature, and it stands adopted by the State of Maine."

KITCHIN FIGHTS FOR PROFITS TAXES

Conferees May Compromise by Rewriting This Part of Revenue Bill.

AGREE ON ALCOHOL LEVIES

Senate Schedules on Transportation Also Retained—Contest Over Theatre Taxes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Considerable progress was made today by the Senate and House conferees on the Revenue bill, an agreement being reached on the taxes to be imposed on transportation and on beverages, which incorporated practically all of the Senate amendments. These amendments provide for a reduction of about $52,000,000 from the taxes that would have been collected from these sources under the provisions of the original House bill.

Excess profits and war profits also were discussed, but no definite action taken, the Senate and House conferees being widely separated in their views. Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee is still firm in his position that the amended titles, especially as war profits are affected, will not bring about a fair allotment of taxation or provide the money which he feels should be paid into the Government coffers with the provisions of the proposed levy.

An attempt to make an agreement will be made tomorrow, and a bitter contest is anticipated, with Mr. Kitchin fighting for the war profits taxes. It has been predicted that a compromise might be reached which would more nearly approximate the original House provisions than those of the Senate. In that event the taxes collectible under the bill may considerably exceed the $6,000,000,000 asked for by the Treasury Department.

There appeared today another source of agitation which may result in temporary delay in bringing about a final agreement on the form of the bill. On Tuesday the conferees rejected the Senate amendments reducing the taxes on admissions to theatres and reverted into the bill practically all of the House section which provided, at the expense of the theatre-going public, for the payment of $51,000,000, or $27,000,000 more than was collectible under the present law. Today Senator Reed of Missouri submitted a vigorous protest to the final adoption of the House schedule and a lively debate followed.

Threat of a Deadlock.

The House conferees, it is said, threatened a deadlock if the Senate amendment were not thrown out and the House provisions retained. In the face of this situation, it is understood, the Senate conferees on Tuesday agreed to the large increases.

The tax as it now stands provides for a general rate of 20 per cent. on all theatre tickets of admission, or double the existing rate. Moving picture houses are to pay 1 cent on each 10 cents of admission or fraction thereof, up to 30 cents. Boxholders at the theatre or opera must pay a tax of 25 per cent. Taxes on club dues are raised to 20 per cent. on dues over $10.

The transportation schedule as agreed upon in conference today will provide for an estimated revenue of $229,000,000; or $2,000,000 less than the amount provided for by the original House bill.

The conference retains the provision in the present revenue law for a tax of 3 per cent. on the amount paid for the transportation of freight, and adds, however, that in case of freight transported from a point without the United States to a point within the United States, an additional tax of 3 per cent. shall be paid upon the amount paid for transportation of such freight within the United States. A tax of 1 cent on every 20 cents or fraction thereof for the transportation of express is agreed upon, with an additional tax of the same amount for shipments transported from a point without the United States, as in the case of freight.

The 8 per cent. tax on passenger transportation is retained with the proviso, included as a Senate amendment, that where the roads compete with foreign-owned lines, the tax shall in no case be higher than that imposed on the foreign-owned system.

The House tax of 6¼ per cent. on the transportation of oil by pipe lines is increased by the Senate amendment to 8 per cent., the tax not being chargeable where the United States Government is served. A five-cent tax is imposed on messages by telephone or telegraph in excess of 14 cents and not more than 50 cents, and a tax of 10 cents on messages over 50 cents. The tax of 10 per cent. on leased telephone and telegraph lines, exclusive of those used by newspapers and by telephone and telegraph companies for their private business, is retained.

If taxes are not paid at the time specified, a penalty of 5 per cent is imposed, with an additional penalty of 1 per cent. for each full month thereafter.

In agreeing on beverage taxes the conferees reduced the House tax of $4.40 a gallon on distilled spirits for manufacturing purposes, to $2.20, as suggested by the Senate, and the tax on distilled spirits for beverage purposes from $8 a gallon to $6.40 a gallon. No tax will be demanded upon distilled spirits held in bond during the temporary period of prohibition.

On perfumes containing alcohol imported into the United States the House tax of $3.30 per wine gallon is reduced to $1.10.

Provision is made by Senate amendment that on all distilled spirits on which the existing tax has been paid there shall be paid, upon the passage of the new revenue law, a tax equal to the difference of that already paid and the amount of the new tax.

The tax on beers, ale and porter and similar fermented drinks containing not more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol is left at $1 on each barrel of not more than thirty-one gallons. On wines containing not more than 14 per cent. of alcohol the tax will be 16 cents a gallon, measured by volume; from 14 to 21 per cent. alcohol, 40 cents a gallon; 21 to 24 per cent. alcohol, $1 a gallon. Wines containing more than 24 per cent. alcohol will be classified, for purposes of taxation, as distilled spirits.

In order to protect and foster the wine growing interests the Senate amendment, which reads as follows is incorporated in the conference agreement:

"Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, it shall be lawful to produce grape wines on bonded winery premises by the usual method of fermentation, and to transport and use the same, and like wines heretofore produced and now stored on bonded winery premises, as distilling material for the production of non-beverage spirits. In the production of non-alcoholic wines, containing less than one-half of 1 per centum of alcohol by volume, in any fruit brandy or industrial distillery; provided that all alcoholic spirits so obtained at any industrial distillery shall be denatured, and all spirits so obtained at any fruit distillery shall be removed and used only for non-beverage purposes or for denaturation."

The portions of the revenue bill relating to the sale of narcotics it is understood, is to be rewritten in part by Representative Rainey and inserted into the conference agreement. It is Mr. Rainey's hope now to frame a section which will so amend the Harrison Narcotic act of Dec. 17, 1914, as to make impossible a lucrative trade in medicines and other concoctions containing a small percentage of habit-forming drugs.

This problem has been discussed by the conferees and it is understood that the House suggestions, with the McCumber amendment, are not considered satisfactory. Mr. Rainey has taken a firm stand in this connection. He has stated to the conferees that drastic action is imperative and has quoted figures which he asserts show that the use of habit forming drugs has been increasing in an alarming degree, especially in States which have adopted prohibition.

The Senate amendment, reducing the House tax of 20 per cent. on the selling price of all beverages containing less than one-half per cent. derived wholly or in part from cereals, to 15 per cent., is adopted. The Senate amendment also cuts in half the House tax on ginger ale, root beer, artificial mineral waters, other carbonated waters or beers and other soft drinks sold in containers (except fruit or berry juice), making the tax 10 per cent. on the selling instead of 20 per cent. The tax on natural mineral waters and other table waters sold in containers is made 5 per cent. of the selling price.

On and after May 1, 1919, a tax will be charged against soda fountains and ice cream parlors aggregating 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof charged a customer. The tax must be paid by the customer to the dealer and turned over by him to the Government.

EX-KAISER MADE ILL BY CHOPPING WOOD

Contracted Chills From Overheating—Dutch Forbid His Removal to Another Castle.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—The immediate cause of William Hohenzollern's repeated chills is, according to authoritative information, overheating while performing his favorite exercise of sawing and chopping wood.

The former Emperor was accustomed to this work before the war, and when he was informed that his walks in the neighboring woods called for the services of too many guards in order to prevent him from being annoyed by spectators, and perhaps also to prevent molestation of a serious nature, he decided to resume his old pastime within the castle precincts.

Among the great piles of baggage brought across the frontier for his use was a case of tools weighing 400 pounds. This was unpacked, and the ex-Emperor began work with his usual energy, occasionally increasing his labors in an effort to forget the terrible worry connected with his abdication and the complete change in his position.

He was already suffering because of the damp climate, which affected his ear and throat, and was generally run down. The work caused him to perspire freely, and while passing through a corridor of the castle a strong draught struck him, causing the first serious chill, which confined him to his bedroom for several days. Professor Lanz of Berlin attended him throughout.

When he had partially recovered he again started in on the heavy manual work and suffered a relapse which meant a further period of confinement.

Late last week he showed improvement, and as the weather was fine he began this time work within the castle grounds, which included the digging of an irrigation channel in the flower garden. The result was a renewed chill and a further sojourn in his apartment, where he was ordered to remain for the present.

Herr Hohenzollern's freedom of movement is not only restricted by the state of his health, but also by the Dutch authorities, who stepped in to prevent him from removing to Count Pueckler's castle at Belmonte, near Wegeningen, which they declared was unsuited.

The ex-Emperor is becoming increasingly irritable under unaccustomed restrictions, and this feeling is augmented by the gradual departure of many of his old servants, who find life in Holland under the circumstances unbearable. Dutch domestics, who are filling their places, do not attain the same perfection of obeisance as the Imperial servants, who for years were accustomed to foresee the requirements of their sovereign.

It is probable that before many weeks the entire German personnel will have disappeared, and the former monarch, who never could do any simple thing for himself in the way of dressing, will be cast on his own resources.

His recent ailments have had a marked effect on his physical and mental condition. Mrs. Hohenzollern, who acts as his nurse, is now in fairly good health and goes out occasionally to tea.

DOG SAVED THE AMERICANS.

His Presence Warned Outpost Sentinel of Bolshevist Ambush.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN NORTHERN RUSSIA, Dec. 16, (Associated Press.)—A white "husky" dog, apparently the mascot of a Bolshevist regiment, recently saved an American company from an ambush in the bush-whacking war near Kadish.

The American had a large rear guard outpost a mile behind the town, and the Bolsheviki, heavily reinforced, and with considerable artillery, began shelling the American positions. The Americans successfully repulsed all attacks and were keenly watching the swamps bordering the road in their rear.

One afternoon a sentinel of the rear guard, who had participated in previous engagements, during which a white "husky" dog appeared with the Bolshevist forces, saw the dog in the woods.

His warning, followed by a bit of scouting, led to the discovery that the Bolsheviki were moving through the swamps to cut off the Americans in the rear at the Petrograd road. The troops were able to withdraw in the darkness to the positions behind a bridge over the Emtsa River.

The battles around Kadish have been the most stubborn and difficult that the Americans have had in Russia up to this time. In their advance beyond the town they were constantly harassed by bushwhacking parties appearing simultaneously in their rear and on both flanks in the swamps.

The original crossing of the Emtsa River, in the direction of the town, was attempted three times by the Americans, with considerable losses, before it was finally accomplished.

Difficulties of moving transport trains of little Russian peasant carts over the swampy roads have led to many hardships, including shortage of rations, and at one time, miles from his medical equipment, the American surgeon was forced to amputate the leg of a wounded man with a penknife.

ORLANDO HAS NEW MINISTRY

least worthy of arbitration and they rebuked Sonnino for his attitude.

This sentiment against the Minister of Foreign Affairs grew until the Austrians capitulated on Nov. 4 to General Diaz, and it was generally believed that Sonnino could not preserve his attitude and keep his portfolio.

This was the situation when the Jugoslav National Committee and several other nationalist organizations issued manifestoes claiming extensive territory in Gorizia and Gradesca, Istria and Dalmatia, and even the city of Trieste, and declared that they were ready to fight for their possession. Two regiments of Croations terrorized the City of Fiume until driven out by the Italian troops. To the Croatians the Austrian fleet was first surrendered. Then an order was sent out from the newly constituted Jugoslav Government at Agram for the Jugoslavs to mobilize, which, save for Serbia and Montenegro, was contrary to the armistice terms of Nov. 4.

These acts caused a change in the public opinion in Italy and strengthened Sonnino's position. Then in the last week in December Leonida Bissolati attempted to turn the tide by resigning the portfolio of Military Aid and War Pensions. He declared at the time, according to a dispatch from The London Morning Post's Rome correspondent:

"I have failed to move Baron Sonnino away from these three clauses of the secret treaty of London: (1) Annexation of a large portion of Dalmatia from Hissariki and Trebulje to Cape Planpa, (Article 5;) (2) Permanent retention of all the thirteen islands of so-called Dodecannese with their almost exclusively Greek population, (Article 8,) and (3) Inclusion within Italian territory of the German population of the Northern Tyrol as far as the Brenner, (Article 4).

"Baron Sonnino insists on the absolute intangibility of the secret treaty of London; but, on the other hand, that does not include Fiume, which the treaty (Article 5 and Note 2) assigns 'to the territory of Croatia, Serbia, and Montenegro,' whereas I claim that Italian city for Italy, but would give Dalmatia to the Jugoslavs."

The Church party also voiced a policy of non-intervention, with measurable concessions to the Jugoslavs.

Nitti followed Bissolati's example and resigned on Jan. 13, believing that the non-intervention Socialists and Clericals would be strong enough to overthrow the Orlando Government, especially the uncompromising Sonnino, and place himself at the head. His popularity, however, had been gradually diminishing ever since it became known that in December, 1917, he had advised the Government to withdraw and make peace with Austria-Hungary unless England and France furnished stronger support to the Italian armies.

In regard to President Wilson's speeches in Italy, each side interpreted them in its favor, but Sonnino and the Irredenta faction derived added inspiration from them because the United States had not recognized Jugoslavia as a nation, and from the fact that the Italian Ambassador at Washington, Conte Vincenzo Macchi di Cellere, told Baron Sonnino how they should be interpreted.

The new Ministers from General Dall' Olio to Admiral di Revel and the President of the Bank of Italy, are all strongly behind Sonnino in carrying out to the full Italy's claims to the Adriatic littoral unless the Jugoslavs cease their antagonism and show themselves ready to let the Peace Congress decide their claims without attempting to establish them by force. Among the Jugoslavs, however, only Serbia and Montenegro, which have not yet given their full support to the Croatian and Slovene program of Agram, have any standing at the congress.

D'ANNUNZIO COUNSELS BOMBS FOR BISSOLATI

Poet Publishes Six Columns of Denunciation of Italian Anti-Annexationists.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Jan. 15.—Fresh fuel to feed the fiery outburst of sentiment in Italy is furnished today in a passionate rhetorical manifesto from the warrior poet, Gabriele D'Annunzio, demanding the inclusion of all Dalmatia in the Kingdom of Italy. This extraordinary manifesto fills six columns of a special edition of the newspapers. D'Annunzio follows it up with a torrent of merciless invective against Signor Bissolati and that portion of the nation which indorses his renunciation policy, by writing boldly:

"No bones, no scraps, no rags, no bartering, no frauds! Enough! Enough! Overturn the counters! Smash the false balances! If it becomes necessary, we will confront the new conspiracy after the fashion of the Italian arditi, with a bomb in either hand and a knife between the teeth!"

Contrary currents of public feeling on the question are coursing with such violence that the annexationist counter-demonstration, which was to have been held last night at La Scala Opera House, with the intention of introducing several Dalmatian orators, had to be vetoed at the last moment by the police.

It is stated that Signor Bissolati, the Socialist ex-Minister who during the past decade has been one of the most prominent figures in the Italian political arena, intends to deliver before his constituency in Rome the speech which mob violence prevented his making at Milan, in explanation of his break with the Orlando-Sonnino coalition, and that this event will mark Bissolati's final retirement from political life.

He Wires Thanks to the Rigsdag for Expressions of Confidence.

SHONTS IS DEFIANT TO ESTIMATE BOARD

Traction Lines' President Discusses Traffic Problems at Public Conference.

ADVOCATES 8-CENT FARES

Wants the Burden Put "on the People Who Get the Service."

At a second conference of the Board of Trade and Transportation and other civic and commercial organizations, held yesterday at the rooms of the board, 203 Broadway, for the purpose of further consultation on the transit situation in New York, Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit and the New York Railways Companies, and Travis H. Whitney, Chairman of the Public Service Commission, were the chief speakers. Mayor Hylan had been asked to attend or send a representative. His secretary acknowledged the invitation and said that the Mayor would give early consideration to it. Neither the Mayor nor any representative of his attended the meeting. Controller Craig also was invited to attend and address the meeting, but he did not appear.

Mr. Shonts in his speech said that America's entrance into the war caused radical changes in the transit situation with increased costs.

"For instance," he said, "we had long-time contracts, which expired anywhere from April to August of 1918, for coal and brake shoes and steel rails. We have still some rails to be delivered at the old price of $30 a ton. Just think of it, $30 a ton. Of course, when these ran out we had to pay the piper. We are paying $6.07 a ton for coal now, whereas we used to pay $3.22. Labor has increased by $6,000,000. And we didn't wait to be forced to pay this increased cost of labor by strikes, because we knew our men.

"When we raised the wages of those men, although we think we are fairly far-sighted, we had no idea that we were digging our own graves! We never thought that by municipal inaction or hostile action an attempt would be made to throw us into bankruptcy.

"The Board of Estimate seems to think it can work itself around into an advantageous position over us. It can't. It may get the New York Railways Company, although we'll give them a good run for their money, but if the Interborough were forced into receivership, my friends, it would be a real calamity. There is $1,220,000,000 invested in electrical railway securities in this State alone. Does anybody believe that if the electric railways of New York, the empire city of the world, were forced into the hands of receivers, what anybody would have, in your lifetime or mine, confidence to put his money in securities of a similar corporation?

Discusses 8-Cent Fares.

"I want to speak of this 8-cent fare. Of the 8 cents, we would only get 7. The city would get the other cent. We suggested the 8-cent fare because we thought the city would like to get something on its investment, and this eighth cent would pay the city's sinking fund and interest charges and make that $250,000,000, which Controller Craig says is a total loss to the city, worth something for debt limit purposes.

"Now, why don't we put this burden where it belongs—on the people who get the service? I hold that we have no more right to sell a fare for 5 cents which costs 7 than a merchant has a right to sell a barrel of flour for $5 that cost $7. Let us keep our credit good, and then, when more subways are to be built, as they will have to be built, let private capital not hesitate to come to the aid of the city because it has been said that the city did not keep its faith."

Reviewing the negotiations with the city which led to the construction of the dual system, Mr. Shonts early in his speech said:

"When the so-called dual system was proposed, in the hope of relieving, for a considerable period, the congested conditions of the subways, we opposed the plan as being uneconomic and unnecessary. We agreed, if we were permitted to do so, to raise the money and do practically the same thing ourselves, running the subways up the east side of the town and down the lower west side and making such other extensions and connections as might be necessary. But the city said 'no.' Therefore, we said to the city: 'Go ahead, and if you want us to operate all or any of the new lines, we'll undertake to do so.'

"'But that's not the trouble,' said the city. 'We haven't the money, and we have a rising debt limit and we want you to help in the undertaking. We want you to pay for half of the construction and all of the equipment, or as much thereof as you may be called upon to supply.' After thinking it over for a while we decided, although we were still convinced that the scheme was uneconomic and unnecessary, to go into it. Thereupon the city said: 'Fine. You'll get nothing except operating expenses and a reasonable return upon your investment, and we won't get any money returned for some time; but these proposed subway extensions into the suburbs will increase land values, and, therefore, increase tax valuations and raise the debt limit for borrowing purposes. The extensions will also relieve congestion in crowded centres of population by giving better homes and better living accommodations in the open-air places in the suburbs. There is a sociological problem involved in this enterprise as well as a rapid transit and financial problem. Therefore we'll subordinate the city's claims to yours.'

"That, in substance, expressed the attitude of the city authorities and hence arose the so-called preferentials, by which we get returns on our investment before the city gets anything. It was estimated that the cost of the proposed system would be $316,000,000, of which we were to put in $58,000,000, which was all we proposed to put in. If the system cost more than $316,000,000, the city was to put up the balance of our share in excess of the $58,000,000. The equipment was estimated at $22,000,000. If it cost less than that, we were to turn the difference over to the city, and if it cost more, the city was to pay the difference between the actual cost in excess of $22,000,000.

Financing of the Properties.

"The point I am trying to bring out is that the city wanted to do something which it hadn't the money to pay for and asked us to help out. The statement made in the report of the Board of Estimate, sitting as a committee of the whole, last Friday, to the effect that the Interborough, through its bankers, was able to sell its securities on the assumption that only a 5-cent fare was to be charged is not correct at all. The amount of the fare had nothing to do with our getting the money. We got the money from the public through our bankers, because we were able pretty accurately to estimate the fixed sum the properties would earn. If it couldn't have been demonstrated that the properties would earn these fixed amounts on a 5-cent basis, then the bankers would never have undertaken to sell the securities.

"Well, there came a time when the congestion became so great that it was decided that seven-car trains were not sufficient, and so we decided to operate ten-car trains. But we found, although the cars used on the seven-car trains were of steel or steel composition—most of them were steel—they were not strong enough to stand the strain of operation in ten-car trains. Therefore, we had to rebuild every one of them, at a cost of $1,235,000, which the Public Service Commission compelled us, by a system of accounting which was never used before and will never be used again, to charge to the equipment account, instead of to the capital account. Another of the so-called preferentials was interest, at 6 per cent., on the $58,000,000 we were to put into the enterprise and $22,000,000 we were to put into equipment. The fourth preferential is that which permits us to be reimbursed by the city for whatever the money we may need costs. If it costs 5 per cent. we get 5 per cent. If it costs 10 per cent. we get 10 per cent.

"And so I say it was total sums of money we were to receive, and not a five-cent fare, that enabled us to sell our securities—$160,000,000 of bonds and $40,000,000 of notes. And I challenge any one, the Public Service Commission or any member thereof of the City Government or any member thereof, I challenge, not in an offensive or suggestive way, to say that we have not carried out our part of the contract in the letter. And we now have in the bank enough money to complete the whole contract. More than all that, we had an ambition to finance ourselves in cash and not to go to anybody to borrow. So we set about laying by a surplus. One day I went into Mr. Morgan's office and I told him we had a surplus of $10,000,000. He thought that was pretty good. A while later I went in and told him we had a surplus of $15,000,000. He thought that was pretty fine. As a matter of fact, we managed to get together a surplus of $19,000,000, but I didn't say anything about that extra four millions."

Chairman Whitney of the Public Service Commission, the next speaker, said that he had no suggestions to make as to what fare should be charged, but he did want to say that it was the duty of the people to find out for themselves, because, in the last analysis, they would have to pay for the cost of operating the subways and other city lines of transportation either in fare or in taxes.

STATUS IN CONFERENCE PLEASES DOMINIONS

Autonomy of British Colonies Recognized in the Allotment of Peace Delegates.

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—In British colonial quarters great satisfaction is felt at the decision, finally ratified today, to give Canada, Australia, and the Union of South Africa two delegates each at the Peace Conference, and New Zealand one. This arrangement is a recognition of the individual existence of these separate States within the British Commonwealth by the great court of world powers. The union of the empire is typified in the procedure under which one of the colonial Premiers will sit as one of the five British plenipotentiaries at the council table.

The exact fashion in which the British colonial representatives will participate in the plenary meeting of the conference has not been settled, but the main principle on which it will be arranged will be that of rotation. Exceptional circumstances may produce modifications of this principle. For instance, Sir William Hughes would figure as the fifth British delegate in case of questions in which Australia was particularly interested, if they should come up on a date when Sir Robert Borden or General Botha would be sitting at the council table if the strict order of rotation were adhered to. Similarly, Botha might displace Hughes, or Borden take Botha's place, if the question for discussion should warrant the change.

WIDOW ACCUSES POLICE.

Says Detectives Twice Visited Her Apartment and Robbed Her Once.

Mrs. Jerome Jeanne Loraine of 116 West Seventy-second Street announced last night that she was dissatisfied with the progress of an investigation which she said Police Inspector John J. Cray was making of a robbery in her apartment on Nov. 22 last, in which she charges that two city detectives were implicated. According to Thomas J. Stapleton, a lawyer of 61 Wall Street, Mrs. Loraine is the widow of Walker Loraine, a Boston banker, and is well to do. Mr. Stapleton added that he believed Inspector Cray was trying to find the men who, Mrs. Loraine charges, committed the robbery.

The story told by Mrs. Loraine is that on Nov. 22, a man gained access to her apartment by representing himself as a jewelry salesman. After an embarrassed pause, he opened the door and admitted two other men. The three, she said, then demanded $300 from her on the ground that they knew her to be wealthy. She finally gave them $105, she said, and one of them proposed that they return the next day for the remainder, after she had refused to supplement the gift with jewelry.

Mrs. Loraine said that when she demanded an explanation from the manager of the house, he said the two men were allowed to go to her apartment after they had said they were detectives and had shown their badges. After Mr. Stapleton at Mrs. Loraine's request had notified the police of the incident, two detectives were assigned to the case and she was summoned to Headquarters to identify one Collins as the pretended jewelry salesman. This man had been arrested, but was released because her identification was not absolute.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Loraine charges, two men broke into her apartment and she recognized one of them as the "salesman," while the other said he was a detective. When she demanded that the detective arrest the other man he refused, and, instead sent him away and begged Mrs. Loraine to forget the incident. After this was reported to the police Mrs. Loraine declared she identified a detective at Headquarters as the man who broke in with the "salesman." She asserted that Inspector Cray then directed this man to find the others concerned, but that she had heard nothing since from the police.

Inspector Cray said last night that the men Mrs. Lorraine identified admitted having visited Mrs. Lorraine's apartment on only one occasion in connection with the investigation into the original robbery. He added that he was making a personal investigation of the whole case.

WILL DISCUSS CONVENTIONS

County Republicans Refer Nomination Plan to a Special Committee.

A resolution favoring a return to the old convention system of making party nominations introduced by Robert E. Heydt, leader of the Ninth Assembly District, was the subject of considerable debate at the January meeting of the Republican County Committee last night. In behalf of his resolution Mr. Heydt asserted the direct primary system had not accomplished its purpose and had made it almost impossible to obtain nominations without large expenditures. Robert W. Bonynge moved an amendment providing for the election of delegates to the party convention by direct primaries and made it imperative that these delegates be seated.

A substitute resolution was finally introduced by Collin H. Woodward and adopted by the committee which referred the matter for consideration to a special committee of eleven members, the committee to be instructed to draft a bill for presentation to the Legislature and report back to the County Committee, with a minority report, if any, before sending it to Albany.

Memorial resolutions were adopted on the death of Colonel Roosevelt and George R. Sheldon, who for years was Treasurer of the County Committee. The Roosevelt resolution read in part as follows:

"No memorial can adequately recite the varied activities of his wonderful career. The history of our republic in the last quarter of a century bears the imprint of his moral courage and great vision of a statesman, his gallant conduct as a soldier, and his undeviating adherence to American principles, whether in public or private life. Of all his services to his country none have surpassed the patriotism of his later years. With limitless energy and without fear he preached and exemplified a dauntless Americanism."

FIND MURDERED GIRL IN LOT IN QUEENS

Marie Riddell, Young Stenographer, Attacked as Was Mrs. Southland in Bay Ridge.

FELLED WITH A BLUDGEON

Victim Was Robbed of Watch and Money—Body Carried to Hiding Place.

The best detectives in the city are bending every energy to the task of finding the man who killed Miss Marie Elizabeth Riddell, 17 years old, on Wednesday evening near her home, at 1,839 Briggs Avenue, in the Glen Morris district of Richmond Hill, Queens, and who also probably murdered Mrs. May Southland in a vacant lot near her home in Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, last week. The two crimes were so similar in their details that the detectives and police of the Richmond Hill precinct believe that if they find the murderer of one woman they will have the man who killed the other.

In each case the victim was struck down with a blow on the back of the head with some blunt instrument, causing probably instant death. In each case the left glove of the victim was carried away by the murderer.

Miss Riddell's body was found early yesterday morning in a vacant lot only 150 feet from her home, to which she was returning from business. She was attacked about 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening. The girl's weekly pay of $20 as a stenographer in the employ of the Globe Indemnity Company of 15 William Street, Manhattan, which she received on Wednesday, was taken from her handbag; and her gold wrist watch, a Christmas gift of her father, Thomas Riddell, was gone.

Miss Riddell had been employed by the Globe Indemnity Company since she was graduated from the Richmond Hill High School two years ago. She was an only child, and had lived with her parents in Glen Morris for eight years. As usual, she started for her home on Wednesday afternoon, taking the Fulton Street elevated line, in Brooklyn, to Liberty and Lefferts Avenues, Morris Park, and started to walk half a mile to her home. Briggs Avenue is built up with comfortable cottages and is well lighted, but at that hour all the residents were at dinner, and apparently only the girl and her murderer were upon the street.

The lot where the body was found is only half a block deep and about sixty feet wide. There are houses on each side and in the rear, but no one heard any outcry. It seemed evident that one blow killed Miss Riddell and that her body was then carried about fifty feet into the lot, where it was found. No weapon was found, although there was a bar of iron not far away. It bore no bloodstains, however, and is not believed to have been the instrument used.

A novel which Miss Riddell had been reading on the train was picked up on the sidewalk in front of the lot about 7:30 Wednesday evening by her 10-year-old cousin, John McCann, who lives in the house just south of the lot. He recognized it and took it to the girl's parents. They thought Marie had dropped it accidentally, and when she did not come home concluded she must be in some neighbor's home and did not become anxious.

Dorothy Dufion, 10 years old, of 1,816 Church Street, whose home bounds the lot at the rear, found the body yesterday morning, when she glanced from a rear window and saw it.

In their search for the murderer the police questioned two young men, who quickly cleared themselves.

PLACE MRS. LEBAUDY IN JAIL

Pleads Not Guilty to Murder in the First Degree.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 16.—Mrs. Augustine Lebaudy, who shot and killed her husband, Jacques Lebaudy, at their home in Westbury on Saturday, was arraigned in court today on a charge of murder in the first degree, to which she pleaded not guilty. Although several physicians had asserted that Mrs. Lebaudy's health might be jeopardized by immediate imprisonment, she was taken direct to the jail here when the legal proceedings had been complied with, but the medical statements had the effect of providing special accommodations, and instead of occupying a cell in the regular tier, a room adjoining the apartment of the matron, Mrs. Seaman, was prepared for her.

The arraignment of Mrs. Lebaudy was decided upon after County Physician Guy F. Cleghorn had visited the Lebaudy cottage and had informed Sheriff Seaman and District Attorney Weeks that her physical condition was not of such a serious nature as to act as a bar in any proceedings to be taken by the county authorities. Sheriff Seaman called for her in his car and took her to the office of Justice of the Peace W. R. Jones, where Constable Leonard Thorne, who was the first officer to reach the cottage after the shooting, made a deposition charging her with the murder.

Mrs. Lebaudy seemed more concerned at parting from her daughter, Jacqueline, than with any part of the court proceedings and her imprisonment. For an hour before their separation she had talked with and fondled her daughter, and en route to the prison she questioned the strength of Jacqueline to stand the separation and to care for herself. The immediate welfare of the daughter was provided for, however, by the family pastor, the Rev. Father William F. McGinnis, who took her to the home of his brother, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. McGinnis, at Westbury, where she will have their children as companions.

Mrs. Lebaudy was accompanied to the jail by her family physician, Dr. Joseph E. Kerrigan, and her attorney, H. W. Moore. The Sheriff announced that no exception would be made in the case of Mrs. Lebaudy as a prisoner, and that when her health warrants he would assign her to a cell. In the meantime she will occupy the room where Mrs. Carman and Mrs. John L. De Saulles were temporarily held pending their trials. On the advice of the physician Mrs. Lebaudy's maid, Mrs. Minne Wiedmer, will be her personal attendant.

At the jail Mrs. Lebaudy repeated her assertions that she had shot her husband in defense of herself and daughter.

Attorney Moore asserted that it would be shown that threats made by Lebaudy against his wife had occurred not only at Westbury, but prior to their arrival in this country in 1906.

The legal controversy over the disposal of the body of Lebaudy appeared to have been decided in favor of Mrs. Lebaudy yesterday, when her attorney obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Aspinall for possession. Moore had the body sent to an undertaker at Roslyn, and it was said the burial would probably take place today.

OUTLINES POLICY TO GAIN SEA TRADE

Hurley Proposes to Write Off $1,000,000,000 of Original Cost of Merchant Fleet.

PARIS, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—According to announcement here today American shipping will be enabled to make rates in successful competition with other maritime nations and keep the seas open to the great business development expected with the end of the war under the provisions of a shipping policy adopted by the United States Government.

Formulated by E. N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, after an extensive investigation, this policy, which has been officially approved, proposes to write off virtually $1,000,000,000 from the cost of American shipping built during the war, and possibly a proportionate write-off from the valuations of American shipyards. This write-off, according to the plan, would apply to ships worth approximately $3,000,000,000.

It is expected that the moral force of the Government, in making such a reduction, will bring privately-owned shipping into the plan. As all ships constructed in the United States during the war were built by the Government, the percentage of privately owned shipping affected is small.

This reduction in shipping values to an after-the-war basis has been chosen rather than plans calling for reductions in wages. Officials were convinced, after exhaustive study, that one of these alternatives was necessary if the United States was to compete with foreign nations under the high standard established by Congress for maritime labor.

AGAWAM TO CONTINUE ON.

To Resume Voyage to Genoa After Delay in Bermudas.

The United States Steamship Agawam, which has been at Hamilton, Bermuda, for several days, will resume her voyage to Genoa, Italy, on Saturday, according to a cable dispatch received by the Submarine Boat Corporation yesterday. Attention has been attracted to the Agawam because she was the first cargo carrier built by the Submarine Boat Corporation at its Newark Bay Shipyard, and she has been the subject of investigation by a committee of the United States Senate.

According to the dispatch the vessel and entire equipment are in good order. The personnel of the engine equipment, according to Mr. Collingwood of the States Marine and Commercial Company, Bermuda, was at fault. Mr. Collingwood reports that he has made several connections to the fuel oil system so that it would be "fool proof."

The trouble was not with the hull or construction of the Agawam, according to her builders, but with the engine. The engines, they say, which have been assigned to the vessels built by the Submarine Boat Corporation are not doing what was expected of them. After many trials of the Agawam, the engines finally passed the Government test and the Agawam started on her voyage. At the Newark Bay Shipyard twenty hulls are now waiting for engines, it was said yesterday.

Vice President Henry R. Sutphen of the Submarine Boat Corporation, who evolved the plan to build the standardized ships, said that he felt that his company was not getting a square deal." It had built the ships, he declared, but it was being criticised by Congress and the public, because only one vessel had been accepted, whereas the company had nothing to do with the delay and was helpless.

ARMY EXONERATES COLONEL E. A. DEEDS

Baker Approves Finding of Special Board of Inquiry Into Charges Against Aircraft Officer.

ADMITS HE MADE MISTAKES

But This Was Done to Expedite Production, Says Report—Hughes Wanted Court-Martial.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Secretary Baker announced today the exoneration of Colonel Edward A. Deeds of the Signal Corps of the charges made against him in Charles E. Hughes's report on aircraft production. The Secretary made public the report of the Special War Department Board of Inquiry recommending that Colonel Deeds should not be tried by court-martial, as recommended in the Hughes report.

Secretary Baker has approved the war board's report and ordered the case closed. At the same time the Secretary, in view of the wide publicity attached to the acts of Colonel Deeds, sent to Chairman Dent of the House Military Committee a letter stating that the record of the inquiry made by Acting Judge Advocate General S. T. Ansell had been approved unanimously by the Board of Review, composed of Judge Advocates Read, Millar, Tucker, and Keedy, and asking that the full report, by which Colonel Deeds is exonerated, be spread in the Congressional Record.

Secretary Baker's Letter.

Mr. Baker's letter reads:

Jan. 16, 1919.

Chairman Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives.

My Dear Sir: Upon the submission to the President of the report of the Hon. Charles E. Hughes and the report of the Attorney General covering the aircraft investigation, I directed that the specific recommendations contained in these reports be extracted for my consideration and for such action by me as might be required in the premises. These extracts were referred to the Judge Advocate General of the Army directing a thorough and comprehensive inquiry into the allegations affecting the conduct of Colonel Deeds. He was directed, not only to review all evidence taken by Judge Hughes, which the Attorney General kindly made available, but to secure all other facts obtainable in this case.

The Judge Advocate General committed the matter to a board of review, consisting of officers of high ability and character wholly disassociated from any previous business or personal relations either with Colonel Deeds or with any matters affecting aircraft production. This board carefully and systematically examined all of this evidence and obtained all possible additional facts, and its conclusions are, therefore, based upon fuller inquiry than was found possible within the time and opportunities at the disposal of Judge Hughes, and this examination is in effect the accomplishment of the thorough inquiry which Judge Hughes had in mind when he suggested that these transactions be examined by a court martial. The purpose of Judge Hughes's suggestion is therefore accomplished.

This record undoubtedly shows that Colonel Deeds, absorbed in the activities of aircraft production, neglected to give his personal attention to transactions affecting his personal financial affairs, and this neglect on his part gave rise to appearances which required painstaking investigation in order to show their true character.

The unanimous report of this board of review, approved by the Acting Judge Advocate General, recommends that Colonel Deeds be not tried by court-martial on any of the grounds suggested, and this recommendation has been approved by me.

Colonel Deeds was one of a large group of men who came to Washington at great personal and pecuniary sacrifice to render service to the Government in the great emergency caused by our participation in the war.

My duty as Secretary of War, with regard to any public servant under my jurisdiction, is clearly, to bring about proper punishment for wrongdoing and equally clearly to protect those public servants whose conduct is faithful and upright against embarrassment, humiliation, or loss.

Very wide publicity has been attached to the acts of Colonel Deeds as a member of the Aircraft Board. It will ever be possible to overtake the judgments which have been formed upon partial information on this subject. I do not know, but this department will make every effort to secure the widest publicity for the action now taken and for the grounds upon which it rests.

To carry this into effect, I am therefore transmitting to your committee for its information, and with the request for its publication in the Record, if the proprieties of the situation permit, a copy of the report of the Judge Advocate General. Similar copies are being furnished the Chairmen, the Committee on Military Affairs, United States Senate, the Attorney General, and Colonel Deeds.

Inasmuch as the purpose of Judge Hughes's suggestion has been accomplished, I have directed that all the records in this case be filed in the War Department and that this matter be considered as closed.

Cordially yours,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

Hughes Recommended Court-Martial.

President Wilson early last year, following the publication of the Borglum and other aircraft charges, asked Charles E. Hughes to investigate the aircraft situation. Judge Hughes's report was made on Oct. 31 and, contrary to rumors, failed to reveal or charge glaring defalcations and peculations, enormous delays, extravagance, or a general state of collapse in the earlier stages of the program, and in this respect the Hughes report was in decided contrast to the aircraft report made by the Senate Military Committee, following its investigation.

The Hughes report brought charges principally against one officer, Colonel Deeds, and recommended that the evidence in the case be brought to the attention of Secretary Baker so that Colonel Deeds might be tried by court martial. Several other officers were accused in the Hughes report with having violated the section which prohibits any Government representative from transacting business with a corporation with which he is associated. As their alleged violations of the statute was found by the War Department authorities to have been technical, President Wilson recently pardoned them.

In the case of Colonel Deeds, the Hughes report charged that this officer had represented to officials of the War Department that he had disposed of his stock in the United Motors Company, when, as a matter of fact, that stock still was carried in his name; that he had sent confidential War Department information to his former business associates at Dayton, Ohio, and that he had sponsored "grossly misleading statements" to the effect that American-built battle planes were en route to the front.

Gave Up a Large Income.

The report of General Ansell, made public today, covers about 10,000 words, and is a detailed consideration of the points raised by Judge Hughes, as well as of several other points submitted by Secretary Baker to the Judge Advocate General's office for investigation with a view of determining whether Colonel Deeds should be court-martialed.

One of the interesting features of the report is that section which deals with the business associations of Colonel Deeds, who before his appointment as Colonel in the Signal Corps had served the Government in a civilian capacity as a war worker, receiving a nominal salary of a dollar a year.

"In the early part of 1917," says this part of the report, "Mr. Deeds was a man of wealth, well known in the field of aircraft development. He was a large holder of stock in the Dayton Metal Products Company, which had profitable contracts with the British Government and other contracts with the United States Navy Department, and which had accumulated a considerable surplus in its treasury.

"Mr. Deeds was Vice President of the company, receiving $25,000 a year. He had also been a large stockholder in what was known as the Delco Company, the stock in which, owned by him and his associates, had been sold to the United Motors Company for several millions of dollars in cash, and, in addition, stock in the company. He was President of the latter corporation, drawing a salary of $60,000 a year. He was also largely financially interested in the Domestic Building Company, which owned the land and erected the building in Dayton, Ohio, subsequently acquired by the Dayton Wright Airplane Company for its principal airplane plant. On April 9, 1917, the Dayton Wright Airplane Company was incorporated, taking over the Orville Wright Airplane Corporation, in which Deeds had also been financially interested before that time.

"Deeds was an incorporator of the Dayton Wright Airplane Company, in which he had intended to become a stockholder, and of which he intended to become Vice President, until his plans were changed because of his subsequent connection with the Government.

The first allegation against Colonel Deeds considered by General Ansell was the telegram of Sept. 16, 1917, sent by Colonel Deeds to Edward E. Talbott, a former business associate, at Dayton. Concerning this the finding of General Ansell says:

"It appears that, while Colonel Deeds's real endeavor was to aid the Government in expediting its program of aircraft production, through some mistaken notion he deemed it proper to accomplish that object by a species of deceit which would result in concealment of the source of the information which the telegram conveyed. This was not only foolish, but provocative of the severe criticism which has been visited upon him and in a manner unjustly.

"Upon the evidence now before this office, however, court-martial proceedings against Colonel Deeds, based upon this transaction, are not advised. (1) No fraud against the Government nor disclosure of confidential information was intended; (2) none was accomplished; (3) the purpose of the telegram was to expedite the earnest efforts which the Government officials were making to speed up airplane production."

Sees No Attempt to Deceive.

The second charge against Colonel Deeds covered his statement regarding transfer of stock in the United Motors Company. After discussing this in detail, the Ansell report says:

"The whole attitude of Colonel Deeds from the time he was first approached with the request that he give the Government the benefit of his services, up to the time when the investigation was commenced, taken in connection with his large financial sacrifices in relinquishing salaries aggregating $85,000 a year, as well as interests in the various companies with which he had been connected, precludes the thought that he was guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

"It is recommended that no court-martial proceedings be instituted against Colonel Deeds based upon the statements in his letters to the Secretary of War and the Aircraft Production Board so far as they concerned the transfer of his stock in the United Motors Company, because (1) Colonel Deeds at the date the letter was written had made an informal gift of the stock; (2) he had instructed Judge McCann to arrange promptly the necessary transfer; (3) the actual transfer was delayed because of Colonel Deeds's absence from Dayton, necessitated by his continuous and unremitting labor for the Government at Washington; (4) the formal transfer was subsequently made; (5) there was a total absence of intent to deceive."

Ryan Commended Officer.

The Ansell report ends with the statement that the conclusion reached by the Judge Advocate General's office finds confirmation in this extract from a letter written on Nov. 13, 1918, to Secretary Baker by John D. Ryan, then Director of the Air Service:

"I feel, as I stated in a former letter to you, that Colonel Deeds performed a great service in expediting the work on the Liberty motor. If he had followed strict regulations and kept within them in the expenditure of money for the production of the first of these model engines, we would probably not have had any quantity production yet.

"I feel that the patriotic service rendered to the Government and the sacrifices made in connection therewith by Colonel Deeds outweighed any technical violations that might have occurred, and considering the conditions under which this work had to be done, if the aircraft was to take any part in the war within a reasonable time, I think commendation instead of court-martial should be Colonel Deeds's reward."

DAYTON, O., Jan. 16.—Colonel Deeds today gave out this statement, after receipt of the news from Washington as to his exoneration:

"I am naturally very much gratified by the information that is given out from the office of the Secretary of War. There has been no doubt in my mind, once the facts were really known, that everything would turn out all right.

"We have all passed through stirring, oppressive, strenuous times as Americans, and we have all tried to do our share in bringing ultimate triumph to our arms. No man needs special commendation for doing the right thing. It is assumed that patriotic Americans would do this. We have worked together to win the great war, and I personally hope, along with all my fellow-citizens, that there may be that same spirit of consideration and co-operation among us to win the battle of peace, which is our next national task.

"It has been a privilege and a pleasure to know that during the days of the immediate past friends who knew us best have known of our sincere efforts. A memory of fruitful days spent in the service of such a wonderful country as America is sufficient reward for me. I could ask nothing better for my share in this successful enterprise than that those who wished to know the truth, now have it, officially from the Secretary of War."

FOOD BOARD ENDING WORK.

Complete Demobilization of State Organization to Occur on Feb. 1.

The final session of the New York State Food Commission was held yesterday at Albany with John Mitchell presiding, when preparations were made for the formal demobilization of the body as a war organization. Gradual demobilization of the State Food Commission forces began about the middle of December and has continued until the present formal announcement of the complete demobilization on Feb. 1.

A formal report of the commission to the Governor and the Legislature covers the work of the commission from the time of its organization up to Nov. 1, last, and sets forth the actual cost to New York State as the copartner of the Federal Government in food production, distribution, regulation, inspection, and enforcement. It shows the total expenditures for administering all of these activities to be $540,251.55.

The commission was created by the Legislature on Aug. 29, 1917. John Mitchell was appointed President on Oct. 2 and the first formal meeting was held on Oct. 9, 1917. The Legislature appropriated $1,000,000 for its use, and the commission also took over an unexpended balance of $287,561.49 from the old State Food Supply Commission, out of which were paid bills of the State Food Supply Commission, totaling $22,779.94. With the latter sum deducted the total actual appropriation for the use of the State Food Commission was $1,264,781.55. The total unexpended balance of this appropriation on Nov. 1, last, was $724,530.

The commission had two offices, one in Albany and a central and executive office in New York City. Up-State conservation was directed from the Bureau of Conservation at Ithaca, and conservation for the metropolitan district from the New York office. The Bureau of Production was directed from the Albany office, the Agricultural Census from the Ithaca office.

ARMY BILL TO WAIT FOR NEW CONGRESS

House Committee Finds Time Too Short to Act on Baker's Reorganization Plan.

FOR ARMY OF 500,000 MEN

Vital Proposals to be Incorporated in Rider on Army Appropriation Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The War Department's bill for the creation of an army of 500,000 regulars for the transition period between the signing of peace and the demobilization of the present army, and for continuing the present organization of the War Department, including the legalization of the General Staff, was introduced in the House today by Representative Dent, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee.

Secretary Baker and General March, Chief of Staff, explained the provisions of the bill and the necessity for such a temporary organization. At the conclusion of the hearing Chairman Dent expressed the opinion that the bill could not be passed in the remaining six weeks of the present session and suggested that the essential features be embodied in a "rider" to the Army Appropriation bill. Secretary Baker agreed to furnish provisions to be attached to the bill. This, in effect, will authorize the President to maintain an army of 500,000, or as large a force up to that number as may be necessary, and to continue the organizations and units developed in the war. Such a rider will be effective until June 30, 1920, by which time the peace terms may be known and a permanent military policy formed.

Features of the Bill.

The salient provisions of the Administration bill are:

The Regular Army of the United States to consist of General Staff Corps, Adjutant General's Department, Judge Advocate General's Department, Quartermaster Corps, Finance Department, Transportation Corps, Motor Transport Corps, Medical Department, including Medical Corps, Dental Corps, and Veterinary Corps, Corps of Engineers, Ordnance Department, Signal Corps, Air Service, Tank Corps, Chaplains, Band Leaders, Bureau of Insular Affairs, Militia Bureau, detached officers, professors and cadets of United States Military Academy, detachment for schools and disciplinary barracks, infantry, cavalry, Coast Artillery Corps, staffs of Commanding Generals, Officers' Reserve Corps, unassigned recruits, officers, and enlisted men of retired list.

The President to have authority to make such distribution and redistribution of duties, powers, functions, records, property, and personnel as he deems advisable and authority to prescribe duties, powers, and functions of officers or services, units, and organizations.

General officers of line to consist of six Lieutenant Generals, thirty-two Major Generals, and eighty-seven Brigadier Generals.

General officers of staff, except Medical Department, to be recommissioned as general officers of the line in grade and with dates of rank now held or heretofore held by them.

The General Staff Corps to consist of one Chief of Staff to have rank of General while detailed, five assistants, five Brigadier Generals, forty-one Colonels, seventy-three Lieutenant Colonels, eighty-nine Majors, seventeen Captains, forty-two regimental Sergeant Major, sixty-two battalion Sergeants Major, sixty-three Sergeants, twenty-one Corporals, 189 privates.

Appointments in General Staff Corps to be for four years.

Officers designated for various units to include 100 Colonels of infantry, thirty Colonels of cavalry, sixty-one Colonels of field artillery, and forty-eight Colonels of coast artillery.

Reserve officers to be subject to call for five-year periods.

The War Department to be authorized to conduct schools for training of reserve officers.

Promotions of officers of grade of Captain and above to be by selection instead of seniority and upon recommendation of a board of not less than five officers.

Total enlisted strength of regular army, including Philippine Scouts and enlisted men of Medical Department, in time of peace not to exceed 480,000.

Enlistment period to be three years.

The form of organization built up during the war to be continued, with chief exception of the abolition of the Inspector General's Department and the transfer of military inspection duties to the Training Committee of the General Staff and financial inspection to the Finance Department.

Secretary Baker in explaining the bill to the committee said he did not consider universal military service part of the reorganization of the army. General March said the General Staff had recommended universal service, but that the recommendations were on the desk of Mr. Baker.

"What we want to do is to get them off that desk," remarked Representative Sanford of New York.

"It will be necessary to have some legislation at the present session for the reason that all enlisted men in the regular army except perhaps a limited number are under contracts of enlistment which expire four months after the declaration of peace," said Secretary Baker. "The effect of this is that if no legislation is passed there will be no army at the end of that period.

"When the armistice was signed there were 3,700,000 men in the army. Of that number a little over 2,000,000 were in Europe and Asia and 1,700,000 in this country.

"We have agreed that 500,000 men seemed the size of the army that ought to be provided. In making that decision we had in mind that some part of the army might be needed to aid in enforcing the terms of peace.

"The bill is drawn with the object in view of stabilizing the War Department's organization as it now is, to take advantage of all that has been taught us. It makes the present organization permanent. It does not deal with policies such as universal military training. If, after adoption of this bill, it is decided that some form of military training is advisable, then this organization is adequate to handle the situation."

"What led the department to decide on the figure 500,000?" asked Representative McKenzie.

"I regard that as a tentative figure," replied Secretary Baker. "It is a forecast of a situation of which we are uncertain. It may be that Congress will wish to cut it down next year. It seemed to us that an army of this size would enable us to meet the situation following the declaration of peace."

Thinks Men Will Volunteer.

"Do you think you can raise an army of 500,000 under the volunteer system in view of the relative smallness of the pay?" asked Representative Olney.

"I firmly believe that we can," said the Secretary. "There are many men who like the open-air life of the army."

Many questions relative to universal military training were asked, but Secretary Baker stuck to his position that the department should take no position on this subject until all the peace terms were decided.

"Has the General Staff worked out any plan for military training?" asked Representative Anthony.

"The General Staff has worked out several such plans which I have on my desk," answered Secretary Baker. "I have not approved any of them."

"Does the plan undertake the rebuilding of the National Guard?" asked Representative Anthony.

"It is my intention to carry out the provisions of the Chamberlain-Hay bill with respect to the National Guard," said the Secretary.

RELIEF FOR THE NEAR EAST.

Two Ships, with Workers and Supplies, Left This Port Yesterday.

Two steamships sailed from this port yesterday carrying $3,500,000 worth of foods and supplies for the people of Asia Minor. They were the Mercurius, that left Pier 61, North River, and the Western Belle, which departed from Tompkinsville. The cargo of the Mercurius is valued at $1,500,000. The supplies are being sent out by the Committee for Relief in the Near East and the Joint Distribution Committee of the American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers. They are to be distributed, however, without regard to religious belief.

On the Mercurius, among many other items, were 2,000 tons of flour, 2,000 cases of canned goods, 500 cases of condensed milk, eighteen motor trucks, twenty ambulances, 500 sewing machines, 200 oil stoves, 1,000,000 yards of muslin, 750,000 yards of gingham, 50,000 blankets, 800 hospital cots, twenty-six cases of tents, seventy-eight X-ray outfits, and 200 tons of coal for hospital use. So urgent is the need in the Near East that the cargo was put on the Mercurius in record time, and she will make all speed in crossing the Atlantic.

The Western Belle's share of the cargo which is to save many lives is 8,075 tons of flour. It is her maiden trip across the Atlantic. She was built on the Pacific Coast and came through the Panama Canal. Each vessel will try to get to Constantinople first.

A party of five relief workers sailed on the Mercurius, headed by Henry H. Riggs, a distinguished student of the Armenian and Turkish languages and customs. The other members of the party are Walter E. Curt, until recently an instructor in the Naval Academy at Annapolis; J. Edward Todd, an expert gas engineer of Lawrence, Kan.; Edward E. Hadley of Des Moines, Iowa, also a gas engineer, and Thomas C. Linn. Mr. Riggs's party is one of many which the committee is sending abroad to solve the relief problem in Armenia, Syria, and other famine-stricken regions.

Less than two weeks ago the committee sent a commission to Constantinople by way of England and France. Dr. James L. Barton, Chairman of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, is head of this commission, and the other members are Dr. J. F. H. Main, President of Grinnell College, Arthur Curtiss James, Dr. E. C. Moore of Harvard University, Dr. W. W. Peet, Dr. J. H. Washburn, and Harold A. Hatch.

The steamer Pensacola, which was also turned over to the committee by the Navy Department, will shortly sail from this port with more supplies and a larger party of relief workers.

To finance these relief expeditions, the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, is conducting a campaign throughout the country for $30,000,000.

Henry Morgenthau and Abraham I. Elkus, both members of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, and ex-Ambassadors to Turkey, sent messages of good luck to the relief party which sailed yesterday on the Mercurius.

OPEN MESOPOTAMIA RIVERS.

Irrigation Work of British There May Revive Country's Prosperity.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Improvements of great importance have been made in the channel of the Shat el Arab, the river formed by the confluence of the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers, according to The Journal of the Mesopotamian Board of Trade. Ocean-going steamers may now go up the river as far as Nahrumar, about twenty miles above Basra.

Heretofore, small steamers were compelled to load and unload by means of lighters or native boats at these towns. Under present arrangement, the discharging capacity of the ports is 150,000 tons a month.

Part of The Journal is devoted to the irrigation projects which are now being carried out in the valley of the Euphrates.

HYLAN WANTS ORDER IN GARDEN TONIGHT

Asks Enright to Have Plenty of Police There — Fears "Protest" at Attack on Hearst.

SOLDIERS TO HELP POLICE

Dr. Hibben of Princeton to Preside at Independent Citizens' Welcome Meeting.

On the eve of the big mass meeting to be held tonight in Madison Square Garden by the Independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome, Mayor Hylan wrote yesterday the following letter to Police Commissioner Enright:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor,
Jan. 16, 1919.

Richard E. Enright, Esq., Police Commissioner.

My Dear Commissioner: I am informed that a meeting will be held at Madison Square Garden on Friday, Jan. 17, presumably for the creation of a committee to welcome our homecoming soldiers, but really for the purpose, as stated by The New York World, to launch an attack on the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming troops and Mr. Hearst.

I am further informed that an attempt may be made by many of our citizens to publicly protest their displeasure at the proposed action of this self-constituted committee. I would suggest that you have a sufficient number of policemen present to see that order is preserved and to prevent any interference with the transaction of business of this or any other lawful assemblage. Very truly yours,

JOHN F. HYLAN, Mayor.

Dr. Hibben to Preside.

Dr. John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University, will preside at tonight's meeting, the committee announced yesterday. Among the others who have promised to speak are Dr. William T. Manning, James M. Beck, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, H. Montague Donner, John Drew, Father Bernard Clifford, and Dr. Nehemiah Boynton.

Music will be furnished by the 71st Regiment Band, and Joseph Barondess will sing "The Long, Long Trail" and "Keep the Home Fires Burning." About one hundred singers from the War Camp Community Service will sing community songs.

In discussing the plans for the mass meeting, Charles Stewart Davison, Chairman, said yesterday:

"It is our hope to show the returning soldiers, sailors, and marines that New York really wants to welcome them. It is, indeed, gratifying to see the way in which the prominent speakers who will appear have responded to our call.

"Thousands of seats are being reserved for men in uniform. These seats may be obtained in advance by application to the office of the American Defense Society at No. 44 East Twenty-third Street. The doors of the Garden will be open after 7:15 P. M., when persons bearing cards of admission will be admitted. As this meeting has been primarily planned as a welcome meeting for the returning troops we hope that they will attend in great numbers. Soldiers and sailors will be admitted immediately at the door after 7:15 P. M."

Mr. Davison said he had received the following telegram from United States Senator J. W. Wadsworth of New York, who had been invited to address the meeting:

"Thank you for courteous invitation to address meeting in Madison Square Garden. Wish I could take advantage of it. A combination of engagements here and in Western New York make it impossible for me to be in New York City on the evening of Jan. 17. Accept my best wishes for the success of the meeting."

Soldiers to Assist Police.

At the request of the committee in charge, about 300 policemen will be assigned to the Garden, it was said. In addition there will be hundreds of soldiers from the nearby camps, marshaled by officers, all of whom have volunteered to keep order in the Garden.

Among the prominent men and women who are represented on the Citizens' Committee as boxholders for the meeting are:

James C. Auchincloss, Richard M. Hurd, Benjamin L. Allen, Edmond Dwight, Mrs. M. L. Porter, William H. Williams, N. W. Sackett, Alfred L. Marling, E. B. Seabel, Mrs. L. B. Stilwell, C. E. Mathewson, Mrs. Alfred Meyer, John Haroon Rhoades, J. B. Townsend, Mrs. H. R. Fairfax, Mrs. W. H. Brown, Mrs. M. L. Aldrich, J. Howes Burton, Miss Robinson Smith, Robert Sands, Walter Jennings, George Eldridge, Mrs. William Jay, Miss Maude Wetmore, Caspar Whitney, Mrs. Anderson Fowler, Rabbi Joseph Silverman, Edwin O. Holter, H. E. Meeker, Dr. William T. Manning, Taylor More, Frank V. Storrs, R. W. Kelley, L. B. Ellinan, Mrs. H. P. Loomis, Alfred E. Henderson, Mrs. Charles W. Leavitt, W. R. Peters, George B. Agnew, Charles E. Mathewson, Miss L. M. Moore, Charles Stewart Davison, and George A. Hurd.

More than 100 organizations are now represented on the Citizens' Committee of Welcome. Among the patriotic and civic organizations who are interested in the work of the committee are:

America's Allies Co-Operative Committee, American Committee for Devastated France, Atlantic Yacht Club, Aeronautical Society of America, American Indian League, American Relief Legion, Art Workers' Club for Women, Bel Canto Club, Brooklyn Women's War Relief Committee, Cameo Branch International Sunshine Society, Chiropean, Colonial Yacht Club, College Women's Club, Chicago Club, Colonial Dames of America, Congress of State Societies, Presbyterian Church Club, Contemporary Club, Clio Club, Colonial Dames of the State of New York, Daughters of Columbia County.

ASSAILS THE DISLOYAL AMONG WELCOMERS

Dr. Richmond Rouses Holland Society Diners—Dr. Schurman Would Admit Germany to League of Nations.

Speaking at the thirty-fourth annual dinner of the Holland Society of New York last night, Dr. Charles Alexander Richmond, President of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., contrasted the Government methods at the time of Washington with those of the present day. Concerning the Governmental viewpoint of Colonial days, he said:

"In those days they didn't always hang the disloyal, nor did they always appoint them to a committee to welcome homecoming troops." The rest of Dr. Richmond's remarks was drowned in a remarkable burst of applause that sprang from every corner of the big Delmonico ballroom.

Higher and higher the applause mounted, then the 350 diners jumped to their feet and cheered, waved napkins and shouted approval for slightly more than three minutes. In a break in the handclapping, Dr. Richmond interjected, "I hope I wasn't too personal," and the cheering began again.

Dr. Richmond earlier in his speech said the whole world wanted the League of Nations and that should the United States and Great Britain unite it would be a guarantee of world peace forever. He warned against the "bacillus Bolshevikl," and said America had to fear an "autocracy of mere numbers."

Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University, who spoke later, advocated the inclusion of both Russia and Germany in the proposed League of Nations, provided they give full assurance of their honest intentions. Recalling the position of the United States in world affairs, he said:

"You will ask if in my view the society of nations should be limited to America, Great Britain, France and Italy. I answer that to these democracies I would add at once the empire of Japan, a faithful ally in the world war. But I would not content myself with this group of nations. I would give all neutral countries an opportunity of joining this society of nations as soon as they pledge themselves to accept the fundamental conditions of membership and to recognize the final authority of the great powers, whose armies and navies would in the long run be charged with the duty of maintaining the peace of the world.

"And, finally, beyond the Allies and the neutrals, I would welcome to the society of nations, as soon as they had Government representing their people and capable of maintaining order and discharging international obligations, a former ally like Russia and a former enemy like Germany, provided, of course, they accept the conditions laid down for admission to the society of nations and give satisfactory verbal assurance that they are backed by a peace-loving and law-abiding national mind and spirit."

In spite of America's entrance into the world's political field, Dr. Schurman said she would continue to have an especial interest in the New World and "despite fundamental obligations which she must not assume in relation to the affairs of the Old World, the web of international relations of European nations will be woven in the main by these nations themselves, without suggestions from America except as regards the general plan and ultimate purpose."

Seymour Van Santvoord, President of the Holland Society, presided and introduced a memorial to Colonel Roosevelt, who was a charter member of the organization. The members stood while Mr. Van Santvoord read the tribute to the departed President's great Americanism. Other speakers were Professor Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia University and the Rev. Dr. Robert Adams.

PLANS TO WELCOME 27TH.

Mayor's Committee Prepares for Return of New York Division.

Following the receipt of information that the 27th Division, composed of New York National Guard troops, might embark for home within ten days, the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops disclosed yesterday its plans for the reception. The committee expects that at least 2,000,000 visitors will be here in connection with the homecoming.

The plans, as announced, include official welcomes to officers at the City Hall by city officials in the uniform of Continental soldiers. There will be parades on Fifth Avenue and Broadway, and dinners to officers and men, as well as theatre parties. It is planned to have Fifth Avenue and probably a section of Broadway decorated in honor of the troops. The decorations of the City Hall plaza will be of the Colonial period, while Arches at Washington Square and Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue will be decorated in honor of the nations which wrought the downfall of Germany.

Arrangements have been made so that relatives of the marchers may watch the parade from seats. Otto Shulhof, Chairman of the committee in charge, said yesterday that about 6,000 seats in Fifth Avenue stores and offices had been obtained so far. At the Public Library, Fifth Avenue will be draped in sombre tones to suggest a "Court of the Victorious Dead." There will be no reviewing stands along the line of parade, but in Central Park near Fifth Avenue stands will be placed for the Mayor's Committee and invited guests.

A special feature of the arrangements will be the illuminations, arranged for by Frank L. Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Dowling, by an arrangement with the New York Edison Company, will have Fifth Avenue flooded with powerful electric lights, with searchlights playing on captive balloons moored to the Washington Square arch.

Daniel G. Reid, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops, said yesterday that Connecticut will join New York today in welcoming home 23 officers and 1,517 men of the 56th Coast Artillery, who are coming here on the battleship South Dakota. Major Sunderland of Danbury, Conn., and a committee from that city will be the guests of New York while they are in the city.

The South Dakota will dock on the south side of Army Pier 3, in Hoboken, and the men will entrain for Camp Merritt, N. J., on landing, where they will be under medical observation before going home.

Acting under instructions from the War Department, Chairman Reid has established a special bureau in the committee's headquarters in the Hall of Records, where discharged men from every branch of the service may register their full record of service during the war. An attempt will be made to obtain the name, address and kit of every man who joined the service from this city.

RADICALS HISS FLAG AT MOONEY MEETING

Outburst in Chicago Conference Over Picture Showing Marching Soldiers.

DEBS THREATENS BIGSTRIKE

Sends Telegram, Being Prevented by Court from Attending—Gompers Bitterly Assailed.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The extreme radicals seemed to have control of the sessions today of the National Labor Congress, called to consider a program for liberating Thomas J. Mooney and Warren Billings.

Practically every principle of the Socialists and the I. W. W. was urged for adoption in a flood of oratory which occupied both the morning and afternoon sessions. Speakers demanded the organization of an American Soviet, the press and capitalists were denounced, and the American Federation of Labor was bitterly assailed.

The climax was reached when a moving picture was shown of the Mooney case. One scene showing soldiers carrying an American flag in the San Francisco Preparedness Day parade brought hisses from some of the radicals in the crowd.

The Committee on Resolutions is expected to make its final report tomorrow, after which the convention will adjourn. The report, it is said, will recommend the adoption of the program of the International Workers' Defense League for the liberation of Mooney and Billings and make some kind of a declaration on the numerous radical ideas suggested.

A telegram was read from Eugene V. Debs, expressing regret at his inability to address the convention because of the conditions imposed by Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver of Cleveland, when the Socialist leader was released on bail after his conviction for violation of the espionage law.

In the telegram Debs said:

"Pro speech prevails in Russia, but is dead in the United States since the world has been made safe for democracy. * * * Mooney is innocent, and the whole world knows it. The convention can do no less than demand his unconditional release and issue an ultimatum to that effect, giving due notice that if that fails a general strike will follow. * * * If the silk-hat conspirators and would-be lynchers out on the Pacific Coast and elsewhere insist upon war, let it come."

The Debs telegram was cheered.

James H. Maurer, President of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, expressed the radical view when he said:

"If you are a good revolutionist you will not do anything to obstruct this new radical movement. The day has passed when officials can railroad a man to the gallows because of his opinions."

A message was read from five members of the Executive Board of the I. W. W. pledging to support a general strike.

O. T. Yoshihara, a Japanese, who, it is said, was formerly valet for William D. Haywood, pledged the aid of the Japanese Railway Workers' Union in the event of a general strike.

After a long wrangle, the convention by a close vote, decided not to send a delegate to the International Labor Conference in Paris, but to have the Mooney case presented by Samuel Gompers and other representatives of the American Federation of Labor now in France. Gompers and the Federation were bitterly attacked by radical delegates in the debate over this resolution.

FORM INTER-RACIAL COUNCIL

Noted Men Among Organizers—Many Races at Meeting.

The Inter-Racial Council of the United States, with its object the establishment of a better Americanism among the more than thirty racial groups in the United States, was formed yesterday at a meeting held at 120 Broadway. Representatives of the various racial groups attended, as well as members of industrial and labor organizations and many men prominent in the business world.

General T. Coleman du Pont was chosen as Chairman. Some of the others who attended the meeting were Charles E. Hughes, Cleveland H. Dodge, Lindley M. Garrison, Otto H. Kahn, James M. Beck, Colgate Hoyt, Oscar S. Straus, A. C. Bedford, Charles A. Coffin, E. G. Grace, A. J. Hemphill, Thomas W. Lamont, Daniel Willard, and Guy E. Tripp. Louis Marshall represented American Jewry, Professor M. I. Pupin of Columbia the Jugoslavs, Steffano Miele and A. Portfolio the Italians, Theodore Kuntz, Hungarians, L. V. Calrocressi the Greeks, and Lucien Jouvaud the French.

Alexander J. Hemphill, explaining the objects of the organization, said:

"The Inter-Racial Council will endeavor to provide the means, through the co-operation of industrial, educational, and other forces, by which the various races may receive a broader view of our national life, through broadened opportunity for themselves. It seeks to influence desirable immigration to make America a place in which the immigrant will want to remain and will want to cast his permanent lot.

"The further object of the Inter-Racial Council, and possibly of prime importance, will be to unite those of the many races already here and who are to remain, causing them to forget, by better acquaintance, the racial differences and racial politics of the Old World, and causing them to unite in the common purpose of making America their new home and place which shall be the better, the happier, the more prosperous, and the more truly democratic because of their coming."

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in a Letter to Mayor Hylan Defines Its Position

Only Arbitration Can Prevent Strike of the 35,000 Workers in Dress and Waist Industry of New York

Letters to Mayor Hylan Reads as Follows:

INTERNATIONAL LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' UNION
31 Union Square, New York City
Affiliated with American Federation of Labor

January 15, 1919.

The Honorable John F. Hylan, The Mayor, City Hall, New York City.

Dear Mr. Mayor:

I had the honor to state to you yesterday, when you were kind enough to give me so much of your valuable time, that our Union—the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union—finds itself compelled owing to the arbitrary attitude of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, to call out on strike the 35,000 workers employed in the dress and waist industry in Greater New York.

Allow me to restate in this letter what I have been permitted to tell you yesterday:—

Six years ago, a short time after the Asch Building fire tragedy, in which 147 girls of the Triangle Waist Co. lost their lives, the employers and the workers in this industry, through the good offices of Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, now Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, entered, for the first time, into contractual relations under an agreement known as the Protocol of Peace.

The protocol was somewhat different from the ordinary agreement between employers and workers, inasmuch as the protocol not only established definite standards of work but it also provided for a number of tribunals and boards, designed to secure justice and fairness to both sides.

One of the boards established by the protocol was "The Joint Board of Sanitary Control" to look after the safety and sanitary conditions of the shops, in order to prevent a recurrence of such tragedies as the Asch Building fire; another board established was the "Committee on Immediate Action," which had as its purpose the adjustment of complaints and grievances arising from time to time between the employees and the employers in the shops. The protocol also provided that questions of importance to the employers and employees in the industry as a whole, upon which both parties fail to agree, should be submitted to a Board of Arbitration, and that the decisions of this board shall be final and binding upon both sides.

The protocol arrangement did not always work to the satisfaction of the workers. Very often, too often, complaints that could have been adjusted by the Committee on Immediate Action in five minutes were intentionally dragged along by the Association for weeks and sometimes for months, with the result that the workers who felt aggrieved would become restless and in some cases stop from work on their own initiative. Such stoppages, however, would usually be of short duration, many of which did not last longer than an hour or two.

The efforts of the Joint Board of Sanitary Control to make the shops sanitary and safe did not come up to expectations, either. The director of that board, Dr. George M. Price, in his report of December 5, 1918, states that out of the 825 shops in the dress and waist industry only 18% are without defects. The rest of them either have serious fire dangers or have dirty walls, dirty ceilings, dirty water-closets, etc., etc.

But, notwithstanding all this, we have worked under this arrangement for six years. From time to time when matters would become aggravated and the relations between the Association and our Union strained, the Board of Arbitration would be called in and straighten matters out.

This protocol was in existence for nearly six years and expired on the 31st of December, 1918. Two months before its expiration and in accordance with a rule adopted at a previous conference, our Union presented to the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association a number of requests to be embodied in the new protocol, the most important of which were:—

1. A reduction in the hours of work to 44 hours per week, so as to make employment in our industry more regular and continuous.
2. An increase of 15 per cent. in wages to enable the workers to meet the present high cost of living.
3. Permission to a representative of the Union to visit the shops once a month, in order to ascertain whether the standards established by the protocol are observed.

But instead of considering our requests as we had a right to expect, the Association notified us that unless the Union will agree to surrender a number of standards that have been in practice in the industry for the past six years and will, in addition, concede to the manufacturers the right to discharge workers at their discretion, and that the Committee on Immediate Action be eliminated, they would not renew the agreement with the Union.

On January 9th we forwarded a letter to the Manufacturers' Association calling their attention to the grave situation created by their arbitrary attitude, with an offer to forthwith submit our contentions to a Board of Arbitration under the chairmanship of any person of recognized standing in the community.

The Manufacturers' Association, however, in less than twenty-four hours, in a letter full of baseless assertions signed by its President, Mr. Morris Weiss, and drafted by Mr. Harry A. Gordon, an attorney who has made many futile attempts during the last few years to get into the Waist and Dress Manufacturers' Association to win laurels as a so-called "industrial lawyer," declined to accept our offer.

The only thing that could still avert a strike in the waist and dress industry is a change in the attitude of the Manufacturers' Association and consent on their part to agree to submit our contentions to a Board of Arbitration, composed of one person selected by the Union, one person selected by the Manufacturers' Association, under the chairmanship of any person of recognized standing in the community selected by both parties.

The question of the employers, right to discharge workers is not as difficult as has been made to appear by the employers. The Board of Arbitration, under the chairmanship of Justice Louis D. Brandeis and Judge Julian W. Mack, has on many occasions decided that the employers have the right to discharge any worker for fair, just and reasonable cause, but the Board has held that in view of the fact that the workers under the protocol had surrendered their legal right to strike as a remedy against abuses of the employers' prerogatives, they are entitled to a substitute for such remedy in the form of a machinery for the speedy adjustment of their complaints against unreasonable and unjust discharges. We are prepared to meet them on either side of the proposition; they may claim absolute freedom to discharge their workers justly or unjustly, fairly or unfairly, and in that case we must reserve our right to secure redress against abuses of unfair employers by such means as we have at our command; or they may limit their right of discharge and in that event we shall be quite ready to surrender our rights to strike against discharges.

You can readily see, Mr. Mayor, that our organization is doing all that is compatible with honor and sincere regard for public interest to avert this strike. May we, therefore, expect, in case all our attempts fail, that you instruct all your departments, particularly the police, that our workers be given a fair deal and not be molested in their legitimate exercises of their rights as citizens in the same fair manner as under Mayor Gaynor during the cloak strike of 1910, and under Mayor Mitchel during the cloak strike of 1916, so that the more arrogant element among the waist and dress manufacturers may not count in advance upon the city authorities as prospective allies in their campaign against the workers.

Thanking you kindly again for your indulgent attention, I am,

Very respectfully yours,

BENJAMIN SCHLESINGER, President.

AGAINST CABLE CENSORSHIP

Secretary Redfield Tells Rubber Men He Is Trying to End It.

Declaring that he was making every effort to remove all restrictions to trade as soon as expedient, Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield told the thousand members of the Rubber Association of America at their annual dinner held in the Waldorf-Astoria last night that the lifting of the cable censorship was part of his program. This announcement was greeted with tumultuous applause by the business men present. Secretary Redfield said:

"There are certain things in which we are not free to move alone. By the very terms of the armistice, the blockade remains, and that blockade we are not free to lift by ourselves. A part of that blockade is the cable censorship, and it is not in the power of the United States to act upon that matter alone. Nevertheless, I have within a few days cabled to Secretary Lansing in Paris, saying to him that it is my earnest hope that he may get our associates to release the cables and the censorship freely for America."

At the annual meeting held earlier in the day at the Waldorf, H. S. Vorhis of New York was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Rubber Association of America. Mr. Vorhis said that the rubber industry in the United States is today a "billion dollar industry." Mr. Vorhis said that 1919 would see an importation of over 200,000 tons, as this year is expected to be the biggest in the history of the industry.

Charles T. Wilson, Chairman of the Committee on Rubber and Kindred Products, of the War Trade Board, said it was necessary for the Government to continue control of the rubber and other industries. Eight Directors were elected yesterday afternoon, as follows: James Newton Gunn, President of the United States Tire Company, New York; John S. Lowman, Philadelphia Rubber Works, Akron, Ohio; A. D. Thornton, Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, Ltd., Montreal; Seneca G. Lewis of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, Jeannette, Penn.; C. W. REJECTS PHONE SCHEDULE.

Ohio Commission Holds That Burleson's Rates Are Unfair.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 16.—The Ohio Public Utilities Commission today rejected the proposed schedule of long-distance telephone rates ordered by Postmaster General Burleson and declared that they should not affect intrastate service in Ohio.

It is estimated by the commission that the new schedule of rates ordered by the Postmaster General would have compelled telephone users to pay 25 per cent. more for long-distance service.

In rejecting the Postmaster General's proposed schedule the Ohio Utilities Commission finds:

First, that the schedule contains an entirely new classification of the service which ought not, in the interest of the public, to be instituted without careful consideration supported by evidence.

Second—That the schedules do not comply with the requirements of the Ohio statutes.

Third—That the rates, tolls, and charges carried in the schedule are so greatly in excess of charges now being collected for similar service as to be injurious to business or interests of the public and ought not to be established without a showing that same are necessary.

Fourth—That rates, tolls, and charges do not appear to be based upon any investigation or data, but appear to be arbitrary and imposed for the purpose of creating a uniform standard of rates throughout the United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Postmaster General Burleson declined today to make any statement as to steps to be taken by the Post Office Department as a result of the rejection by the Ohio Public Utilities Commission of the proposed schedule of long-distance telephone rates, which become effective Jan. 21. The department, however, made public a letter sent to the Public Service Commission of Massachusetts, asking that the commission take no action until the new schedule had been fairly tried.

EACH PLEDGED $100,000,000

Britain, France, and Italy Have Promised Funds for Food.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—It is costing the Allies $30,000,000 a day to support their armies of occupation. In fifteen days the total cost will be $400,000,000. For that sum all the new nations and manifold republics which are struggling out of the welter of war can be furnished with food to ration them through the remainder of te Winter.

If food is not furnished, one after another of them is certain to go down into chaos. With each fall the demand for larger armies and for a longer stay in Europe of American soldiers will increase.

Great Britain, France, and Italy have already agreed to furnish one-quarter each of the $40,000,000 needed. Their delegates have the power and have exercised it to guarantee their share of funds necessary to keep the new republics out of the abyss.

Only the United States has thus far refused to appropriate its $100,000,000. The necessity is so great, the crisis is so acute that the Food Administration already has cargoes of food and supplies on the ocean, to pay for which no money is available.

77TH DROVE ENEMY IN FOREST FIGHT

New York Draft Men, Says Engineer, Achieved Feats Declared Impossible.

BUILT RAILROAD UNDER FIRE

Capt. F. S. Greene Tells of City-Bred Troops and How East Side Lads Made Good.

Captain Frederick S. Greene, civil engineer and magazine writer, just back from France, told some details yesterday of the work of the 77th Division, made up of New York City boys, trained at Camp Upton, many from the east side and unfamiliar with forests, who accomplished what the French considered almost an impossibility in clearing the Argonne Forest of Germans. In the Argonne drive, Captain Greene commanded the 2d Battalion, 302d Engineers, of the 77th Division, a combatant force which followed the doughboys, building bridges, carrying forward the narrow gauge railroads, and doing other work under fire.

It had been expected that the 77th Division, occupying the forest part of the front, would advance as the pressure on each side of the forest caused the Germans to withdraw. Instead they went right ahead and with tremendous bravery and, in the face of positions that seemed impregnable, drove out the enemy, in some cases advancing ahead of their flank. No praise was too great for these New York lads, the Captain said.

"The Battle of the Argonne was on a large front and it was to the 77th Division that the task of advancing through the Argonne Forest was assigned," said Captain Greene. "It was a most difficult terrain, where the ravines were deeper and the hills higher than on other parts of the sector. There the forest was very thick and the Germans were strongly intrenched, but these men, though city raised, adapted themselves to 'Indian fighting' and drove the Germans before them."

To show some of the obstacles that the 77th Division overcame, the Captain took out a French war map of the sector showing in detail the "dugout cities," the crooked lines of the trenches, and the lines of the rails on which the Germans brought up ammunition and supplies. It was the sector from Vienne le Chateau on the left to Verrence on the right through which the 77th Division advanced.

They cut their way through nine main-line trenches and passed innumerable machine gun nests, until they were near Sedan, when they turned toward the west, as an act of courtesy, and let the French go on to Sedan. On the map Captain Greene pointed out the strong Charlevaux trench that was captured after a bitter fight, in which many on both sides were killed.

"The drive started on Sept. 26, and we had driven the boche out of the forest and across the Aire River by Oct. 12," the Captain continued. "After we passed the Charlevaux trench it was open warfare up to Sedan. At the end of the drive the battalion headquarters had been advanced to Angecourt.

"Those boys from New York were wonderful. They went right through the Germans. They took the Dépot de Machines and captured the dump at Abri, and in so doing took more than a million dollars' worth of military material.

"Great feats were performed. Companies E and F of the Second Battalion built in two days a light railway from Le Harazée two kilometers up a difficult ravine and connected it up with the railway system the Germans had been using. As we advanced the length of this line increased. I should say we were connected with some fifty miles of light railway.

"We immediately organized two trains a day to go up these lines. We had 110 horses to pull the little cars. We sent up from fifty to seventy-five tons of ammunition and supplies a day and brought out the wounded. One of the doctors told me that we got the wounded to the hospitals eight hours sooner than we could have by any other method.

"We kept behind the fighters and we were shelled while working. I remember that at one point a sniper bothered us for four days. In the maze of holes and trenches it was impossible to locate him. He was a very poor shot. When his food gave out, I suppose, he threw away his gun and surrendered.

"Before the drive I reconnoitered up the ravines with a French officer who was one of the most competent I met. In that forest of tangled growth and concealed death I asked him if he thought it could be taken. He replied that it would be 'a most difficult task,' but his tone and his manner told me that he thought it would be impossible.

"The French thought that if the forest was taken, it would be by keeping in touch with the enemy and advancing as they, flanked on the right and the left, had to abandon their positions and fall back. Instead of that, the 77th drove them back. We were in advance of the divisions on our left and we kept up with those on our right.

"We lost many men because of the positions we had to take and the machine gun nests. Our men fought well, and so did the Germans, for that matter. As they fell back, they left machine gunners behind and often these men sacrificed themselves in the effort to stay our advance. The Captain of a tank told me of a case where he had to run over a machine gun and a gunner who would not leave his post."

The 77th Division was 153 days in the line after it started in. On Oct. 31 it was taken out of the extreme front line and held in reserve for a few days. Then it was sent to support, and on Nov. 2, when the second phase of the battle was entered, it was again sent to the front.

OUR SHIPS CARRIED 46 PER CENT. OF TROOPS

And of All the Forces Sent Overseas 82.75 Per Cent. Were Convoyed by Our Navy.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Official figures are now available for the first time showing the full extent to which American ships transported the American Army of approximately 2,079,000 men to Europe, and also showing the very high percentage of vessels escorted by American warships, irrespective of what vessels were carrying the troops. These statistics vary from the previously announced figures, which represented a larger proportion carried in British ships and escorted by the British Navy.

The official figures show that 46.25 per cent. of all the American troops were transported exclusively in American ships. Of these, 43.75 per cent. were carried in American naval transports. The figures show that the percentage actually carried in British ships was 48.25 per cent., as against the much higher figures recently made public. An additional 3 per cent. was carried in Italian ships leased to the British, and another 2.50 per cent. was carried in ships of other nations.

The American Navy, however, escorted and guarded the transport of 82.75 per cent. of all the troops, representing 1,720,360 men. The British escorted 14.12 per cent., representing 297,903 men. The French escorted 3.13 per cent., representing 61,617 men.

During the week ended Jan. 8 there left France for the United States American troops to the number of 26,980. The homeward-bound contingents comprised 1,183 officers and 25,797 men.

The week's departures raised the total of soldiers returned to the United States to 178,104, of which number 11,618 were officers and 166,486 were enlisted men.

The Company makes frequent losses by having to take depreciated real estate and pay the lender his principal, but its losses are trifling compared with losses of investment companies on their investments in bonds and stocks.
The well managed savings banks have had the same experience. They have had to take some real estate, but the losses on it have been small compared with the depreciation of the best municipal and corporate bonds which they have to carry by law.
The lesson to all investors, individual and corporate, is that they should increase their mortgage holdings and limit their holdings of fluctuating securities.

Many happy returns

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN
Born January 17, 1706
A great American who found it profitable throughout a career of usefulness to his nation and to the world, to save. He was a great apostle of "sensible spending" as a source of power to the individual and to the nation.

OUT of the war has come to us Americans the first step toward a great lesson, the lesson that saving is power.
We have begun to learn that thrift is not so difficult as we thought it was. Thrift means "spending sensibly," not spending all we earn.
We have begun to learn that thrift is happiness stored up for future use.
We have begun to learn that thrift means capital spread among millions of our people, as the soundest basis of personal and national strength.
For the long future of America this was the most vital lesson which a great people had left unlearned.
We have made a great start. We owe it to those who gave their lives for victory to keep on saving for America. We owe it to our country to be earners and savers, to be "sensible spenders," not wasters.

MAJOR LEAGUES RETAIN THREE MAN COMMISSION BUT SEEK NEUTRAL CHAIRMAN

Scotch Tweeds owe their name to a slip of the pen and not to the River Tweed as one might readily suppose.

About a century ago in London there sprang up a great demand for Scottish "twills."

Now it so happened that "tweel" was the Scotish form for twill, better known to most of us as the "diagonal weave."

In making out an invoice the Scot, who was probably a much better weaver than penman, by a slip wrote "tweeds" instead of "tweels."

The London merchant, thinking the change intentional and the new name appropriate, used it when next ordering. As the cloth caught public favor, the name has been preserved ever since.

Scotch tweeds! A good showing among our men's winter suits.

OPPOSITION FAILS TO OUST HERRMANN

He Is to Remain as Chairman of National Commission Pending Further Action.

SEEK NEUTRAL CANDIDATE

Committee of Four Is Named at Joint Meeting to Find a Man Suitable for the Position.

It looks as if August Herrmann of Cincinnati, Chairman of the National Commission, had out-generaled his opponents in the National League and would retain his position at the head of the baseball tribunal. The joint meeting of the two major leagues at the Hotel Biltmore yesterday, which promised to produce a lot of oratorical fireworks, was as quiet and dignified as an afternoon tea of a Browning Society.

Those who expected to see Herrmann pushed out of the meeting room at double-quick step were disappointed, for as soon as the club owners got together the first thing they did was to pay a tribute to Herrmann by making him the presiding officer of the pow-wow. When the question of a new Chairman of the commission came up for discussion Herrmann left the chair and President John A. Heydler of the National League presided as traffic officer.

After talking the subject over it was decided to appoint a committee of two from each league to look carefully over the whole United States in search of a suitable Chairman. The American League, together with the National League, went on record as favoring a neutral man for Chairman. That cold statement in itself sounds rather bad for Mr. Herrmann, but there is a qualification to the statement, which takes much of the sting out of it.

While both leagues favor a neutral Chairman, it is only on the condition that a suitable candidate can be found. This committee of four, equally divided between the leagues, will report any and all candidates which they consider suitable back to Presidents Heydler and Johnson, and if they are satisfied with the choice the suitable candidate will be elected. In the meantime, Mr. Herrmann will continue in office.

Baseball men regard this move as favorable to Herrmann because no time limit is placed on the activities of the searching party and no provision is made in case the vote on a Chairman results in a deadlock. It was the general opinion that the new committee would have a long, trying search before finding a candidate who might be termed "suitable." Not one of the sixteen club owners at the meeting yesterday even suggested a likely candidate for the Chairmanship.

President Ban Johnson of the American League spent most of the afternoon listening to the remarks of the club owners and did a minimum of talking himself. What was done at the meeting was evidently to his liking.

There was no discussion at the meeting over the action of the National League in reducing salaries. It is certain that the American League will not follow the footsteps of the National League in this radical change. President Johnson will meet with his club owners today to ratify the 140-game schedule, and it is believed that the club-owners will go on record as opposing the wholesale cut of players' salaries in direct opposition to the older league's action.

"The subject of reducing salaries this season," said Mr. Johnson, "was discussed at our meeting in Chicago in December, and the sentiment of the club owners against it was rather emphatic."

After the American League meeting tomorrow Mr. Johnson will return to Washington. He said he had requested the War Department to release from service some thirty-two players who were overseas, in time to play next season. No request was made for the 100 or more major league players who are in the army cantonments in this country.

The matter of changing the present rules governing the distribution of the World's Series money was referred to the National Commission. Both leagues strongly favored the 140-game schedule, and no attempt was made to make any changes in the championship program which has been drawn up.

The National League decided on the twenty-one-player limit, the same as the American League. With the same number of players and a vast difference in the salaries in the two organizations, baseball men see much trouble ahead between the club owners and players when an attempt is made by the National League to put the new pay roll into effect.

Manager McGraw of the Giants does not believe that the new salary plan is practical, and predicts that the radical action of the National League will be rescinded before the season opens. The show-down will come in a couple of weeks, for all the clubs will send out their contracts beginning next week.

The leagues will appoint a committee to confer with the internal revenue officials on the war tax at next season's games.

Those present at the joint meeting were: National League—President John A. Heydler, Arthur E. Wise, Boston; August Herrmann, Cincinnati; Charles H. Ebbets and Charles H. Ebbetts, Jr., Brooklyn; William Veeck, Chicago; Branch Rickey, St. Louis; William F. Baker, Philadelphia; Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh; Charles A. Stoneham, Judge Francis X. McQuade, and John B. Foster, New York.

American League—President Ban Johnson, Harry Grabiner, Chicago; Connie Mack and Ben Shibe, Philadelphia; Colonel Jacob Ruppert and Lieut.-Col. T. L. Huston, New York; Harry H. Frazee and Edward Barrow, Boston; Phil Ball, St. Louis; Frank Navin, Detroit; James C. Dunn and E. S. Barnard, Cleveland; Benjamin Minor and Clarke Griffith, Washington.

BASEBALL TRADE PENDING.

Boston, Washington, and Cleveland Consider Three-Cornered Deal.

No baseball trades were made at the baseball meetings yesterday, although there are several deals under way. A three-cornered transaction is now being considered by the Boston, Washington, and Cleveland clubs which may materialize before the club owners leave town. Roth of the Indians, Milan of Washington, and Janvrin, the Boston infielder, are being considered, but the managers of the various clubs have not yet agreed to terms.

It was rumored that Manager George Stallings had made an offer to President Ebbets of Brooklyn for Jake Daubert. The Dodger first baseman now has a suit pending against the Brooklyn club, and it is stated that he will not play at Ebbets Field next season. The manager of the Braves is willing to give Konetchy and some cash for Daubert, and is also willing to part with some of his catchers. As Brooklyn is in need of backstops, the two clubs may come to terms.

MEIGS AND McCORD WIN.

Golf Tourney at Pinehurst Reaches Semi-Finals.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 16.—The Advertisers' Tournament was brought down to the semi-finals at Pinehurst today by the playing of the third match round on the all twelve divisions and subdivisions. M. C. Meigs of Midlothian, and W. M. McCord of Rumson survived on the upper bracket of the championship division. Don Parker of Garden City and F. N. B. Close of Baltusrol came through in the lower frame. E. T. Manson of Framingham, who defeated R. M. Purves of Woodland in yesterday's round, and who was expected to come through to the final, was defeated today by W. M. McCord. The match was all even at the sixteenth, but Manson lost the seventeenth, and McCord took the contest by 2 up when Manson overplayed his last chance to square the match on the home green.

R. M. Purves gave eight strokes to W. V. O'Brien of Exmor in the second eight of the first division, and the match went to thirty-six holes in the absence of a decision with the eighteenth. Purves went out in thirty-eight on the second round and finally won by 3 and 2.

The finals were played in the women's section of the tournament today, Mrs. Clarence Cone of Inwood, handicap 14, winning the trophy in the first eight by defeating Mrs. W. F. Smith of Braeburn, the medal list, 3 and 2, Mrs. Smith playing from scratch.

The summaries:

Kirby Again Wins at Pool.

Edward Kirby defeated Norman Zibbard last night at Doyle's Academy in the national pocket billiard championship tournament of the A. A. B. A. by the score of 100 to 86. Zibbard held Kirby in check until the latter stages of the game, when Kirby came to the front. Zibbard made a high run of 14, while Kirby's highest was 15. This victory gives Kirby three straight wins, and he has not as yet met defeat in this tournament. Tonight George Barton will play Max Bache.

Klinger Defeats Coleman.

Jacob Klinger defeated Hal Coleman at Daly's Academy last night in the Class A tournament of the A. A. B. A. by the count of 300 to 233. Klinger made a high run of 51 and averaged 10 10-29. Coleman's highest was 29 and he averaged 8 11-28. Tonight Klinger will oppose F. W. Coar. This game will be for the leadership in the tournament, each man having won three games and lost one.

MINORS SPLIT WITH THE MAJOR LEAGUES

Relations Severed, and Each Body Will Conduct Affairs Independently Hereafter.

The major and the minor leagues came to the parting of the ways, at the Hotel Biltmore last night, when the national agreement in operation since 1903 was abrogated by mutual consent. Hereafter the minor leagues will conduct their own business in their own way and the whole minor league field will be an open market of ball players from which the major leagues can buy their talent as they like.

When the minor league committee, made up of Al Tearney of the Three-I League, Ed Hanlon of Sioux City, Acting President of the Western League; Joe Tinker of Columbus, and John H. Farrell, Secretary of the National Association, came before the joint meeting of the major leagues, their several demands were rejected by the majors. The minors were informed that the majors could not and would not consent to the elimination of the draft or grant representation on the National Commission.

Al Tearney, the spokesman for the minors, then said: "There is nothing that would make us so happy as to be able to go along by ourselves in our own way."

The major leagues immediately took Mr. Tearney up on his proposition and within a few hours the two leading bodies in baseball were separated. The details of the split have not yet been worked out, but each agrees to honor the other's territorial rights, contracts and reservations of players.

The outcome of the big baseball conference came as a big surprise to all the baseball men, but the minor leaguers, representing ten leagues from all parts of the country, seemed to be happy over the result. All liabilities now pending before the National Commission relating to minor league affairs will have to be settled before the new conditions can go into effect.

Just what will happen when there is a dispute over a purchased player is not known, but baseball men believe that some sort of board of settlement will have to be formed to take care of disputes. These details will be worked out by the minors at another session today.

How the minor leagues will work out next season as a separate organization is a problem. It is certain that all the best minor league ball players who are now free agents will flock to the major leagues, where they can get more money than the minors can afford to pay. The great amount of revenue which the majors turned over each year for drafted players will make a big hole in the minor league resources, but they figure that they can make this up by making sales of players on their own terms.

The minors and majors separated on the best of terms. Chairman Herrmann, in bidding the minors good-bye, said that the major leagues were always ready to do everything in their power to aid the smaller organizations.

ERASMUS SWIMMERS WIN.

Two Records Lowered in P. S. A. L. Championship Meet.

Swimmers of the Erasmus Hall High School, competing in the indoor swimming championships of the Public School Athletic League, last night sent two records by the boards when they lowered the best previous records for the 220-yard swim and the 880-foot relay in the City College pool. It was the second time this week that Clarence Ross, the sensational Brooklyn schoolboy, had bettered the previous record. Ross covered the distance in 2 minutes and 39 seconds, which is 6 4-5 seconds faster than the mark made by Leo Giebel of Stuyvesant in 1916. Erasmus Hall's time for the relay was 2 minutes and 42 seconds. This time was 5 seconds better than the record time, which was made by the Erasmus Hall team in last year's championships.

Erasmus beat out Stuyvesant for team honors by a point, winning the meet with 23 points. Stuyvesant followed close with 22 points. De Witt Clinton first team was third with 17 points; their second team fourth with 2 points, and Boys' High School brought up the rear with a lone tally.

William Eberhard of Stuyvesant High School was the individual star of the meet, winning first honors in both the 50 and the 100-yard swims.

P., at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn. The score was 150 to 83. Boyd completed his string in thirty-three innings, for an average of 4 18-33. YALE SQUASH TEAM DEFEATS HARVARD

Princeton Also Triumphs Over Columbia in Metropolitan Championship Tournament.

Yale Club's squash tennis team overwhelmed the Harvard Club representatives by 5 matches to 0, and the Princeton Squash Club players defeated the Columbia Club quintet, 4 matches to 1, in yesterday's play of the metropolitan squash tennis team championship tournament. The matches were decided at the Yale Club and Princeton Squash Club.

The Yale Club victory was well earned. Two of the matches went to three games, and in a third strong Crimson opposition was encountered which necessitated some sterling play on the part of the Eli representative. H. R. Carhart gained the hardest victory for the Yale contingent. He dropped his first game to Arthur Lockett, Harvard Club, by 18-17. Carhart's form improved in the second and third games, and he took both with scores of 15-4 and 15-9.

Another three-game decision was furnished in the match between Donald McKay, Yale Club, and F. H. Davis, Harvard Club. McKay won after an interesting competition by 15-6, 15-17, 15-2. In the match between D. S. Baker, Yale Club, and D. L. Phelps, Harvard Club, the first game was carried to extra sessions through good rallies by both principals, but finally went to Baker by 18-15. Phelps played in the second game, showed the effects of his previous hard encounter, and he was defeated 15-8.

R. L. Strebeigh saved the Columbia Club team from a shut-out in its match against Princeton Squash Club. Strebeigh defeated R. Monks by 15-9, 15-13. One of Princeton Squash Club's successes came through a default by F. M. Kidde, Columbia Club. Fred S. Keeler of Columbia Club forced Harold Tobey to travel at top speed to take their match. The Blue and White player took the first game by 18-14 and dropped the second by 15-8. In the third, however, there were several rallies which made the play close. Tobey's work was steadier, and he earned the match by 15-11.

The summaries:

YALE CLUB VS. HARVARD CLUB.

Donald McKay, Yale Club, defeated F. H. Davis, Harvard Club, 15—9, 15—17, 15—2; D. S. Baker, Yale Club, defeated D. L. Phelps, Harvard Club, 18—15, 15—8; Livingston Platt, Yale Club, defeated J. W. Burden, Harvard Club, 16—7, 15—12; H. R. Carhart, Yale Club, defeated Arthur Lockett, Harvard Club, 17—18, 15—4, 15—9; J. A. Vietor, Yale Club, defeated J. W. Lee, Harvard Club, 15—3, 15—6.

PRINCETON SQUASH CLUB VS. COLUMBIA CLUB.

PILKINGTON LOSES BOUT.

Walker Defeats Champion in Amateur Boxing Tourney.

Archie Walker, who held the metropolitan 108-pound amateur boxing championship title until he outgrew the class, sprung a surprise last night at the tournament of the Crescent A. C. in Brooklyn, when he defeated Charles Pilkington, New York State champion, in a bout at 125 pounds. The former bantamweight class leader earned the judges' award in three rounds. Walker previously had defeated Ray O'Malley of Philadelphia in three rounds, while Pilkington had scored over H. Ramsay of Boston in three rounds.

Other class winners were: 110 pounds, A. J. Devito, unattached; 130 pounds, A. Stanley, Glencoe A. C.; 165 pounds, Sam Lagonia, Bronxdale A. C.; 120 pounds, Sam Sieger, Rutgers Place Gymnasium; 145 pounds, J. Panguay, Boston.

STEINBUGLER WINS AGAIN.

Defeats Briggs in Amateur Billiard Tournament.

Charles J. Steinbugler scored his third victory in the N. A. A. B. P. national Class C 18.2 balk line billiard championship tournament at Lawler Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn yesterday, when he defeated Albert F. J. Briggs in the afternoon session by a score of 150 to 81. Steinbugler's success was scored with comparative ease. The victor completed his string in forty innings for an average of 3 30-40, and had two high runs of 17, with one of 14. Briggs had an average of 2 16-39, with high runs of 15, 14, and 11.

Steinbugler led his rival from the fifth inning to the finish. The winner played brilliantly at times, but there were moments when his form showed a reverse. Briggs was unable to approach his rival in the score, even in Steinbugler's unfavorable lapses.

Briggs was until recently a Sergeant in Uncle Sam's Army. His play showed lack of form, on the whole, but in his runs of 14, 11, and 18 he made many difficult draw and follow shots.

Briggs suffered his second defeat in the evening, when he was outpointed by Sydney Brussel after a hard match. Brussel was forced to extend himself to win by a score of 150 to 111 in thirty-six innings. The winner made a high run of 13, with an average of 4 6-36. Briggs had an average of 3 3-36, with a high run of 12.

THOUSANDS SIGN THEATRE TAX PLEA

Managers Put Their Case Against 20 Per Cent. Impost to Vote of Great Audiences.

BARUCH TO SEE PRESIDENT

Cable Message Sent to Paris and Plea Made for Flood of Telegrams to Washington Leaders.

A nation-wide fight against the proposed increase in the theatrical admission tax from 10 to 20 per cent. was launched by theatrical managers, actors, musicians, and stage hands last night, when speeches against the tax were made from the stage of every legitimate and vaudeville theatre in New York City and in hundreds of playhouses all over the country. In addition, petitions were circulated to be signed by the audiences, protesting to the Congressional Conference Committee against increasing the tax. In many houses, also, the audiences were asked for an audible expression of opinion, and in several instances audiences rose to their feet en masse to thunder their disapproval.

The decision to enlist the theatregoer in the fight against the tax was made at a meeting of the United Managers' Protective Association in the afternoon. In addition to representatives of every branch of the amusement field, except the motion picture interests, there were present at the meeting delegates from the Actors' Equity Association, the American Federation of Musicians, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. It was the sense of the meeting that the placing of the additional tax upon admissions would be tantamount to a death blow to the theatres, and the suggestion was made by William A. Brady that the agency by which the theatre had helped in the various loan drives—that is, four-minute speeches from the stage at every performance—should now be employed in the interests of the theatre and its patrons.

Following the meting a cable dispatch was sent by John L. Golden to Bernard M. Baruch, who is in Paris with President Wilson, requesting that he take the matter up with the President and ask him to communicate his views to the Congressional committee. This message was, in part, as follows:

The United Theatrical Managers urge me to beg you to bring before the President the fact that the Finance Committee threatens to increase the war tax on theatre tickets from 10 to 20 per cent. This means the wiping out of a number of theatrical enterprises, and it will also seriously cripple a profession in which hundreds of millions of dollars and the employment of many thousands of people are at stake. The President and many high officials have frequently shown their regard for the theatre and their appreciation of the patriotic and charitable work it has been doing and will continue to do. The managers are taking the matter up at Washington.

Last night's speeches in the theatres were made, in most instances, by members of the company, while the chorus girls and others assisted the ushers in circulating the petitions. These petitions were addressed to the Senate Committee on Finance and the Ways and Means Committee of the House, and read as follows:

We theatre patrons hereby desire to respectfully make a protest against the proposed legislation whereby the tax on admissions to places of amusement is to be increased from 10 to 20 per cent.

At the Metropolitan Opera House, William J. Guard made an address during the first intermission, and the petition was circulated as in the other houses. There was a general signing of the petition, practically all of the boxholders putting their names to the protest.

By tonight, it is believed, the organization of the campaign will be perfected, and it is expected that every legitimate theatre in the country will have its speaker. Telegrams and letters, according to plans made yesterday, will begin to descend upon the members of the Conference Committee this morning. John L. Golden last night issued an appeal to the public asking that all persons interested in the subject send a telegram or a letter of protest to Senator Cummins of the Senate Finance Committee and to Representative Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee. J. N. Weber, President of the American Federation of Musicians, volunteered to have 5,000 telegrams sent from all parts of the country as the musicians' contribution to the fight.

The Actors' Equity Association, following the meeting in the afternoon, sent the following telegram to Senator Cummins and Representative Kitchin:

The Actors' Equity Association, representing many thousands in the theatrical profession, views with the greatest alarm any increase in the amusement tax. Our people have not recovered yet from the influenza epidemic which ravaged the country and closed all places of amusement, and which now threatens a resurgence. We believe the proposed increase in the tax will defeat its object and will only have the effect of closing down numberless companies, thus denying amusement of a theatrical nature to the smaller towns, and will throw out of employment large numbers of men and women of the theatrical profession, who, we venture to believe, have proved their patriotism during the many months of trial produced by the war.

The meeting of the managers in the afternoon was the best attended of the season, and the occasion marked the first time that the various workers in the theatre—managers, actors, musicians, and back-stage workers—have united in a fight of this sort. The resolution to take action was passed unanimously, and a committee to plan a campaign was appointed.

This consisted of Morris Gest, Chairman; William A. Brady, John L. Golden, Mark A. Luescher, and Arthur Hammerstein, representing the legitimate amusement field; Edward Ziegler of the Metropolitan Opera House; Sam Scribner, representing burlesque; J. J. Murdock of the Keith vaudeville circuit; Frank Gillmore, President of the Actors' Equity Association; Joseph N. Weber, head of the American Federation of Musicians, and Charles C. Shay, President of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. A resolution was passed inviting the motion picture industry to participate in the campaign, inasmuch as motion picture admissions over 30 cents will also be taxed 20 per cent.

All of the men named on the protest committee, with the exception of Mr. Shay, were present at the meeting. Among others who attended were Marc Klaw, President of the Managers' Association; Lee Shubert, Arthur Hopkins, A. H. Woods, Alf Hayman, R. H. Burnside, Oliver Morosco, Sam H. Harris, Lawrence Anhalt, Thomas Broadhurst, and Crosby Gaige.

A telegram was framed to be sent to every prominent actor and actress in the country asking for a personal appeal to the White House to halt the passage of the bill. It is planned by the managers to continue the campaign, both in the theatres and out, until the 20 per cent. tax is either abandoned or irrevocably made into law.

Newsdealer Gets Injunction.

Joseph A. Sultan, a newsdealer of 240 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday obtained from Justice Benedict in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, a temporary injunction against the daily newspapers published in English in Manhattan, with the exception of the New York Tribune, restraining them from refusing to deliver to him their papers unless he sells Hearst papers. In answer, counsel of the newspapers say they are doing nothing illegal and allege that the matter is purely a question of the price to be paid for the newspapers by the dealers.

DRAMA

By John Corbin

"The Climax" Revived.

THE CLIMAX, a comedy in three acts, by Edward Locke, with incidental music by Joseph Carl Breil. At the Comedy.

Luigi Golfanti.................Walter Wilson
Pietro Golfanti.............Effingham Pinto
John Raymond.....................Roy Walling
Adelina Van Hagen............Eleanor Painter

Something has happened in the ten years since "The Climax" was first produced which has made it seem fresher and more vigorous than ever. Perhaps a decade of "the play with a punch" has rendered us all more responsive to a playwright who never once lunges at our solar plexus. There has seldom been a quieter, more evenly human and amusing comedy than this of Edward Locke's. Wellnigh perfect in its craftsmanship—in its development of story and situation, and curtain climax through the medium of character development—it all seems so simple and inevitable that the recognition of its virtuosity comes as an afterthought. Here, certainly, is a play in which the American theatre may take pride.

But there was something more than this in last night's success. Several episodes appear to have been rewritten to good purpose. This was especially the case with the curtain climax of the first act. In a whimsically humorous effort to escape from her two persistent lovers Adelina declares that she will platonically marry her "uncle" and singing master, old Luigi; and she proposes to him in the presence of her swains by means of an operatic love song most unplatonically sung. It is a deliciously modulated passage, in which the old man's embarrassment mounts, to dismay and anger at her unmaidenly advances—and finally melts beneath the wooing of the music and the charm of Adelina's humor until, at the curtain, he embraces her smiling. It is a brilliant comedy passage, charged with the tenderest and the most robust laughter.

But the passage would have missed its full effect without the voice and charm of Eleanor Painter; and these are perhaps the true secret of the effect of rejuvenation in the whole. Even the dramatic culmination of the second act seemed stronger. Finding that her voice has gone and that her career is blighted, as she thinks, for ever, Miss Painter passes from the first incredulous surprise through a period of gradual realization, stunned and motionless, finally mounting to a moment of despair in which she stands with a knife uplifted above her breast.

Scarcely a word is spoken and no cry is uttered. In the whole passage there is not a touch nor a suspicion of hysteria. Yet the effect is intensely dramatic, fundamentally tragic. Miss Painter's method is not yet under full control; there are still little awkwardnesses and faults of emphasis. Yet she does not once miss the effect so intelligently intended.

Walter Wilson plays the old musician, and gives full value to all the phases of its crotchety humor, tenderness, and good sense. It is a really admirable performance. Scarcely less vigorous and amusing is the young Pietro of Effingham Pinto. Not so much can be said of the John Raymond of Roy Walling, which is needlessly Methodistic and lacking in charm. Yet the dramatic values of the part are very ably rendered. Altogether the performance is abundantly worthy of an unusually sympathetic and charming play.

VOTING ON GARMENT STRIKE

Schlesinger, in Letter to Mayor, Asks City's Protection of Workers.

In a letter to Mayor Hylan yesterday, which is published as an advertisement, in this morning's newspapers, Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Garment Workers' Union, said that nothing could avert the coming strike of 35,000 garment workers but agreement by the manufacturers to submit the union demands to a special board of arbitration. The union began polling a strike vote among its members yesterday. Monday, it was said, would probably see definite action.

"Judging by the excitement prevailing among the workers," said Mr. Schlesinger last night, "the vote will be unanimous for a strike." He said a mass meeting, at which Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor will be the principal speaker, will be held in Madison Square Garden on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Schlesinger's letter to Mayor Hylan recited negotiations since Jan. 1 with the Manufacturers' Association, and continued in part as follows:

The Board of Arbitration, under the Chairmanship of Justice Louis D. Brandeis and Judge Julian W. Mack, has on many occasions decided that the employers have the right to discharge any worker for fair, just and reasonable cause, but the board has held that in view of the fact that workers under the protocol had surrendered their legal right to strike as a remedy against abuses of the employers' prerogatives, they are entitled to a substitute for such remedy in the form of a machinery for the speedy adjustment of their complaints against unreasonable and unjust discharges. We are prepared to meet them on either side of the proposition.

You can readily see, Mr. Mayor, that our organization is doing all that is compatible with honor and sincere regard for public interest to avert this strike. May we, therefore, expect, in case all our attempts fail, that you instruct all your departments, particularly the police, that our workers shall have a fair deal and not be molested in legitimate exercise of their rights as citizens?

The letter referred also to the city's relations to its workers under Mayor Gaynor during the cloak strike of 1910, and under Mayor Mitchel during the cloak strike of 1916. In another part of his letter Mr. Schlesinger said that the protocol, which expired on Dec. 31, did not in all respects prove of benefit to the workers.

Complaints, the letter said, which could have been adjusted by the Committee of Immediate Action in five minutes, "dragged along for weeks and sometimes for months."

3,267 TROOPS IN ON BELGIC.

Some New Yorkers of 49th Infantry Back from War.

More New York men who had been fighting in France got home yesterday on the transport Belgic. The vessel had on board 3,267 enlisted men and officers. These included 240 men and 38 officers of the 49th Infantry. The steamer was met down the by a delegation of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome and the Street Cleaning Department Band.

Homer Rodeheaver, Billy Sunday's choirmaser, returned much impressed with the religious spirit of the men. He said he would join Mr. Sunday at Richmond, Va., where he opened a campaign a week ago.

Lieut. Murray K. Guthrie of Minneapolis, of the 13th Aero Squadron, returned with six German airplanes downed to his credit. He received the Croix de Guerre. Another passenger was Sergeant Roosevelt Gamble of South Orange, N. J., a member of the 367th Infantry, who was wounded in the Argonne. His father, Capt. George Gamble, died of wounds received at Toul, and his brother, Robert, was killed at Château-Thierry. "I am the only one left," he said. "After what I have been through I am lucky to be home again."

Many of the other returning soldiers had been wounded or gassed, some only a few hours before the armistice was signed.

LA FOLLETTE SAVED BY VOTE OF 50 TO 21

33 Republicans and 17 Democrats Support Resolution to Drop Disloyalty Charge.

WILLIAMS ASSAILS HIM

Brands St. Paul Utterance as an "Everlasting Lie" and a Slander Upon the Nation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—By a vote of 50 to 21, the Senate today exonerated Senator La Follette of Wisconsin of the charge of disloyalty brought against him, based on his St. Paul speech in September, 1917, in which he declared that the sinking of the Lusitania was not sufficient provocation for the United States to go to war. The vote came upon a resolution offered by Senator Dillingham, Republican, of Vermont, to dismiss the charge as the speech "does not justify any action by the Senate."

Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi in a vigorous speech urged the Senate not to allow Senator La Follette to go "blameless, unscathed, unblemished, and unpunished" for what he declared was a disloyal utterance.

During the speech Senator La Follette sat with his hands on his knees looking at the desk before him and made no reply.

Senator Williams, shaking his fist toward Mr. La Follette, declared he had uttered an "everlasting lie" in saying that the Lusitania was armed, that Americans rode on the ship to protect munitions for Great Britain, and that the war was being fought for the Morgan and other capitalistic interests.

The vote by which the charges, brought before the Committee on Privileges and Elections by the Minnesota Society, were dismissed found 33 Republicans aligned with 17 Democrats in favor, with 20 Democrats and 1 Republican—Smith of Michigan—against. The vote was as follows:

For the Resolution—50.

DEMOCRATS—Ashurst, Bankhead, Beckham, Chamberlain, King, Kirby, Lewis, Martin, (Va.,) Nugent, Phelan, Reed, Shafroth, Smith, (Ga.,) Swanson, Thomas, Vardaman, Wolcott—17.

REPUBLICANS—Borah, Cummins, Curtis, Dillingham, Fernald, France, Frelinghuysen, Gronna, Hale, Johnson, (Cal.,) Jones, (Wash.,) Kellogg, Kenyon, Knox, Lenroot, Lodge, McLean, McNary, Moses, Nelson, New, Norris, Page, Penrose, Poindexter, Smoot, Spencer, Sutherland, Townsend, Wadsworth, Warren, Watson, Weeks—33. Total—50.

Against the Resolution—21.

DEMOCRATS—Culberson, Fletcher, Gay, Henderson, Hollis, Jones, (N. M.,) McKellar, Martin, (Ky.,) Myers, Pittman, Pollock, Pomerene, Ransdell, Saulsbury, Sheppard, Simmons, Smith, (Ariz.,) Trammel, Walsh, Williams—20.

REPUBLICAN—Smith, (Mich.)—1.

When the Dillingham resolution was brought up, Senator Williams took the floor.

"As I read the speech made by the Senator from Wisconsin in St. Paul," he said, "it was a series of false statements which must have been consciously made. I find in this speech a charge that the United States went to war to protect Morgan interests of some sort or other. I find in that speech a charge that we went to war and sacrificed our children that rich Americans might ride on munitioned and armed ships. It is an everlasting lie that these United States went to war to protect any Morgan interests or any capitalistic interests of any sort. It is also an everlasting lie that the people of these United States ever sent their boys to be fed as cannon fodder in Europe in order that American citizens might ride upon munition ships. It is an everlasting lie that the Lusitania was armed or had dangerous explosives aboard and that any law of the United States was ever violated by any American citizen who took passage on the Lusitania. It is an everlasting lie that the 114 American citizens who went to their graves unknelled and unsung upon that memorable day of German barbarity were there to uphold the doctrine of capitalism or of money-making.

"He had the audacity to say that Mr. Bernstorff, as Ambassador from Germany, gave us notice to keep off the ship. Gave us notice—gave us—and who the devil are us? We are the American people under the Providence of God. This miserable Kaiser who has since been dethroned gave us notice through his Ambassador that we might be hurt if we went on this ship and then we were guilty of audacity and folly and insanity because we went on the ship and 114 American citizens did not have cowardice enough to take the German warning and keep off the ship.

"I do not know what the Senator thought. I have begun to believe that he does not think; that if he thought anything at all, he thought that the self-seekers, the sloth-lovers, the peace worshippers, the men and women who were willing to give up everything in the world in order that they might have a nice easy time, would finally control America and that somehow or other he or somebody else advocating that sort of doctrine would come out in front."

Dillingham Explains.

Senator Williams demanded to know of Senator Dillingham, who had brought in the majority report from the committee urging that the charge against Mr. La Follette be dropped, if he intended that the Senate go on record as "condoning the Wisconsin Senator's disloyalty." Mr. Dillingham explained that the committee by a nonpartisan vote of 9 to 2 had decided there was nothing upon which to base the charge, this after having consulted with the Department of Justice. The department, Mr. Dillingham said, had advised that the speech must be read in its entirety and not with reference to the particular phrases Mr. Williams had picked out.

After the vote had been taken, Senator La Follette's face broke into an expansive smile. Various Senators upon the Republican side, including Mr. Lodge, going past his desk immediately afterward, paused to talk with him. The Wisconsin Senator sat in his seat, smiling amiably.

CLARIETTE ANTHONY WEDS.

Artist Marries Capt. Howard C. Okie After Five Days' Acquaintance.

Miss Clariette Anthony, artist and screen actress, was married on Wednesday to Captain Howard C. Okie, 14th Cavalry, U. S. A., at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Their marriage followed an acquaintance of five days.

Last week Captain Okie was being shown through the Famous Players Lasky Studio where Miss Anthony was posing in a new production, and their introduction followed.

The bride is a daughter of Jean Anthony, an artist of Antwerp, and is a direct descendant of Rubens. When she fled to England from Belgium after the German invasion with her family many valuable paintings were placed in her charge.

Captain Okie enlisted in the British Army in 1914 and served two years in France. When this country entered the war he returned and attended the Plattsburg camp, where he won his commission, and became at 21 the youngest Captain in the Regular Army.

MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

Philharmonic Plays.

Four big plain-clothes men stood in the rear of Carnegie Hall auditorium last night and carefully listened to the performance of "Forest Murmurs" from Wagner's "Siegfried" by the Philharmonic Orchestra. At the close of the idyllic rapture one of the giants in bulk, as huge as Fafner, turned to a companion and remarked: "It's a wonder they don't throw a bomb at that fellow." He meant Richard Wagner, not Conductor Josef Stransky. Then the quartet left the hall. The trouble began with a warning telephoned to Manager Leifels that if Wagner was played at this concert he must expect a demonstration. A well-known patriotic organization was said to have made the threat. Hence the presence of the officials. The only demonstration made was one in honor of the Russian composer, Serge Rachmaninoff, after his symphonic poem, "The Isle of the Dead" had been delivered with telling effect by the orchestra. He sat in an end box on the first tier and twice he was compelled to acknowledge tumultuous applause. In another box across the house sat Mme. Margaret Matzenauer of the opera, in company with Mrs. Stransky.

The program contained no novelty. Beethoven's Second Symphony and three excerpts from "Siegfried," "Tristan and Isolde," and "Tannhäuser," and the Rachmaninoff poem. The playing throughout the evening was brilliant, especially in the largely molded poem, which long as it is contains some moments of poignant pathos. The reading of the Beethoven symphony was clean cut, liberal, rather imaginative, but Mr. Stransky outdid himself in the tone poem of the distinguished Russian.

Fonariova in Russian Songs.

Genia Fonariova sang some Russian music by Glinka, Rachmaninoff, Moussorgsky, Tcherepnin, and Rimsky-Korsakoff at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon and thus saved a program that began rather dubiously. She is a handsome Russian girl, with a musical temperament, marked dramatic aptitude, and fervid manner. She is said to have sung in opera. But the placement of her voice is so faulty that her naturally sonorous contralto, with a mezzo-soprano range does not always show to the best advantage. At times it is cavernous in the lower notes, colorless in the middle, and strident in the upper. It sounds as if it had been "pulled up," and with doubtful results, among which are deviation from pitch and an undue forcing. All of which is regrettable, as the young singer is endowed with the true interpretative power. In such an aria as Gluck's "Divinités du Styx" she was at sea, also handicapped by nervousness.

She sang in Italian, French, English, but in her beautiful native tongue she was another person, eloquent, dramatic, patriotic. The two Moussorgsky lyrics proved not only original, but thrilling. Mme. Fonariova could accomplish much more with a freer tonal emission. She is bound to hurt her voice if she persists in forcing it as she did yesterday. Kurt Schindler was at the piano and his accompaniments were as ever discriminating. There was present a friendly audience.

Richard M. Hurd Explains.

Richard M. Hurd, of the American Defense Society, said last night that earlier in the evening he had telephoned several of the Directors of the Philharmonic Society of New York, declaring his conviction that Wagner was inappropriate on the society's program.

"I informed the Directors," said Mr. Hurd at his home, 12 East Sixty-eighth Street, "that many people had informed me that they did not wish to listen to German music. I did not specifically ask them to take Wagner off tonight's program, but I did present the fact that not all of the audience probably would enjoy the German music."

JULIA CULP TO SING HERE.

Berlin Paper Views German's Engagement as an Interesting Sign.

BERLIN, Jan. 14, (By Wireless.)—The Lokal-Anzeiger announces that the German singer, Julia Culp, has just been offered an engagement in New York next season, in a telegram reaching here via Holland. The Lokal-Anzeiger counts this among the interesting signs of the time.

Julia Culp first sang here on Jan. 10, 1913, and made tours annually thereafter till America entered the war. Though born in Holland, she is married to a German and makes her home in Berlin. She sang with symphony orchestras throughout America, and gave recitals of German "Lieder," especially of Brahms, Richard Strauss, and Hugo Wolf.

Harriette Cady Plays New Works.

Harriette Cady, whose annual piano matinée yesterday at the Princess was like a season's showing by the independent painters, all new works, some ultramodern styles, made a record probably in playing not one hackneyed piece in sixteen numbers. Only three were marked "first time," her own paraphrase of a "Cossack Folksong," and also "Shulbrede," by Sir Hubert Parry, and "Fragrance," by Frank Bridge. In a League of Nations order, the pianist grouped Mrs. Beach and MacDowell, Cyril Scott, then Debussy, Saint-Saëns, and Isidor Philipp; Chopin-Sgambati, Stojowski, Paderewski—the "Air and Variations"—Borodine's "Au Couvent," a Stravinsky étude, and another by Arensky from the Chinese. Miss Cady's interpretations, sincere, refined, were as the firm, continuing frame in which an artist exhibits and tries out many canvases.

Puccini's Little Operas Sung Again.

Puccini's "Il Tabarro," "Suor Angelica," and "Gianni Schicchi," which have just had a royal welcome in Italy, following their world première in New York, were sung for the fourth time to a large audience at the Metropolitan last evening. Mmes. Farrar, Easton, Muzio, and Messrs. Crimi, Montesanto, and De Luca reappeared, and Mr. Moranzoni conducted.

French Gift to Mrs. Wilson.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The French Maritime League has presented to Mrs. Wilson a painting symbolical of the union of the United States and France. The painting represents Count de Grasse's frigates sailing for the west in 1781 and an American dreadnought sailing to Europe in 1917.

LABOR'S AMERICAN PROGRAM.

The American Federation of Labor has presented to the Senate Committee on Labor a platform for reconstruction which is an argument rather than an appeal, and which is expressed with such restraint that dissent on any of the many contentious points raised should be equally moderate. Labor itself cannot expect that there should be no dissent. Of eighteen points first place is given to insistence that wages should not be reduced, in many cases should be raised, and conditions of employment bettered. "The American standard of life must be maintained and improved." Who ever proposed that it should be reduced? Capital certainly wants labor to be strong and efficient, and would prefer to pay high wages. High wages mean high prices, and a high standard of life for capital as well as for labor. Labor may regard the point which it most stresses and emphasizes as unanimously approved, subject only to economic considerations which apply to labor and capital alike, regardless of other statutes or labor edicts.

Wages and prices should be as high as the traffic will bear, and can be no higher. Hours should be as short as practicable on the same standard, and can be no shorter. Capital and labor alike want and need to keep shops open for selfish as well as humane considerations. When shops limit wages and profits stop, in New York as well as Berlin or Petrograd, and shops must shut if shortening hours reduces product, or raising wages stops the sale of the product. Labor sees the point, but still has the idea that wages can be forced from capital. There is not wealth enough in the world to keep that plan going long. Just as truly and surely as farmers depend upon yearly crops labor must depend upon the operation of the factories. The National Industrial Conference Board has just reported that the adoption of a fifty-four-hour week reduced production in every factory employing over 750 hands, and increased production with moderate and various results only in the case of small and relatively inefficient factories. Labor's proposal on this point is acceptable in principle, but labor cannot evade the economic objections in detail.

Labor's contention that labor should be allowed to organize and bargain collectively is almost unanimously admitted and in operation. It is no objection to unionism that "legitimate" activities are asserted. But labor itself must see the distinction between allowing labor freely to organize and do whatever is lawful and enacting that whatever unions do is lawful. The position of unionism would be stronger if it did not so readily approve unlawful and inhumane acts because done by unions or ratified when done without authority. There is an obnoxious partisanship of labor as well as of capital, and it is the interest of both to restrain whatever discredits either.

Labor's proposal for the extension of farmer proprietorship and housing improvement by Government assistance has been anticipated. Land workers have only to use the farm loan law to enlarge their class with the approval of all. Idle land is an economic fault while there are hungry workers ready to till the soil. The men of the Federation would prevent "the extension of the tenant class" on farms. Are they aware that all over the country tenant farmers, taking advantage of the Loan act, are becoming farm owners? All want farmers to be prosperous and crops good. But the proposal for the progressive increase of taxes on incomes and land should be kept from conflict with the following proposal that taxation should rest lightly on constructive enterprise. There is need for that. In this State $75,000,000 taxes annually have been placed on active capital, with tendency toward making capital shrink from activity just as excessive taxes will discourage farm work. Land cannot be increased as capital may be, and the single land tax has elements of danger. But the idea of fostering the farmer class is not opposed. Regret, however, must be expressed at labor's adoption of the proposal for inheritance taxes to an extent which some design to abolish inheritance. The feudal idea that the property of the deceased belongs to the sovereign, and that the family succeeds by his grace, is not consistent with the modern idea that the State is a creation of the people, for their benefit, and has no divine rights or prerogatives in property. Natural heirs take from their ancestors or relatives, not from the State. Heirs get their right by being born, not by being citizens. "The inheritance tax shows on its face that it is a thief," said America's greatest democrat. The inheritance tax is right for revenue, like other revenue taxes, but it is not generally admitted that it should be punitive on the heirs or confiscatory.

Labor's proposal of Government ownership of utilities and Government operation of them to supply their product "at cost" is not distinctively a labor project. Dissent, therefore, is not antagonism to labor. The proposal that corporations should be admitted to interstate commerce by license is anticipated, there being an official recommendation to that effect now pending. That proposal is more for the hampering of capital than for the favor of labor. It is a proposal to substitute bureaucracy, junkerism, for the freedom of all citizenship to all activities such as labor claims for itself. Interstate commerce is "legitimate." The proposal to license it is a proposal to make it illegitimate for all but the licensed. Where methods of control are already excessive and the practice of regulation is little short of destructive there can be no need of a license system except by those with antagonism to capital such as labor resents toward itself, and such as would be as harmful to labor as to capital. Idle capital employs no labor any more than idle land or closed shops.

ARTICLE EIGHTEEN.

It was poetically and politically just that the State of Mr. BRYAN should have been the decisive thirty-sixth to ratify yesterday the prohibition amendment. Missouri of his dearest foe, Speaker CLARK, was as willing but not quite so quick. Thus Jan. 16, 1919, becomes memorable as the Ratification or Prohibition Day.

Article XVIII. takes its place in the Constitution. In a year from yesterday the United States will be Dry constitutionally as by Act of Congress it is to be after June 30 next indefinitely.

With what dizzying swiftness have the Legislatures competed with one another in the race to add this Article to the Constitution! Has this contagion or consensus of emotion and politics been accompanied with an equal conviction among the people, a corresponding unanimity of public opinion? Have the people had much to say about it?

Prohibition is not yet a fact. The imperfection of human nature may to some extent interfere with its becoming a general and absolute fact in the United States. But the wet bad days are almost over. It is for the country and many belated and surprised persons in it to realize that legal, to be succeeded by the constitutional, Federal prohibition will soon be in effect. Even at Washington, Congress, which started the engine of virtue, with perhaps none too eager hope that it wouldn't run off the track, is blind to the new light. Senate and House conferees were agreeing about the rates on distilled and divers other spirits and intoxicants just before the news from Nebraska came.

Taxes are trifles if the ameliorations, moral, physical, social, economic, foreseen by the advocates of prohibition come to pass. Only grumolers and friends of the saloon will note that the $1,137,000,000 which the House originally designed to raise from beverages has been cut to $450,000,000. Eventually all the liquor revenue is to be wiped out, like the business. But what are base matters of taxation, business, unemployment, to the triumph of a theory? May the amendment surprise its foes, surpass the hopes of its enthusiasts, and the nation be as easy to rehabilitate and improve as Article XVIII. was to sweep through the Legislatures!

A REBUKE TO THE LAWLESS.

Mayor HYLAN'S letter to ERNEST BOHM, Secretary of the Central Federated Union, who had protested against the employment of policemen to keep the municipal ferries in operation during the harbor strike, is a model worthy of the study and adoption of civil authority everywhere when challenged by the spokesmen of lawless agitation and Bolshevism. The employés of the city who operate the municipal ferries were not concerned in the controversy between the private boat owners of the harbor and their men. Hours and wages of the men who run the ferryboats are established by law, they must conform to the prevailing rate. They had no quarrel with the city as to hours or wages. But they were ordered out on sympathy strike to make it easier for the employés in private service to win their fight.

In his letter to Secretary BOHM, Mayor HYLAN points out that the city used the police to continue the operation of the boats in order that it might prevent the starvation of wounded soldiers and sailors in hospitals on Staten Island and babies and children and the population in general, "who were to be sacrificed, if "necessary, as a cold-blooded piece of "strategy, as a part of the fighting "plan of certain labor leaders." The Mayor points out that, enjoying the benefit of the civil service law, city employés are a favored class, protected in their wages, their hours, and their conditions of employment. Captain MAHER, representing the Marine Workers, had been obdurate to the appeal of mercy for starving soldiers and babies; he insisted that the greater the hardship inflicted "the better our chance of winning." The Mayor very properly describes this as a "wicked, outrageous, cruel, and inhuman policy." He quotes Mr. MAHER'S answer to the statement of the Corporation Counsel calling attention to the position of ferry employés under the civil service law. Said Mr. MAHER:

> I have no regard for the civil service law; the laws are of no use to workingmen anyhow; the only laws that are any good are those passed by the unions; they can be enforced by the unions if the unions are strong enough, and can be repealed by the unions if necessary without being subject to any interpretation by the courts.

These are doctrines of late made familiar in Petrograd, they have failed of application in Berlin. Mayor HYLAN is resolved that they shall not be successfully applied here. He reminds Mr. BOHM that when the spokesmen of the unions seek to have organized labor in this country "regarded as the disciples of LENINE "and TROTZKY," they are not only defiant of the laws of the land but willing to sacrifice the lives of the people and of the helpless in order to win a labor dispute. These brutal methods, he insists, "can never win "any real substantial victory for the "cause of organized labor any more "than it did for the Kaiser." There is a pretty solemn warning for persons of Mr. MAHER'S reckless temper in this passage of the Mayor's letter:

> When Mr. MAHER reckoned to use his great power to cut off the supplies of the sick and helpless of this community and commanded the city employés to back him up, he not only violated the law of humanity, but by attempting to terrorize the city employés into violating their obligations to all the public Mr. MAHER and these employés ran foul of the penal law regarding conspiracies against the public health.

This is the spirit which should prompt the action of civil authority everywhere when lawless acts are perpetrated or threatened by agitators who have assumed the right to make and repeal the laws. And the time to show that spirit is the moment when Bolshevism raises its head, not after it has begun its work.

A CHICAGO IDYL.

It would be easy to enumerate nine or ninety-nine reasons why Mr. JAMES R. MANN shouldn't be the Republican candidate for Speaker of the next House of Representatives. Least and last among them would be his horrendous conduct or want of conduct in accepting from a Chicago packer one steak or roast, valued at $3.50, and one twelve-year-old horse which cost $150 in its lusty youth. That Mr. MANN'S midst was so reminiscent of the flavor of that steak or roast ten years afterward; that Mr. MANN'S heart beat warmly in 1917 for the packer who gave him a working "plug" which, with polite facetiousness, he described in 1907 as "a magnificent animal"; that his words, actions, or votes, general or particular, in regard to the packing industry were determined or affected by that minimitude of unbought steer and horse—only those who judge gladly to the baser end will believe that.

Mr. MANN should have had a more sensitive delicacy, but Mr. MANN, who has many qualities that fit him to be a useful legislator, who has been a useful legislator in many ways by dint of close attention to public business, and long experience in it, belongs to rather a rude type of the urban canny politician. He is often narrow and petty. He sees things before his nose, and in his district, but has no ample view of great principles and causes. Even if his standards are not of the highest, the suggestion that he swapped his influence on certain legislation in consideration of one steak or one roast and a horse of all work, is too much for the most gluttonous partisan credulity to gulp down. A good enough Morgan, however.

What the anecdote teaches us is that Mr. MANN has ceased to be formidable as a candidate and is now become ridiculous or impossible. This story is the last straw on the Elephant's back.

Yet the eclogue, the pastoral, the essay on gardening, or whatever Mr. MANN'S apologia should be called, has a loveliness not always associated with country life in Cook County. He looks back to himself as a kindly Adam, gardener of a large garden, growing things for joy and giving them away. The "magnificent animal" was an old horse, a pack, not to say a packing, horse, the remains of a steed, a truck Rosinante. The steak was "a pretty fine steak." A variant tells us that the steak was a roast, "a very good roast." Why, indeed, should the tablets of midriff or memory record old forgotten meals and meats? Why should this silly tale of beef and horse meat have any effect on the gardener's canvass for the Speakership?

Alas, Mr. MANN, so runs the world away. Be pure as snow pudding, yet calumny will bite. One hears the campaign hymn already:

> Can, can,
> The packers' MANN!

It may be foolish, unjust, wicked, but Mr. MANN has dished himself. The best thing he can do is to introduce a universal antitreating amendment to the Constitution. He lets folks treat him to cigars and flowers, he says. Where's the harm? Well, so far as his "boom" or hope for the Speakership is concerned, Mr. MANN had better ask his friends to please omit flowers.

THE EMERGENCY STILL EXISTS.

The selective service law was "an "act to authorize the President to in"crease temporarily the military es"tablishment of the United States," including the Regular Army and the National Guard, as well as the force to be raised by drafting men of military age that came to be known as the National Army. The forces so created and organized were to serve during the "existing emergency," a description that occurs here and there in the selective service law approved May 18, 1917. It could have only one meaning, the duration of the war from that date until the President issued a proclamation of peace with the Central Powers and their allies. Yet there seems to be an impression, which is not confined to our civil population, that the armistice of Nov. 11, 1918, marked the end of the war.

Members of Congress frequently call at the War Department to inquire when their home divisions are coming back, and they complain if Secretary BAKER or General MARCH tells them that General PERSHING has not placed the troops they are interested in on the priority list. General SHANKS in a public statement has deplored the tendency of officers, not regulars, it need hardly be said, to absent themselves from their commands for days at a time when units land at this port. Apparently these careless officers take the view that there is no longer an "existing emergency." The effect of their behavior upon the men is subversive of discipline, and naturally the men are impatient under the military restraint that is so necessary until they can be discharged from the service.

Officially the war still continues. Members of Congress may protest that they understand that to be the case, but when they bombard the War Department with their importunities they foment a spirit of dissatisfaction with the Government for retaining troops in France; also these persistent members of Congress and their abettors encourage the illogical belief that the "existing emergency" really ended when the armistice was signed. The impatience of the troops and the murmuring of their families are not peculiar to the American people. In England soldiers have assembled in London to make "demonstrations" of protest, and they have not hesitated to object to being sent back to France for active duty. The citizen armies are inclined to decide for themselves whether the war is ended and their services are still needed. Yet it may be necessary to occupy districts in Germany to preserve order because stable governments have not been established; and, in view of the new conditions added to the armistice terms in the last forty-eight hours, there may follow armed resistance to the will of the United States and its allies.

Peace is so far from being assured that the Conference may sit for months before it is consummated and proclaimed. Until then the "emergency" of the selective service law will continue. As Commander in Chief of the Army, President WILSON has authority to order units home, but it is obvious that he should not interfere with the authority of General PERSHING to retain the troops he wants in France and to dispense with those he can spare. Thousands of soldiers are now being sent home, and he is adding contingents to his priority list every day. Home-returning regiments will be demobilized as expeditiously as possible. Congress may call upon the War Department for information about its plans and their execution, but members of Congress are not within their rights when they demand preference for local troops. The war, that is to say, the emergency" is not over. It will be time enough to complain that demobilization is going slowly and that injustice has been done this unit or that when the President's peace proclamation signals the end of the great war and the beginning of a permanent peace.

TROUBLES OF DEMOCRATIC RUSSIA.

The difficulties of organizing opposition to Bolshevism are illuminatingly displayed by Admiral KOLCHAK'S statement to an Associated Press correspondent at Omsk. KOLCHAK was chosen Supreme Governor of the Omsk Government by a decision of the Cabinet which had hitherto had charge of the affairs of that organization, but says that his power is only temporary and that he is leaving civil affairs entirely to his colleagues. His appointment was necessary, he says, because the military situation demanded that power be put into the hands of one man, and because some of the members of the directorate were partisan and used their influence to disorganize the army. That is to say, in a group of five men which represented the soundest concentration of democratic influence in Russia, men who realized better than anybody else the necessity of standing together for overthrowing the Bolsheviki before attempting to get anything else done, there were some who insisted on putting their own political conception to the forefront even if they had to demoralize the strongest anti-Bolshevist army to do it.

KOLCHAK says that the two great needs are the creation of an army and the suppression of Bolshevism; he wants an all-Russian election for a new Constituent Assembly (many persons elected to the old one have presumably been massacred) as soon as it is feasible, and then he wants to retire. From this distance it appears that his appointment to a sort of constitutional dictatorship was the best thing that could have been done in the circumstances; but suspicion was unavoidable, and apparently SEMENOFF and HORVATH are still unwilling to co-operate with KOLCHAK. The situation is not unlike that on the other frontier of Bolshevism, where Poles and Ukrainians are at war, Poles and Lithuanians at odds, and Polish parties quarreling among themselves while the Bolsheviki go marching on.

It is another instance of the ease with which a fanatical and united minority can make headway against a leaderless and uncertain majority. A faction fighting for Bolshevist principles and by Bolshevist methods has as great an advantage over democracy as did the German Empire; and democracy can beat the one, as it beat the other, only by getting together.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Arguments Against Publicity.

Before reaching a final decision with regard to keeping the proceedings of the Peace Conference secret or making them public, the eminent statesmen with whom the settlement of the question rests should consider carefully the two sides which it, like most other questions, possesses. They already have given thought, evidently, as well they might, to the dangers and inconveniences incidental to the discussion of delicate problems, involving large and adverse interests, in the presence of more or less irresponsible listeners, gathered about in great numbers and most of them eager to give advice and exert pressure.

That, undoubtedly, is about the best way there is to make each of the several groups of delegates stick obstinately to extreme demands from which otherwise it could be persuaded to recede in order that harmony might be attained. It is the way, also, to turn divergent views still further apart and to change disagreements into settled animosities. That is the lesson of universal human experience, and it is no wonder, therefore, that among the first actions of the conference was to decide that during the period of discussion nothing should be given out except a single statement of the conclusions reached, and that the delegates should do no talking with outsiders while the deliberations are in progress.

Action is not proved wise, however, by the fact that some of its consequences are desirable or by the fact that opposite action would have some consequences that are undesirable.

Secrecy Has Its Penalties.

What the statesmen seemingly forget is that mystery invites investigation and that it is the mother of rumors which, in the absence of knowledge, gain the power of truth, especially for evil. Paris is full of professional newsgatherers, all eager to prove their competence in the overcoming of just such difficulties as the decision of the conference has created for them. They are there to write about what goes on in those meetings, and certainly they are going to do it unless they are suppressed by a censorship of a severity which the world is in no mood to tolerate. That they will remain content with the information contained in an official communiqué is to be believed only by very credulous and unsophisticated people.

And the decision of the conference will be far from making it impossible, all the time or even most of the time, for the correspondents to find out what is going on, or to find it out as it goes on. The United States Senate has not succeeded in keeping the secrets of its executive sessions. Indeed, its utter failure to do that is a joke so familiar that it long since ceased to be amusing. There is even less likelihood that the Peace Conference can prevent the drawing aside of the veil with which it has surrounded itself. Every one of its secrets will be known to many men, and always there will be at least one of them so resentful, in his own behalf or that of his country, at the failure of his contentions, as to find a means of making his grievance known.

The dilemma is a puzzling one, and both of its horns are sharp. To land safely between them will be no small achievement.

A Serious Study of Possibilities.

Without having the slightest desire to deepen what so many regard as the encircling gloom of prohibition, to do so seems to be necessary lest intolerable disappointments come upon those persons who are now laying in large stocks of alcoholice as a defense against the days when none can be made or bought. Have these persons read the constitutional amendment as drawn by the subtle foes of the cheering cup? Have they considered its terms with the attention those terms deserve? Let them do so, giving especial thought to the words "transportation of intoxicating liquors."

That phrase, as they will see if they fix their powerful minds on it, forbids any movement whatever of those liquors, and of every one of them anywhere within the country. Now "transportation" presumably means "transportation," and, as it stands quite unqualified, it means every sort and degree of "transportation." The very kindliest of courts could hardly fail to decide that the moving of liquids in any degree intoxicating from one house to another came under the ban. So they who are now filling their cellars with the products of distillation, fermentation, or malting must abandon their treasure if ever they make a change of residence. The alternative is never to move, and, to the typical American, the right to make periodic movings is among his most valued liberties.

But the possibilities of the situation—almost the probabilities of it—are even more appalling than that. Who shall say that it is not "transportation" to carry a bottle from the cellar to the dining room or from the sideboard to the table? Why, the word fits snugly the mere raising of a filled glass to the lips!

Truly pathetic, therefore, are the efforts in mitigation and avoidance now reported as making in so many quarters. At best they will end in life imprisonment, at worst they are a waste of money, considered in relation to the vast contiguity of dry years.

They Know Their Place and Fill It.

Critics of our army chiefs make strange proof of their competence for that task when, as is their constant habit, they speak scornfully of men in high command who send others into battle and themselves remain safely in the rear. Chatter of this kind is nothing less than sickening to anybody with even a rudimentary knowledge of what is the duty of Generals like FOCH and HAIG and PERSHING and many another who has lately been reproached for "taking part in no combat since the war began."

Of course they have not, in the sense these strange persons mean; if they did habitually expose themselves to the hazards of the front line they would instantly be retired to private life, and well would they deserve that disgraceful fate.

But to say that these men have taken part in no combat is equally false and absurd. They have taken part in every one of the battles, and most efficient part of that. As it happens, too, all of them know from long personal experience in other wars just what it is to be under fire, and that is one of several reasons why they planned battles to the perfect satisfaction of all qualified observers not German.

ARTISTS' EXHIBIT IN PARIS.

Americans to Show Work in Museum of the Luxembourg.

By invitation of the French Government an exhibition of the work of living American artists, painters, and sculptors will be held in the Museum of the Luxembourg, Paris, this Spring or early Summer. William A. Coffin, the New York artist, upon the invitation of M. Alfred Cortot, representing the French Government, has formed a committee to select the works to be included in the exhibition and to take charge of the undertaking. With Mr. Coffin, who is President, are Herbert Adams, Vice President; Francis C. Jones, Second Vice President and Treasurer; Ernest T. Rosen, General Secretary, and Chauncey F. Ryder and Jonas Lie, Committee Secretaries, the six forming the Executive Board. The remaining members of the committee, bringing the number to eighteen, are George Bellows, Edwin H. Blashfield, Arthur Crisp, Daniel Chester French, Robert Henri, Max Weber, J. Adler Weir, Irving R. Wiles, and Mahonri Young. The sculptors are represented by Messrs. Adams, French, and Young.

There will be a distinguished list of honorary members of the committee headed by M. Edouard de Billy, Deputy High Commissioner of France and head of the Mission in the absence of M. André Tardieu; Henri Caro-Delvaille, the French artist, residing in New York; Ernest Guy of the French High Commission; Robert W. de Forest, President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art; Theodore Hetzler, President of the Fifth Avenue Bank, who is Treasurer of the committee; Denys Amiel, and Henri Casadesus. Others have been invited, among the number A. Augustus Healy, President of the Brooklyn Museum, but their responses have not yet been received.

In admitting the exhibition to the Luxembourg Galleries the United States receives an honor never previously accorded to any other nation. In the exhibition will be 100 paintings, twenty figurines or small bronzes and busts, reliefs in bronze or marble, and it is probable that a small number of works in black and white will be included. The committee will have three or four corresponding members, professional artists of high standing, in several large cities of the country. Representation in the exhibition will be by invitation only.

A return exhibition of French art is expected to take place next Winter and will be shown not only in New York but in many large cities of the country.

The Kansas Division.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in today's issue on Governor Allen's speech at Topeka induces me to say a "few remarks" as a member of the Kansas division who was to the battle in the forest and who is now returning to his home in Kansas with a wound stripe.

Governor Henry Allen was with the Red Cross, and after some political talks with the soldiers in France he was diplomatically requested to absent himself. He then went to the "Y" and had himself assigned with the boys from our home State.

We certainly had a good lesson of a politician using warfare for self-advancement. Everything done by him was for "home stuff" for his newspaper. The officers catered to him, thinking of his influence, &c. He knew more of strategy and tactics than Foch.

And now he tells our fathers and mothers a lot of trash.

We had a tough time, sure. It was terrible, but it was war, and his stories of horses, &c., are simply imagination.

We of Kansas know him, but it's dead wrong to bring down such charges on a lot of wonderful boys and hard-working officers.

As one on the ground, let me state that Governor Allen has colored his facts and used figures that are ridiculous.

A. B. CULLOM.

New York, Jan. 15, 1919.

TO THE SHIPS.

I see you not as others see,
O gallant warriors of the deep!
For as the waves about you leap
Again the vision comes to me
Of fear-filled nights and weary days—
Strained, tearless hours of agony—
When all along the treacherous way
Lurked hidden foes—the enemy!

I do not see your glittering decks
That stretch today beneath the sun.
I only note each sullen gun
And dream of broken, floating wrecks,
White, upturned faces, and the moan
Of eddying waters as they creep
Where once a splendid ensign shone—
A flag gone down beneath the deep!

I cannot sense your calm, Great Ships,
For one there was that bore my heart!
Yet closed forever are my lips—
I, too, must bear my humble part!
I cannot see you there at rest
Beneath your country's peaceful skies,
For ever, on a mad sea's breast,
A doomed ship looms before my eyes!

LURANA SHELDON.

DEMANDS ARGONNE INQUIRY.

Campbell's Resolution Recites the Charges Affecting 35th Division.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Investigation of conditions during the Argonne fighting is demanded in a resolution offered in the House today by Representative P. H. Campbell of Kansas. His resolution recites that there were 7,000 casualties in the 35th Division, composed of Missouri and Kansas National Guard troops, due to the alleged lack of artillery, airplanes, ammunition, and food, and that 1,200 wounded men were left on the field thirty-six hours without food or medical attention.

Mr. Campbell requests the House to appoint five members to investigate this condition and report. He said, in explanation of his resolution, that he had received the alleged facts upon which he based his resolution from men who had participated in the fight. The 35th Division, he said, in addition to being imperfectly supplied with food and ammunition and not properly backed up with artillery, was without experienced officers at the time of the heaviest conflict.

"Several commanding officers," Mr. Campbell said, "had been withdrawn and placed on the staff, and subordinates were in command during the fight. If the reports that have come to me are at all justified by the facts there should be court-martial proceedings. I am not animated by a desire to expose anybody, but my State is very much exercised by these reports, and I want an investigation to determine the truth or falsity of the charges which are being made as the troops return home."

Mr. Campbell's resolution was referred to the Rules Committee, of which he is ranking Republican member.

TALKS WITH PILOT IN AIR.

Kenly Takes Part in Demonstrating Radio-Land Telephony.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—A conversation was held this morning between Major Gen. William L. Kenly, Director of Military Aeronautics, seated before the ordinary desk telephone in his office, and Lieutenant Lucas of the Air Service, piloting a radio-equipped airplane. This communication involved the use of telephone lines of the Chesapeake & Potomac system, was made at the local radio station at Bolling Field, where apparatus was connected in such manner that speech originating in either system would be automatically transmitted over the other. Besides General Kenly Colonel F. R. Kenney and Colonel C. C. Culver talked with Lieutenant Lucas.

The airplane radio telephone has been in use for more than a year, and air fleets are being commanded by the voice of their commanders at several flying fields in the country. In aviation, communications have been made between the pilot in the air and land lines on the field. The conversation this morning, however, was the first official demonstration of a two-way conversation direct between a person using a line telephone and an aviator in flight.

The great degree of efficiency reached makes it possible for a telephonic conversation to be carried on between New York and San Francisco. By substituting a transcontinental line for General Kenly's branch line, the element of distance is practically eliminated and conversation is made possible between an airplane in flight and any point reached by a good telephone circuit. Thus it becomes a mere matter of detail to have an aviator in the air over Washington in conversation with a man in his office in San Francisco, or with an airplane in flight over San Francisco.

WOULD SETTLE WAR CLAIMS.

Stettinius Urges Senate to Hasten Action on Contracts Made Ahead.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Enactment of legislation authorizing the Secretary of War to immediately settle claims growing out of cancellation of contracts placed in foreign countries for supplies for the American Expeditionary Force was urged before the Senate Military Committee today by Assistant Secretary of War Stettinius. Delay in adjusting these claims is costing the Government "thousands of dollars daily," Mr. Stettinius said.

The Assistant Secretary, who is charged with handling war contracts abroad, was before the committee in connection with consideration of legislation to validate informal war contracts made in the United States. Senators agreed that some action should be taken for settlement of the foreign claims, and said the necessary legislation could be expedited by attaching it as an amendment to the pending War Contract bill.

CROSBY GIVES UP HIS POST

But Will Stay Abroad to Advise Peace Delegates on Finance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Oscar T. Crosby has resigned as special Commissioner of Finance for the United States in Europe. Secretary Glass will accept the resignation soon, but Mr. Crosby intends to remain in Europe to advise the American peace delegation on financial questions.

Mr. Crosby was President of the Interallied Council on Finance and Purchases, which had charge, during the war, of the allocation of American loans to the Allies and the determination of priorities on purchases in this country. With the cessation of hostilities, he is said to have felt that his work there was finished. Previously he had been Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

KEEPS UP FOOD CONTROL.

England's Restrictions to be Governed by Europe's Needs.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—George H. Roberts, the new British Food Controller, said today that the continuance of food control in England would be governed by the needs of Europe as a whole, just as during the war.

"Rationing was more drastic and complete here than in any other allied country," he said. "This was the direct outcome of ever-increasing calls upon British tonnage by the needs of the Allies for munitions, clothing, food, coal, and other materials. The Supreme Food Council is now going to do for the rest of Europe what the Inter-Allied Food Council and the inter-allied executives for wheat, sugar, meat, &c., did during the war for the Allies alone.

"Great Britain, of course, takes her share with the United States, France, and Italy in the necessary financial arrangements. My duties are thus not limited to this country, and, just as England helped to save the Allies in the war, so she will take her part in helping to save Europe from starvation and chaos now that peace has come."

CALLS ROOSEVELT LAST OF SUPERMEN

James M. Beck, at Merchants' Luncheon, Ranks Him with Giants of the Renaissance.

CANAL A NOBLE MONUMENT

Speaker Illustrates His Promptness of Decision with Story of the Kaiser and Venezuela.

James M. Beck, formerly United States Attorney General, at a luncheon of the Merchants' Association at the Hotel Astor yesterday, where Secretary Franklin K. Lane of the Interior spoke on the League of Nations, paid a stirring tribute to Theodore Roosevelt. At the conclusion of Mr. Beck's address a silent toast was drunk to the late President and the last verse of "America" was sung.

"We have met today in the shadow of a great calamity," Mr. Beck said. "The best known and best loved American of this generation has gone. To be the President of the United States no longer insures more than a nominal fame. As President succeeds President, they become merely as Roman Consuls who mark periods of time. But we hazard little in believing that, among the Presidents who will mark distinctive epochs in our history, Theodore Roosevelt will surely be one. If nobility of character alone suffices to insure immortality, we would have no misgivings as to the permanence of his fame.

"It is little to say that Roosevelt was an extraordinary man. In the matter of versatility, he was the last of the supermen. Our complex and highly specialized age makes almost impossible the combination of rare and varied achievement that earlier and simpler ages witnessed. Men marvel at the varied accomplishments of the giants of the Renaissance, of Leonardo da Vinci, Michael Angelo, Erasmus, Francis Bacon, and Shakespeare. In the eighteenth century the race of supermen still existed, and the varied achievements of such men as Franklin, Jefferson, and Hamilton stagger credulity. Of this type was Roosevelt. I know of no man of this generation who can be recalled whose achievements were as varied and whose industry was more amazing. His work was largely in the public service, and, working on the very day of his death, it can truly be said of him that he died in the harness. Few men ever exceeded him in the swiftness, courage, and general accuracy of his decisions. I may illustrate by an incident which is of peculiar interest to the Merchants' Association.

"His swift and courageous action in times of international crises can be illustrated by the fact that when the German Kaiser threatened to take possession of a Venezuelan port and disregarded the protest of this country and declined to arbitrate, President Roosevelt calmly advised the Ambassador that unless within one week the Kaiser agreed to arbitrate, Admiral Dewey and his fleet would sail for the Venezuelan coast; and when, in reply, the Ambassador informed Mr. Roosevelt that the Kaiser nevertheless was unwilling to arbitrate, Roosevelt grimly remarked that, in view of that fact, Admiral Dewey would sail two days sooner than had been contemplated. The Kaiser then agreed to arbitrate, and Roosevelt announced the fact to the public in one of his flashes of sardonic humor by stating in substance that the Kaiser's well-known advocacy of international arbitration had induced him to accept the proposition of the American Government.

"It was this swiftness of decision that enabled President Roosevelt to accomplish one of the greatest of his works, the Panama Canal, and it would be simple justice to his memory if the canal that owed its accomplishment to his masterful mind were hereafter known as the Roosevelt Canal. If so, that would be the noblest monument ever erected to man at any time or at any place.

"This, however, is not a time to discuss his varied achievements. It is enough to recall that his vital message which, with the zeal of a prophet, he voiced for forty years of his career, was of the necessity of a higher light. When he entered public life, he found this nation sunk in a sordid materialism, due to our amazing prosperity as a nation, which had somewhat obscured the great ideals to which the Republic was dedicated. Roosevelt, in the spirit of an ancient prophet, preached the higher life, both for nation and for individual; and while many of his fellow-countrymen differed with him in details and in applications, few ever questioned his sincerity or nobility of purpose.

"I will not say that he is gone; for, in a sense, he will always be with us—certainly with the generation that knew him in the flesh. No race has a richer mythology than the Arthurian Legend. The joyous spirits of the Greek gods and the morose and terrible deities of the Norse mythology bear no comparison with the legendary Christian knight, King Arthur, to whom dishonor was as a wound. According to the legend, King Arthur sleeps at Avalon; but it is said that he will come again and draw his knightly sword, if ever England were in desperate need. Our King Arthur does not sleep. His flaming spirit still leads us on. His masterful influence for true Americanism will be felt for generations to come. The republic is richer for his having lived; it is poorer for his having died."

WORK OF WOMEN'S LEAGUE.

Reports on Canteen and Other Activities Read at Annual Meeting.

In an all-day annual meeting at the Biltmore yesterday the National League for Women's Service reported upon the work its members have done and its continuance for another six months. The league is operating fifty-six service clubs for men in uniform, nine of them in California, which has the largest club, entertaining an average of 65,000 men a month. Twenty thousand women have served several million meals in the canteens during the year.

The Home Economics Division of Chattanooga, Tenn., made a record in food conserving, its members having canned fruits and vegetables to the value of $97,371. The Motor Corps organized in seventy-eight cities, and its greatest work has been done in transporting the returned wounded in ambulances from the ships to the hospitals.

The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning in an address said the women must combat the tendency to slackness which would follow the war. Casper Whitney and Thomas Curtin also spoke. Miss Maude Wetmore, who was re-elected Chairman, paid a tribute to Colonel Roosevelt in opening the meeting. Other officers re-elected were Mrs. Coffin Van Rensselaer, Vice Chairman; Miss Anne Morgan, Treasurer, and Miss Grace Parker, National Commandant.

SMITH AGAIN ACTS ON MILK SITUATION

Governor Says Solution Is Up to Department of Farms and Markets.

ASKS IF INQUIRY WAS MADE

Reported to Despair of Relief Through Commission He Appointed Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Governor Smith today practically called upon the State Department of Farms and Markets for a solution of the acute milk situation in the State. In a letter to the department, the Governor asks for results of any investigation that may have been conducted by the department, a power which was vested in it under the law creating the department. The Governor also asked to be advised when the department proposed to report to the Legislature the results of its investigation, if an inquiry was conducted.

"I find," said Governor Smith this afternoon, "that this matter is really up to the department." In his letter he pointed out that the department is authorized to "investigate and report to the Legislature what plan in the judgment of the council should be established by law for the purpose of securing an ample supply of pure milk in centres of population upon an economic basis of distribution, and to aid in the accomplishment of such purpose within the provisions of the existing law."

The Governor is said to have decided upon this action after becoming convinced that no relief could be hoped for from the commission he appointed in New York City to study the situation.

Discuss Miss Perkins's Appointment.

James P. Holland, President of the State Federation of Labor, called upon Governor Smith today, and, according to the Governor, denied that he had protested the appointment of Miss Frances Perkins of New York to the State Industrial Commission. Asked if he had received any formal protest to Miss Perkins's nomination, the Governor said he had a communication from the Thirty-fourth Street Association of New York, which, however, he did not regard as a protest. The association, he said, looked upon Miss Perkins as having radical ideas on some labor laws, and suggested that the Governor appoint some one else with less pronounced views.

"The communication came, however, after I had sent in the nomination and would not have influenced me if received before I sent in her name."

An indication that the Senate Finance Committee may not confirm Miss Perkins's nomination was made today, when Majority Leader Walters said that if the committee refused confirmation he would explain its action from the floor. Told of this, Governor Smith's only comment was that he did not expect adverse action by the Senate committee.

The Governor announced that he expected to make public the personnel of his Reconstruction Committee on Monday. He looks for organization of the committee early next week and immediate application to its duties. The committee members will choose their own Chairman.

FAILS TO END MILK STRIKE.

Absence of Members Delays Action by Governor's Commission.

Contrary to expectation, the Governor's Milk Commission failed to settle the milk strike yesterday afternoon, the milk inquiry before Chief City Magistrate McAdoo having conflicted with the work of the commission because of the fact that the presence of the Dairymen's League counsel, Bradley Fuller, was required in court, where Albert Manning, Secretary of the Dairymen's League, was a witness. At the close of a four hours' conference Chairman Robert E. Dowling announced that unforeseen circumstances had made necessary another meeting, which will be held in his office at 165 Broadway at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

"The situation is just this," said Mr. Dowling as he left the meeting. "The commission met at 3 o'clock. The Dairymen's League members of the commission, R. D. Cooper and John D. Miller, brought with them Albert Manning, Secretary of the league, and their counsel, Bradley Fuller. Mr. Manning's presence at the hearing before Magistrate McAdoo was requested, and Mr. Fuller said that he, too, would have to attend the inquiry if Mr. Manning went. Isaac A. Van Bomel and Charles A. Weiant, the distributer members of the commission, telephoned that they were delayed, presumably in conference with their own members, and they did not arrive until about 5 o'clock. Mr. Fuller never returned, with the result that no conclusion could be reached in the matter."

While the wrangling over milk prices to the distributer is going on, the milk supply is steadily increasing. Receipts yesterday amounted to 1,501,865 quarts, or 83 per cent. of the normal requirements. This is an increase of 32,821 quarts over the day before. The distributers say that there will be an increase of at least 2 per cent. in the supply today.

When the inquiry before Magistrate McAdoo was resumed in the afternoon, Mr. Manning said that the middleman was standing between the farmer, or dairyman, and the consumer. "There is ample milk if the distributer will only get it to the consumers," he declared. "The producers have the milk for sale, but the distributers won't buy it." Mr. Manning said that, according to reports from consumers, they are not getting enough milk, and are paying 20 cents for two pint bottles.

At the resumption of the hearing yesterday morning, Assistant District Attorney Dooling said that reports had come to him from up-State indicating that acts of lawlessness had been committed in many parts of the State to shut off the supply of pure, fresh milk. He read a score of reports from dairy centres purporting to show methods members of the Dairymen's League used to keep farmers from shipping their milk to this city. He said that at Truxton, N. Y., farmers who were delivering milk to the Sheffield Farms were forced to stop. One man, according to the report, found his milk spilled in his barn.

Sinn Feiners Said to Have Fixed Next Tuesday for Meeting.

DUBLIN, Jan. 16.—The Sinn Feiners have fixed Tuesday for the assembly of an Irish republican parliament.

Only urgent matters will be dealt with in the absence of imprisoned members of the organization.

The Sinn Fein organization at a meeting on Wednesday announced that at a conference of Irish Republican members of the British Parliament on Tuesday the drafts of a declaration of independence and a message to the nations of the world were considered. Both matters were referred with amendments to committees for final revision.

The meeting decided to recommend to the all-Irish conference the sending of Professor de Valera, Arthur Griffiths, and Count Plunkett as Ireland's delegates to the Peace Conference.

EDGE URGES VEHICLE TUBE.

Costs Less Than Harbor Strike, He Writes Gov. Smith.

Governor Edge, at Trenton yesterday, said the failure of New York to arrange to finance its half of the proposed New York-New Jersey vehicular tunnel is the only thing that stands in the way of starting the project. In a letter to Governor Smith he wrote that the harbor strike showed the necessity and importance of the tunnel.

"The recent strike has caused the business men of New York to lose more money than the tunnel would cost to construct," asserted Governor Edge in his letter. "In these days of modern development I cannot conceive how two enterprising and progressive communities like New York and New Jersey can longer permit such a possibility with its attendant results.

"New Jersey has passed the necessary legislation to finance one-half of such a tunnel. Can we not depend upon your good offices to use your best efforts to endeavor to prevail upon your Legislature now in session to take the necessary action to make possible this much-needed improvement? You have a commission thoroughly interested in the work, and, of course, the resources to easily provide for the improvement; but New Jersey can now only await your action in the matter."

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Governor Smith said today that the letter from Governor Edge of New Jersey, suggesting that he recommend legislation to provide for the construction of a vehicular tunnel between New York and New Jersey, had not been called to his attention.

He had previously heard from Governor Edge in regard to the proposal, and he explained that General George W. Goethals, constructor of the Panama Canal, had prepared plans for a tunnel between the two States, the estimated cost of which would be $12,000,000.

It had been suggested that the Federal Government pay half the expense of construction, the balance to be divided between New York and New Jersey. The United States Senate rejected the proposition.

The Governor said he had talked the matter over with Majority Leader Walters of the Senate and Speaker Sweet of the Assembly, and that there was a belief that the Federal Government might yet be induced to assist in the project.

He added that he did not care to commit himself to any definite program until the question of State revenues had been settled and other needs of the State met, including the requirements of the State hospitals, which are much overcrowded.

HOLD NAVAL OFFICER ON CHARGE OF GRAFT

Young Man Alleged to Have Taken Money to Aid in Promotion of a Reserve Officer.

INQUIRY STILL UNDER WAY

Name of the Accused Unknown to Daniels, on Whose Order Investigation Was Begun.

A young naval officer on the staff of the Third Naval District is under arrest, charged with accepting money in connection with a promotion sought by an officer in the Naval Reserve. Details were refused at the headquarters of the Third Naval District, 280 Broadway, but when asked last night, Rear Admiral Usher confirmed the report.

The investigation had not been completed, Rear Admiral Usher said, and an effort was being made to determine the scope of the activities of the officer involved. Enough evidence had been obtained, however, to justify the arrest of one officer. Admiral Usher added that a report of the investigation would be sent to Washington as soon as completed, and that information would have to come from the Secretary of the Navy.

It is understood that the officer has not been court-martialed, these proceedings awaiting the result of the investigation. There are several branches in the personnel division of the Third Naval District.

DANIELS ORDERED INQUIRY.

Sent Officer, with Power to Make Arrest, to Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels said tonight that he had not yet been notified of the arrest of an officer in the Third Naval District for an alleged acceptance of a bribe, but confirmed the fact that an investigation of alleged selling of promotions had been instituted under his orders at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and that an officer had been sent from Washington with full authority to order the arrest, if justified by the investigation.

Secretary Daniels was unable to furnish the name of the officer arrested because it had not been reported to him. He said he was sorry the matter had come out at this time, but explained that this regret was based merely on his belief that the investigation could have been better conducted had there been no publicity.

"I wanted to get at the bottom of this matter," said Mr. Daniels, "and was afraid that if anything were published in advance that some one, who might be involved, might get wind of it, and the investigation might be partially balked. The facts of the matter, so far as I am able to discuss them tonight, are that a report reached me that a young officer had taken money in connection with examinations for promotions. It did not affect promotions in the regular Navy, but the Naval Reserves service. One of the allegations was that the officer had taken money to make a report that some one had passed an examination when he had not.

"When this matter was brought to my attention I sent an officer to New York clothed with full power to go to the bottom of the matter. This officer was a member of the Judge Advocate General's branch of the service. He has communicated with me since his arrival there that there seemed to be no foundation for the allegations. I empowered this officer of the Judge Advocate General's Department to make any arrests that seemed necessary in the case, but I have been notified of no arrest yet."

UNCOVER GERMAN STORES.

Americans Find 150 Field Guns and $500,000 Worth of Leather.

COBLENZ, Jan. 14, (Associated Press.)—Treasured German war material continues to be revealed as American troops search the vast warehouse area in Coblenz and its vicinity. Officers found more than 150 guns of .77 calibre and leather worth half a million dollars today. The guns and leather come into the possession of the Americans as abandoned material under the terms of the armistice. The cannon are virtually all as good as new, having apparently been repaired during the last few months of the war.

Since the Americans have arrived, the warehouses have all been guarded by troops, but the chain of storage places in the region of Coblenz is so extensive that the Americans have not yet completed their investigation as to what material is hidden. All military stores, food, munitions, and equipment belonging to the German Army on Nov. 11, and which were not removed during the period fixed by the armistice are forfeited under the terms of that agreement.

Twenty German girls who were engaged in sweeping streets at Andernach, near here, have been arrested, charged with a violation of General Pershing's order forbidding them to talk with American soldiers. These arrests have served to emphasize the determination of the American command not to permit fraternization in the occupied regions. Approximately the same number have been found guilty of violating the order, and have been deported to points within the German lines.

HINTS AT GERMAN MONEY IN STRIKE

Boat Owners' Counsel Finally Withdraws Insinuation Against Workers.

ALL BOOKS ARE CALLED FOR

Employers and Unions Ordered to Produce Their Records Before War Labor Board.

The hint by counsel for the boat owners' associations that the unions comprising the 16,000 marine workers, who tied up all harbor traffic by their strike last week had received "money from German sources" caused a series of colloquies at the hearing of the sub-committee of the National War Labor Board in the Board of Estimate Room at City Hall yesterday. Several other points of friction also arose during the day over the admission of testimony to be turned over to the War Labor Board for use in making its decision upon the workers' demands for the basic eight-hour day and in increase in wages.

Before Paul Bonynge, counsel for the boat owners, had announced at the morning session that the Red Star Towing and Transportation Company had agreed to recognize the jurisdiction of the board and accept any award made by it, a demand was made by Frank P. Walsh, counsel for the workers, that all the books of the New York Boat Owners' Association and the New York Towing Exchange, with the officers of the associations, be brought into the hearings. Mr. Walsh said he wished to read the correspondence of the Towing Exchange upon the settlement of the demands of the workers and to find out exactly how much money had been paid to newspapers when the demands of the workers were made last year, and also during the strike last week.

In replying to this request, Mr. Bonynge said that all the books requested by counsel for the marine workers would be produced, and he concluded with the demand that similar books of the unions be produced, "particularly those showing money received from German sources." W. L. Hutcheson, who was acting yesterday as Chairman of the subcommittee, termed the remark of counsel "unfair and uncalled for" and ordered it stricken from the record. Mr. Walsh also protested on behalf of the unions and Mr. Bonynge said he would withdraw the insinuation.

Money Question Up Again.

No more was said about the charge that "German money had been received" until the conclusion of the hearing late in the afternoon, when Mr. Walsh sought to force counsel for the boat owners to make the charge more explicit. A stenographic report of this colloquy was given out with consent of counsel for both sides and the approval of the members of the sub-committee.

"This morning counsel for the other side said he wanted us to bring in certain books which would show the expenditure of 'German money,'" said Mr. Walsh. Chairman Hutcheson interrupted to say that all reference to the remark had been stricken from the record, but Mr. Walsh continued:

"Yes, that is stricken out of the testimony, but the statement was made here, and, of course, it has been scattered broadcast. It is a very serious charge, and I want to ask now on behalf of those men whom I represent that Mr. Bonynge state into this record—represented in this controversy, and what information he has about any German money paid to any person, the name of the person and the amount of the money. It involves a charge of treason."

Chairman Hutcheson replied that he thought the request "reasonable," and Mr. Bonynge answered:

"As counsel made his statement a moment ago that he intended to try his case in his own way I would reply in like kind to him. I say, when my time comes, I shall produce all evidence I have on that or any other subject."

"Then I understand that you do have evidence of that?" asked Mr. Walsh.

"I have not said I have or have not," replied counsel for the boat owners. "I made no statement whatever in connection with it. I say I will prove my case in my own way when I get to it."

When Mr. Walsh suggested that the names of the persons be given to the members of the subcommittee and to the Federal authorities with the agreement that they were not published at once, Mr. Bonynge said that he had "nothing more to say on the subject."

"If that is refused I ask that he give forthwith to the Department of Justice the name of the person who received any 'German money' and the amount received," concluded counsel for the marine unions, "so that if there be such facts in existence the criminal may be apprehended at once. Of course, if such a thing exists and there is a traitor, in our midst he might escape from this jurisdiction and elude justice before Mr. Bonynge reaches his part of the case."

William A. Maher, President of the Masters, Mates, and Pilots' Union, testified that the officers of three tugs under control of the Government had not been taken back when the marine workers decided to go back to work pending a decision upon their demands by the War Labor Board, and counsel for the unions asked that an interlocutory order be issued by the board requiring re-employment of the men. Chairman Hutcheson said such an order could be issued only by vote of the entire board. In his argument upon the ruling Mr. Walsh said that the War Labor Board "had more power than any board ever created by the Government," and that "through it the President is the absolute arbiter of labor in this war."

Crews Not Taken Back.

Captain Maher testified that men of three crews of Baltimore & Ohio railroad tugs had not been taken back, including one Captain. Members of the crew of a tug of the Atlantic Company, two deck hands on a steam lighter of the Army Transport Service, and the chief engineers and members of the crew of a tug in the army service had not been reinstated, he said. It was complained, also, that Captain Godfrey L. Carden, in command of the Coast Guards, had refused to reissue harbor passes to a tug crew whom the Johnson Lighterage Company wished to take back.

Dr. William F. Ogburn, the professor of sociology who had been called by Basil M. Manly, the joint Chairman representing labor on the War Board, to give expert testimony upon the cost of living, reasserted his belief yesterday that no family of five persons should have less than $1,500 a year for maintenance under his "bare subsistence budget." After it had been deduced that policemen and firemen of some grades in this city received only $1,200 a year and seamen and other employes of the United States Shipping Board received hardly more than half the sum estimated by Dr. Ogburn as a "minimum wage" Mr. Bonynge asked:

"Do you mean to appear here as an official of the Government and assert that $1,500 is a minimum wage to be paid to all persons?"

"Yes, absolutely yes," replied Dr. Ogburn, who had previously said that all classes of labor and nationalities should have the same pay so that they would have equal opportunity for social development. Counsel for the boat owners, in questioning Dr. Ogburn, sought to ascertain his opinion as to whether Lascars, Arabs, or other races not having the intelligence of workers speaking English should receive the same pay of $1,500 a year as a minimum wage. Chairman Hutcheson ruled this question inadmissible because, he said, it distinguished between races, but Dr. Ogburn replied that he thought there should be no "discrimination."

After Dr. Ogburn had left the stand counsel for the unions introduced several other witnesses in attempts to show that his estimates for a wage necessary now were low. They were Miss Anne Hogan, secretary of the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union; Mrs. Grace Klueg, President of the auxiliary of a Machinists' Union in Brooklyn, and Olof Julliesen, a walking delegate for the Lighter Captains' Union. Several tilts by counsel were had upon the admission of points of the testimony, and when Chairman Hutcheson ruled that a long list of prices of food should not be given by Miss Hogan on direct examination, counsel for the unions abruptly left the room to confer giving the impression that they intended to withdraw their case from arbitration by the War Labor Board. The hearing will be resumed in the Aldermanic Chamber at City Hall at 10 o'clock this morning.

MANY IDLE, MORRISON SAYS.

Federation Secretary Urges Four-Year Immigration Barrier.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—"When the men in the army are demobilized," said Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, before the House Immigration Committee, today, "we are going to have bread lines in every industrial centre by May 1. After that date it is hoped that building will pick up and take some of the men."

Surveys of industrial conditions in many cities showing unemployment were presented by Mr. Morrison, who urged legislation prohibiting immigration for four years. Labor leaders, he said, made the survey on Tuesday at his request. The estimated number of unemployed included:

Chicago, 75,000; New York, New Orleans, and Boston, 20,000 each; St. Louis, 15,000; Cleveland, 40,000, and Toledo, 17,000.

The Jersey City report said there was "no notable distress because of unemployment." Newark, N. J., reported "five men for every job."

Mr. Morrison urged that Congress pay soldiers until they get work; that provision be made for work on public buildings, and that money be provided so that Secretary Lane's land development plans may proceed immediately.

Raw Silk Situation.

Supplies of raw silk in the hands of manufacturers are low, and inquiries for further quantities are increasing. While the local market continues quiet prices are holding their own. At Yokohama, according to advices received by H. L. Gwalter & Co., a moderate business is doing at unchanged prices. Sinshiu No. 1 being variously reported at 1,490 and 1,500 yen per picul. Holders' prices for Kansai filatures, double extra, are 1,630 yen, and for extras 1,600 yen. Canton reports dullness with unchanged prices, and Shanghai shows easier quotations, but with silver exchange manifesting a hardening tendency. The Milan market is unchanged, with a small demand for home consumption, and very little export business. At Lyons the tone of the market is slightly better.

Crockery in Large Demand.

Despite the fact that manufacturers of crockery are doing everything possible to increase their output, the demand is still far greater than the supply. One of the firms in this line said yesterday that much crockery is needed by the hotels throughout the country. In fact, if all the manufacturers concentrated their efforts in this direction it would be many months before the necessary supply could be obtained. Although there is still a brisk sale for dinner sets with gold edgings, more calls are being received of late for colored patterns, and those made in blue and white designs.

BRITISH ALTER ARMY PLAN.

Slow Down Demobilization — May Reorganize Forces.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—With reference to the demobilization arrangements articles are printed into today's newspapers warning the country against too much impatience and emphasizing the difficulties which have to be overcome. It is especially pointed out that even in the most favorable circumstances many months must elapse before there is the slightest possibility of absorbing the immense amount of labor which very rapid demobilization would render available, thus leading to a calamitous amount of unemployment. Moreover, it is pointed out, the war is not finished and the country cannot be left with inadequate forces pending the conclusion of peace. Even then, it is added, an adequate number of troops will be required until the situation in Europe becomes definitely clear.

All the newspapers lay stress upon the necessity of maintaining a first-class army on the Rhine until Germany's status is decided. Every effort is being made, it is explained, to make the burden as light as possible for the nation. One plan being considered is the creation of an army of occupation of moderate size, but of a high standard of efficiency, to be maintained until the Germans make the reparation required, this army to be chosen in the main of men who have done the least military duty, while demobilization is to be carried out as speedily as possible of other soldiers, according to their trade category.

It is also planned to open up in the near future a scheme for a post-war imperial army to garrison India and other places abroad.

The Southport Miners' Federation, which demanded on Wednesday that the Government demobilize all miners in the army, also decided by a majority of more than two to one to demand an advance of 30 per cent. over present wages other than war wages.

SAYS OUR TEXTILES UNDERSELL FRENCH

Dry Goods Dealers Told of Opportunities in European Markets.

HOLDING CONVENTION HERE

Expect Production Costs to Equal 1918 Figures—Uncertain as to Prices.

Many American textile goods can now not only be produced cheaper in this country than in Europe, but after standing transportation and insurance charges, together with foreign customs duties, actually sell in the French market at a lower price than practically similar fabrics made in France, thus completely reversing conditions prevailing prior to Aug. 1, 1914, according to a statement made yesterday at the fifteenth annual convention of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association at the Waldorf-Astoria by Charles Claquin of Demetre Bros. & Beals, selling agents for the Andrews Mill Company, a French manufacturing concern with plants in this country and in France. Mr. Claquin, who said that he had served two years with the French Army in Northern France, before returning to the United States to again represent the French manufacturers, compared existing conditions in the French textile industry with those prevailing here.

"One of our mills was located in the Picardy region, in which before the war there were 25,000 looms," Mr. Claquin said. "Our mill had about 500 looms. We have just learned that practically all of the plants, looms, and other machinery in this region were destroyed by the Germans in the first year of occupation. All brass parts of the machinery were taken away, and the looms were left exposed to the weather, and, of course, are now useless. Surveys made in those sections show that the manufacturers will be able to make some goods, but it will require at least six months for them to get on a real working basis, and, naturally, when they again begin producing the French consumers will want the fabrics to remain in France, to meet domestic needs. This will curtail export business for a while, at least. French manufacturers will also labor under the disadvantages of high costs and heavy outlays for replacements, due to the destruction wrought by the invaders."

Mr. Claquin, in speaking of the reversed conditions now obtaining in the French and American textile industries, cited the case of serges. He stated that an investigation disclosed that French-made serges were selling in the Paris market for 20 francs per metre, whereas American serges could be landed in France, including all costs, at 18 francs, or 40 cents per meter below the Paris selling price of the similar French manufactured goods.

In this connection W. M. G. Howse, President of the Johnston-Larimer Dry Goods Company, Wichita, Kan., stated that at a conference he had had with textile manufacturers on Wednesday, assurances were given that the newly formed Textile Export Corporation was confident of doing a very large overseas business in American fabrics, thus eliminating the possibility of a dangerous surplus of goods in this country.

F. A. Patrick, President of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association, who presided at the convention, in his annual address said that the jobbers had felt the great danger to the usual course of trade in the tremendous stocks of textiles and other supplies held by the Government, and added that assurances had been given that these surplus stocks would be used in relief work abroad and disposed of in ways that would not disturb the home market.

Dr. George W. Kirchwey, Assistant Federal Director of the United States Employment Service, said that while there was a considerable increase in the supply of available labor it had come about so gradually that the menace of unemployment had been avoided.

The afternoon session was taken up in a discussion setting forth why manufacturers could not at this time fix definite prices on Fall goods. W. M. G. Howse, who headed a committee of jobbers that conferred with a similar committee of manufacturers in an endeavor to get the manufacturers to name prices, reported that the mill men wanted to co-operate but were unable to give any concrete idea of how prices would be in the immediate future. The manufacturers, Mr. Howse said, held that production costs would not be less this year than in 1918, and might be higher. At the same time the manufacturers, several of whom were present, promised to do all within their power to help the jobbers keep merchandise moving.

This morning there will be a conference of 400 knit goods manufacturers, selling agents, and jobbers at the Waldorf for a discussion of prices, and if possible to formulate a selling policy for the current year.

Russian Enameled Bronzes.

Some time during the Summer the new door knockers of Russian enamel will have reached the country dwellers and will shine out gayly on doors of Colonial design shaded by vine-covered trellis-work arches. This Russian bronze, enameled or simply engraved without color, is something new within the last few months. It is made by Russian craftsmen in this city. It is also made up in trays, candlesticks, and candelabra. Many of the small candlesticks are in graceful Colonial shapes. It is all handwork. In the bright reds and blues of the Russian color schemes the work is effective. An extra tall pair of candlesticks in the enamel work will probably retail for about $50. Knockers will retail for $9 or $10 enameled, and for less without color.

A Difference of Opinion.

Owing to the labor trouble in the industry the conditions in the women's shirt waist trade are very unsettled. There is also a wide difference of opinion as to the sale of the goods. Some firms said yesterday that it was almost impossible to sell goods at the present time owing to the condition of the market. Others contend, however, that business is very good, especially in the better grade of waists.

Food Board Spent $6,785,253.

In addition contract obligations of $1,432,542 are outstanding.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday..5@5¼ per cent. for the best names

Wednesday..5@5¼

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Good Outlook for Silverware.

Indications point to some very heavy buying in the retail jewelry trade during the early Spring months. During the last few days the jobbers have been placing some very substantial orders for silverware, which are much larger in proportion than those received by the manufacturers at this time last year. In the hollowware lines, most of the orders that are being received are for the more staple goods such as tea sets, bread trays, and cake baskets.

Gray Goods Prices Lower.

What business there was done in the local gray goods market yesterday centred mostly about a few constructions. In printcloths substantial sales were reported of 39-inch 68-72s from first hands at 12¾ cents. From second hands came fairly large sales of 38½-inch 64-60s at 10 cents, a pretty good reduction from the price of the day before. Among the sheetings reported sold were 36-inch 4.70s at 11 cents and 5.50s at 10½ cents.

Lamp Shades of Parchment.

Parchment lampshades for electricity, gas, &c., are the latest to go out to the trade. They come in landscape designs, but more attractive are those designated simply as polycrome, but actually in Italian or Pompeian designs, in rich colors, decorative and effective on the soft, old-parchment tone of the shade proper, which makes for an agreeable lighting.

Handbags and Pocketbooks.

Some of the manufacturers of leather handbags and pocketbooks are a little later than usual this year in completing their new Spring lines. This has not, however, interfered to any great extent with the sales. A number of buyers who are interested in this line are now in the city, and are placing some good-sized orders for early delivery. Information received from the men on the road states that they are meeting with much success in almost every section of the country. There is more of a tendency toward colored goods this year, including shades of red, blue, green, and gray.

Madeira Embroideries' Supply.

Owing to the shortage of raw materials, importers of Madeira embroideries are having much difficulty in obtaining a sufficient amount of merchandise. This is due mainly to the scarcity of flax, a large part of which was formerly obtained from Russia. With the increased sale for these goods the stocks that are now on hand are very badly depleted, especially in the line of luncheon sets and napkins. Large orders are being received from retail sources, and it is now becoming a serious matter to the importers regarding their future supply of merchandise.

Orders for Capes and Dolmans.

Although the season is still a little early for women's capes and dolmans, some good sized advance orders have been received by firms in this line. Some of the buyers who have already placed their orders for these goods were more favorably disposed to the higher class merchandise. Last year these lines met with a fair sale, but it is said by the makers that this season they will be worn much more extensively, especially outside of the city. The trimmings used on the new offerings are plain and simple, being confined mostly to braids and buttons, with many silk collar effects.

Liberty 4 Per Cent. Bonds Gain Ground on Conversion Proposal—Stocks Dull.

The task of distributing the forthcoming victory loan, which is expected to amount to $5,000,000,000 or more, is beginning to occupy the minds of bankers and investment men to the exclusion of many matters of lesser importance. The effect of this gradual concentration on what is hoped to be the last great Government war loan is reported to be having reflection in the general bond market, and a diversion of part of the current interest in corporation issues is looked for during the weeks remaining before the campaign opens. This does not mean that plans for much new financing are to be held back on account of the Government issue. On the contrary, several sizeable offerings are looked for in the near future, but in the opinion of some investment bankers original programs for long-term bonds may in some cases be changed into notes. Negotiations for one or more foreign Government loans in this country are awaited in the near future.

In yesterday's security market a sharp advance of the 4 per cent. Liberty bonds supplied a feature of business. The upturn, which amounted to more than a point, was influenced by the suggestion made by Secretary of the Treasury Glass that the privilege of conversion into 4¼ per cent. bonds be reopened. The forward movement quite naturally stimulated conjecture in respect to terms which will surround the next loan, having to do primarily with measures to make the issue attractive. A higher interest rate than 4¼ per cent. is looked for, and it is thought in finanical circles that additional privileges in the line of income tax exemptions to holders may be devised by the Treasury Department. An interesting item in the day's news surrounding war bonds dealt with the rapid conversion of United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5½s, due Feb. 1, into the twenty-year 5½ per cent. British Government issue. Nearly $50,000,000 of the $148,000,000 or so of notes have already been turned in for exchange into the bonds.

The stock market was of the same general nature as the preceding sessions of the week, with trading dull and speculative fancy finding expression in specialties for the most part. Some of the oil stocks were under pressure, and the steel group displayed a better demand than had been seen for several days. The flat appearance of the market was by no means explained through the state of money rates, as there was a free supply of demand funds, and the quotations of time money were somewhat easier than the day before. The demand for commercial paper was active among the banks, and the tendency of rates was felt to be downward. In the foreign exchange market Swiss rates reacted, a movement which had as little explanation as the stiffening process in evidence the day before. Rates on Paris also eased off. The Bank of England again reported an increase in the reserve ratio of slightly more than 2 per cent. to 19.14, a figure which showed a rise of more than 7 per cent. since Jan. 1. The bank's loans declined more than $75,000,000. The increase in the ratio of reserve to liabilities was emphasized by the fact that the gain in gold holdings was little more than $1,000,000.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Baltimore & Ohio Financing.

Definite plans for Baltimore & Ohio financing to meet the company's $18,500,000 6 per cent. notes and $4,000,000 bank loans which were extended from Oct. 1, 1918, for four months, and an additional maturity of $1,000,000 4½ per cent. equipment trust certificates which also fall due on Feb. 1, have not yet been mentioned in banking circles. It has been suggested that this substantial financing is awaiting approval of the Railroad Administration, which has proved dilatory in meeting questions of this kind. The collateral behind the notes consists largely of stocks of the Reading Company.

Steel Outlook Brighter.

Recent reports as to the iron and steel industry indicate apparently that the steel companies have not been suffering from any such lack of new business as was generally supposed. Curtailment from the high production level has been going on slowly ever since the Government contract cancellations began to be felt, but the fact is sometimes overlooked that while production is lessened, the output is probably larger than in the period immediately before the war, even though the percentage of output as to capacity is lower. This is because of the increased facilities for steel making which were established to meet the demands of the war period. It was only natural that some of this extra equipment should be forced into idleness with the advent of peace. With buying orders of a more substantial nature appearing, and prices for steel products much higher than before the war, the steel industry, it seems, is far from facing the calamitous situation which was forecast in some quarters.

The Decrease in French Rates.

The cut in ocean freight rates announced by the French High Commission on general cargo steamships and French passenger vessels, from United States Atlantic ports to French Atlantic ports, from 60 to $41 per ton weight or measurement has been generally accepted in shipping circles as an indication of the step which the United States Government will eventually take to decrease the rates on Shipping Board vessels, which still hold at $60 plus 10 per cent. primage. The general cargo rate on French requisitioned and French or allied chartered steamers is $27, as compared with the $60 rate heretofore maintained.

Gillette Safety Razor Gains.

The steady advance of Gillette Safety Razor stock on the Curb has attracted considerable attention since the beginning of the year. There has been consistent buying of the issue, which has resulted in a steady rise, the bid at the close of yesterday being 120 with 122 asked. The stock was brought out last year at 80 and sold off to a low at 77½, with a sharp upturn at the end of the year to 114, which was the maximum. There have been several reactions which have been attributed to profit taking, but the upward movement has been maintained.

Russian External 6½s.

There is much speculation in banking circles as to whether the Russian external 6½ per cent. bonds, obligations of the old Russian Government, will be paid when they mature on June 18. Thus far the interest has been steadily paid on this issue at the National City Bank. This is taken in some quarters to mean that the principal will also be paid when it falls due. Where the interest money comes from has been something of a mystery. Some believe that it has been advanced by the United States Government out of the balance of a fund granted to Russia but never used for the fall of the Kerensky Government. This, it is said, amounts to about $130,000,000, and those who look for the retirement of the Russian bonds at maturity believe that the necessary funds will be advanced from this fund. The issue of external 6½s total $50,000,000.

American Hide and Leather.

American hide and leather preferred was a feature in yesterday's trading, advancing from an opening price of 79 to 81¾, just before the close. The closing quotation on Wednesday was 78. The movement was apparently due to rumors that the Directors would maintain the quarterly dividend rate at 1¾ per cent. when they meet early next week and was accelerated by short covering. The short interest was said to have been established as the result of earlier rumors of adverse action by the Directors.

The Copper Situation.

Apparently the deadlock between producers and consumers still continues with regard to copper. The market shows little activity, the consumers not being attracted by 23 cent copper and the producers refusing to sell for anything below this figure except in the case of a few small companies which are said to have negotiated some sales at 20 cents. How long the situation will continue is hard to forecast. If the stocks of copper available for the use of certain industries are as large as supposed the consumers do not need to come into the market for some time. On the other hand the producing companies are all more firmly intrenched as to cash than ever before in their history and therefore more able to wait. This has produced a condition of stagnation which the copper companies are determined shall be changed only by urgent demand which would at once establish prices at the level now asked, or even higher. The producers point out that it would be poor business policy to continue capacity operation under the high existing costs, with no real market in sight which would give a fair return to stockholders.

The Equipment Companies.

There is some doubt as to just how the transition period is going to affect the equipment companies. The railroad situation is unsettled and the individual companies are showing a disposition to hold up orders until there has been clarification of the many perplexing problems. The war emergency having passed the railroads are loath to place orders under the high costs now prevailing, pointing out that there would have to be a heavy marking down in the value of the equipment so purchased when industrial conditions returned more nearly to normal. With lessened demand upon facilities there is said to be little urgent need for either new cars or locomotives.

Mexican Situation Unchanged.

The basis of an agreement between the oil producers in Mexico and the Mexican Government is said to be as far from determination as ever. Several meetings have been held recently but it is not expected that any definite steps will be taken, by either the producers or the Mexicans, for some time.

BELGIAN EXCHANGE AGAIN QUOTED HERE

Bankers Ask 5.62 Francs to the Dollar for Checks, 5.60 for Cables.

8 PER CENT. BELOW NORMAL

Expect Belgian Loan Here Soon to Stabilize Exchange and Facilitate Exports.

For the first time since the German invasion disrupted the finances of Belgium foreign exchange business direct with that country was begun yesterday. Local bankers with connections in Antwerp quoted exchange rates on the basis of 5.62 francs to the dollar for remittances by check, and 5.60 for cables. Exchange facilities were made available for general commercial transactions, and while dealings were not extensive, they were considered significant of improved banking operations in Belgium.

The Belgium banks in recent weeks have been gradually reopening in the cities surrendered by the German troops, and a great amount of funds which had been removed by the Germans and ordered returned under the provision of the armistice are once more in the vaults of the Belgian banks. It is understood also that exchange transactions have been furthered by credits established for the Belgian Government and Belgian banks in London. The Belgian Government a few days ago discussed with American bankers and officers of the Treasury Department a proposal for a loan in this country, and when negotiations are completed it is expected that transactions in Belgian exchange will increase.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company for several weeks has been supplying facilities for transferring funds to the devastated regions of Belgium, but as far as is known these have had to do solely with money for charitable and reconstruction purposes. In the main these transfers were conducted for some time through Paris.

The reopening of Belgium banks and the expansion of commercial dealings with other nations has now made possible the resumption of exchange transactions through Belgium's leading financial centre. The possibility of doing business direct with Belgium paves the way for exports to the stricken country, and it is expected that the movement of agricultural and mill machinery, merchandise, and food supplies will grow rapidly.

The rate of 5.60 cable transfers represents a discount of approximately 8 per cent. on Belgian exchange as compared with the normal quotation of 5.1813. French exchange stands at a discount of about 5 per cent. If a Belgium loan is floated here in the near future bankers believe that the discount will be considerably reduced, and thus increase the purchases of goods by Belgium in the United States, inasmuch as a movement toward normal parity will lighten the expense of importing commodities and finished materials.

The matter of a Belgian loan, it was learned in banking circles yesterday, is expected to come up for additional discussion soon. The preparations for the victory loan of $5,000,000,000 early in the Spring is not expected to interfere with the Belginn transaction, provided that investment conditions are found satisfactory for an offering of foreign bonds in the meantime.

May Change Cuba Sugar Financing.

New financing by the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation is being considered by the directors of the company, although no definite steps in this direction have as yet been taken. The matter has been talked over informally and it is expected that it will come before the directors for a final decision at the next meeting, which may be held shortly. It is said that the company may propose to float an issue of $15,000,000 6 per cent. ten year notes. The annual report of the company, issued recently, disclosed that it had heavy outstanding obligations and that earnings were low because of high costs, both as to labor and material. The balance sheet showed a floating debt of $12,000,000, the liquidation of which it is expected the proposed new financing is to provide for.

Foreign Trade Council to Meet.

The National Foreign Trade Council will hold its sixth convention at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, April 24, 25, and 26. The formal call will be issued shortly by James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation, and representatives of industry, commerce, finance, and labor will be in attendance. Some of the problems which will come before the gathering for discussion are the conversion of war industries to needs of peace, the development of our foreign trade to provide employment for our soldiers, sailors, and war workers, and the formation of a definite policy with regard to our new shipping.

Detroit Edison Co. Income Drops.

The annual report of the Detroit Edison Company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1918, shows a net income of $3,747,990, an increase of 2.2 per cent. over 1917. The total gross revenue amounted to $13,801,527, an increase of 12.3 per cent. over the 1917 total, which was $12,279,925. The total expenses of the year were $10,053,536, an increase of $1,438,021 over the preceding twelve months. The net income after the deduction of interest charges was $2,394,223, a decrease of $241,625 from the figures of 1917.

Want Free Lighterage Restored.

Representatives of the financial and business interests of the city will meet this afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York to protest against the action of the United States Railroad Administration in refusing to restore free lighterage in New York Harbor. Free lighterage was abolished a year ago. John F. Wallace, Acting Chairman of the Committee on Harbor and Shipping of the Chamber of Commerce, and Julius Henry Cohen will address the meeting.

RAILROAD EARNINGS LOW.

Below Danger Level Marked by Commerce Board, Senators Are Told

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — Alfred P. Thom, general counsel of the Association of Railway Executives, in his appearance today before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is studying the railway situation growing out of Government control of railroads and Secretary McAdoo's request for an extension of such control for a period of five years, stated that the free flow of investment capital into railroad development had been checked since 1910. This he attributed to the declining tendency of net earnings, the rigid State and national regulation of both revenues and expenses, and the lack of any assurance to the investing public that new funds invested in the business would earn a fair return.

Mr. Thom reviewed the earnings of the carriers from 1910 to 1916, before the United States entered the war, by reference to the reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He said that every year but one after 1910 up to 1916 showed a much lower operating income than 1910.

"In every year," he said, "there was a large increase in the property investment, so that the investment was expanding, while earnings were shrinking. In but one year between 1910 and 1916 were earnings sufficient to pay interest and dividends. The total operating income from 1910 to 1916 was not enough to pay the total interest and dividends. From 1910 to 1916 the funded debt increased $2,200,000,000, while the stock increased only $733,000,000; this threefold increase in indebtedness resulting from insufficient credit to raise new capital from the sale of shares.

"In no year from 1910 to 1916 did the carriers earn on their investment as much as 5.35 per cent., a figure which the Commerce Commission had held was less than was necessary in the public interest. The average earnings for the whole period were only 4.94 per cent., or considerably below the danger level marked by the Commerce Commission."

Mr. Thom argued that an extension for five years during peace of the present war control law affecting railroads would be unconstitutional, because it would give to the President the power to set aside any and all laws affecting interstate commerce.

CONVERTING BRITISH BONDS

$50,000,000 Worth Have Already Been Changed to 20-Year Issue.

The conversion of the two-year 5½ per cent. notes of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland into the twenty-year British Government issue carrying the same rate of interest has made rapid progress since Jan. 1, although the notes do not mature until Feb. 1. The Bankers' Trust, as conversion agent, had received a total of $13,700,000 notes by Jan. 3, and about $18,000,000 came in between that date and Jan. 13. During the last two days, it was learned yesterday, fully $18,000,000 have been converted, the aggregate so far reported being practically $50,000,000.

The original issue of notes was $150,000,000, of which about $144,000,000 are listed on the Stock Exchange, the balance having been retired last year through the sale of the collateral behind them. The amount of the long-term bonds now outstanding is little more than $50,000,000, as some of the holders of the one-year United Kingdom notes which matured on Feb. 1, 1918, exercised their conversion rights. Interest on the twenty-year bond is payable free from deduction of all British income taxes, although the bonds are not free from the British income tax while in the hands of an Englishman liable to such a tax.

Billmire, lately with the Citizens' National Bank of Baltimore, have been appointed to similar places in the Harriman National. W. Averell Harriman has been elected a Director of the National Surety Company. Abner S. Pope, Vice President of the Industrial Finance Corporation, has been elected a Director of the Morris Plan Company of New York, to succeed the late Major Willard D. Straight. Thayer, President of the Chase National Bank.

Company's Tribute to G. R. Sheldon.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of The North American Company a resolution of tribute to the late George R. Sheldon, Treasurer of the company, was adopted. Mr. Sheldon died as a result of an accident which occurred when he was on a tour of inspection of one of the company's subsidiaries at Carbondale, Ill. He was elected a Director of The North American Company in 1893, became Treasurer in 1898 and Chairman of the board in 1917.

AMERICAN SHIPS GO BACK TO OWNERS

Government Will Retain Only Those Now Engaged in Army Service.

EXTRA STEAMERS ALLOTTED

34 Owned by Shipping Board Are Turned Over to Various Lines to Replace Transports.

All American ships which have been requisitioned by the Government during the war have been released to their owners, with the exception of those engaged in army service, it was announced yesterday by the United States Shipping Board. In the place of those retained for service and which are fitted for the transportation of troops, the owners will receive an equal tonnage of Government built and owned vessels. A. E. Clegg, Assistant Director of Operations, said that all the ships referred to now in American ports would be turned over to their owners at once; those on voyages would be released on their return to the United States.

In addition to the return of requisitioned ships to their owners and replacement of vessels in Government service, thirty-four ships of 275,194 deadweight tons, owned by the Shipping Board, were today allotted to various lines by the board. A report showed that on Jan. 9 there were under requisition 248 American ships, of a total of 1,219,283 gross tons. Of these possibly seventy-five are in the service of the War Department as troop and supply ships.

The total number of ships owned by the board is 636, of 2,348,250 gross tons, of which 534, of 1,994,913 tons, are new vessels; 59, of 257,962 tons, are former German ships; 6, of 24,417 tons, former Austrian ships, while 37, of 100,962 tons, are former Great Lakes ships.

Although not yet officially announced, it is understood that eighty steamships of 478,769 tons requisitioned from Dutch owners for the war emergency will also be returned to their owners at an early date, with the same proviso that where the former Dutch ships are now in service as transports they will be replaced ton for ton by Shipping Board owned vessels. The board also has under requisition approximately 300 steamers of about 1,417,000 tons owned by other foreign Governments than Holland.

The ships allotted by the Shipping Board are:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—There are 408 American steam vessels of the total deadweight tonnage of 2,622,550 affected by the Shipping Board's release order. Board officials said today that about forty ships were released Dec. 31, this being the total number of less than 3,500 tons capacity which were in the Government service. No compilation has yet been made to determine how many of the vessels will be retained by the Government.

Knowing South America

Going into the markets of South America is a fascinating subject of many-sided phases in which an increasingly large number of business men are daily becoming more interested. It is a subject, too, which, while replete with promise, is filled with intricacies.

Unfamiliarity with the conditions of new markets has often led to costly experiments before satisfactory results have been achieved—experiments which could have been avoided had the requisite information been at hand. It is, therefore, good business for a merchant or manufacturer entering the South American field to inform himself thoroughly on what such a course means.

Our twenty-seven offices in South America can materially assist American business in its import and export problems. You can operate through your own bank if desired. Our New York agents will be glad to confer with you.

CONSOLIDATED SUES TO RAISE GAS RATE

Asks U. S. Court to Declare 80-Cent Law Confiscatory, and, Hence, Unconstitutional.

PROFIT PUT AT ¼ PER CENT.

Petition Based Upon U. S. Supreme Court Decision Granting Leave to Bring New Action.

The Consolidated Gas Company, in a suit begun yesterday in the Federal District Court, asks that the 80-cent gas law enacted by the Legislature in 190 be declared invalid because it is unconstitutional, on the ground that it is confiscatory of the company's property. The company says that for the year ended Oct. 31 last its net income was only 99,241.65, or less than ¼ per cent. on its investment of $69,697,700, exclusive of good will and other intangibles. A temporary injunction is asked to restrain the Attorney General of the State, the District Attorney, and the Public Service Commission, the three defendants, from taking any measures to enforce the 80-cent law.

Commenting on the suit last night a former attaché of the Public Service Commission said the company was evidently taking advantage of the opinion of the United States Supreme Court in 1909 which pheld the law in a suit by the same company, but gave the company leave to apply again under changed conditions. He also said it was clear, and that any company which could prove that the statutory rate was confiscatory could have the law set aside on constitutional grounds. His opinion was that the company, should it obtain a temporary injunction, would raise the rate to $1 or more, setting aside the difference to be returned to the consumers if it lost the suit.

In its complaint the company offers a mass of figures to show that its life is being eaten up lack of income to pay charges. Its gross operating revenues for the year ended in October, it says, was $15,764,288.11, while the cost of manufacturing and distributing the gas, including taxes and other expenses, was $15,665,046.46. Its net income of $99,241.65 represents a 6 per cent. return upon only $1,654,027.

Reference is made in the complaint to the decision of the United States Supreme Court when the first suit was dismissed, which was, in brief, that, although a return of less than 6 per cent. upon the value of the property employed would be confiscatory, and that while the lower courts found that the return at that time was less than 6 per cent., the margin "between possible confiscation and valid regulation" was so close that it failed to show clearly that a charge of 80 cents for gas would not yield a fair and reasonable return. The company says that at no time since this decision was rendered has it earned as much as 6 per cent.

Since the statutory rate has been in effect, the company says, there has been a steady deficiency which now aggregates at least $12,000,000, which should be added to the value of the property and upon which a return shoul be allowed. Then the complaint says:

"Since Dec. 31, 1906, there has been $14,085,265 added to the value of the company's property devoted to its gas business which was valued by the United States Circuit Court in the former suit at $55,612,435. The cost of reproducing the property at the present time would greatly exceed $69,697,700.

"A return of only 6 per cent. upon the investment would amount to not less than $4,181,862 per annum. The net earnings of $99,241.65 for the year ended Oct. 3, 1918, amounted to only 55-100 of 1 cent a thousand cubic feet of gas sold."

It is claimed that the deficiency is caused directly and solely by the "arbitrarily restricted price" at which the company is compelled to sell its gas. The company's average daily sales are stated to amount to 62,728,800 cubic feet, which makes the daily loss $14,264.53, which is rapidly swelling the deficiency in the company's earnings. The complaint sets forth the various items needed in its business which have grown so greatly in cost as well as the large increases in wages, and the greatly depreciated value of money, which makes the purchasing power of a dollar not more than about 60 cents.

A statement sent out last night by the company quoted one of its officers as saying that there was no prospect of any improvement in conditions during the coming year affecting the high cost of labor and materials, and that in the meantime the price of gas and other essentials should be adjusted to meet the increased cost of production.

The Public Service Commission was notified yesterday by the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company that if the application of the Corporation Counsel to Justice Cropsey for an injunction restraining the company from advancing the price of gas from 95 cents to $1.10 was successful the company would be compelled to ask for a receiver. Improvements in the plant, ordered by the commission, it was said, could not be made at the present nine-ty-five-cent rate. General Manager G. H. Woodhull of the company and his assistant, Miss Mary E. Dillon, testified before the commission to these facts, and then the hearing was adjourned for two weeks pending Justice Cropsey's decision.

In a suit last year for permission to raise its rates Charles E. Hughes was named as the referee with all powers of a court. He held that the eighty-cent rate was confiscatory, but made no recommendation. Thereupon the company sought to charge $1.25 per thousand, but was prevented by an injunction obtained by the Public Service Commission.

Coffee Exchange Officers.

The following officers were elected by the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange yesterday: President—Clarence A. Fairchild; Vice President—A. Schierenberg; Treasurer—C. H. Middendorf. The members of the Board of Managers elected were Benjamin R. Peabody, E. L. Leuder, Leon Israel, C. J. Walter, George H. Finlay, Franklin W. Hopkins, and C. B. Davison.

COTTON PRICES RALLY ON MODERATE BUYING

Advance Ranges From 45 to 89 Points in Sympathy with Strength in Liverpool.

There was a noticeable improvement in the tone of the cotton market yesterday, although after the severe break in prices of the last several days there was some slight evidence of nervousness and irregularity. With no marked change in conditions surrounding the trade local operators are disposed to act cautiously in their commitments in the market. Taking the range of prices for the day, the recoveries yesterday, while not large enough to make up the losses of the preceding day, ranged between 45 and 89 points. The underlying influences in the rally were the sharp advances in Liverpool, after showing a certain amount of weakness in response to our declines on Wednesday, and the complete recovery in New Orleans, the latter showing gains for the active months, averaging 37 to 90 points. The opening was firm, first prices early reflecting the changed sentiment of the traders. After the call buying orders came into the market in such preponderance that the position of weakness of the preceding day quickly changed to one of strength, and quotations turned up under the lead of March and May. The demand soon spread to other options and the morning session, one of activity, was a sharp contradistinction in price trend to that of the preceding day, sharp advances on the buying soon eliminating the last of the long interest which proved disastrous to values on Wednesday. The advances continued until around 2 o'clock, when the high levels of the day were touched. All options showed substantial recoveries from the preceding night's closing, January selling at 26.50c, March 25.47c, May 23.90c, July 22.95c, and October of the new crop 20.82c. The usual profit taking, always in evidence after a bulge, caused the market to react moderately in the last hour's trading, but the movement was not broad enough to more than nominally affect the earlier top prices.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was a reactionary tendency to the market at the close yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. With the exception of the steel and copper stocks and tobacco shares, the remainder of the active list, both industrials and rails, recorded net losses from a fraction to more than three points. The latter represented the decline in Mexican Petroleum. This issue, after advancing two points in the morning, was subjected to heavy pressure after midday and sold off rapidly.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The old retail shopping district, south of Twenty-third Street, which has not figured prominently in the speculative market for many months, furnished an interesting transaction yesterday in the sale of the building at 140, 142, and 144 West Twenty-second Street, held at $350,000.

The property consists of a twelve-story store and loft structure, on a plot 62.5 by 100, which was sold by the Postal Life Insurance Company to Frederick Brown, operator. It has an annual rent roll of about $32,000, and was acquired by the sellers in July, 1915, in foreclosure proceedings against the Ritaro Realty Company and others on a bid of $270,000. Greenfield & Saffin were the brokers in the transaction.

This is the second large purchase made by operators in the district in the course of a few weeks, and brokers predict a revival of speculative activity. On Dec. 28 last Bing & Bing, builders and operators, purchased from Isaac Clothier of Philadelphia the eleven-story loft building at 119 and 121 West Twenty-third Street, held at $500,000. Several other deals in the section are reported pending.

N. Y. A. C. Negotiating for Coronet Apartment.

At the annual meeting of the New York Athletic Club last Tuesday a committee was appointed to enter into negotiations with the heirs of the estate of William E. Burgess for the purchase of the ten-story Coronet apartment house, on the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. The club building has an entrance on Fifty-eighth Street, adjoining the apartment structure, and the main edifice also adjoins it on Sixth Avenue. There has been considerable discussion regarding the purchase of the property to accommodate the increasing club membership for several years. The Coronet covers a plot 100 feet on Fifty-eighth Street and 100.5 on Sixth Avenue, and is assessed at $625,000. The athletic club leases two floors at an annual rental of $15,000. Lawrence McGuire, President of the United States Realty and Improvement Company, is Chairman of the committee.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

Martha C. Elsing and Morris Joseph sold to Frederick Brown, operator, 32 East Sixty-fifth Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100, held at $55,000. Pease & Elliman negotiated the sale.

The four-story dwelling at 273 West Seventy-third Street, on lot 18 by 102.2, near West End Avenue, has been purchased by Mrs. Julia Bacon, who gave in part payment her house at 1,902 Marmine Avenue, Bronx Borough. The Everett M. Seixas Company, in conjunction with the Ogden Clarkson Company, were the brokers.

William E. Spencer sold the four-story dwelling, 16.8 by 98.8, at 145 West Twenty-sixth Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues.

Mary L. Broidy sold to an investor 180 Lexington Avenue, a three-story dwelling with stores, on the northwest corner of Thirty-first Street.

An investing client of Pease & Elliman purchased from Frederick Brown, operator, 982 Lexington Avenue, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 80. The buyer will alter the building into small apartments.

Tenement Deals.

The estate of Mabel E. D. Taylor sold to the Charles Galruski Company, Inc., 2,075 Eighth Avenue, a five-story triple tenement, on a lot 25 by 100, located near 112th Street. L. B. Crane negotiated the sale, the property being held at $35,000.

An investor purchased from the Metropolitan Mortgage Company the six-story elevator apartment house 230 West 113th Street, on a plot 50 by 100.11. The structure is located at the southwest corner of Seventh Avenue and 113th Street, recently purchased by the Manhattan Heights Improvement Company from the Central Savings Bank.

Brooklyn.

Jules Blumberg has sold his two-family house at 193 Hewes Street to Morris Bessen.

Four lots, each 20 by 100 feet, on the east side of Twenty-second Street, 465 feet north of Avenue R, have been sold to an investor by William P. Jones for Ella Townsend.

Queens Borough Sales.

The two-story brick dwelling at 602 Hamilton Avenue, Richmond Hill, has been sold by H. R. Williams & Son for a client to Miss Bahr.

H. Miles has sold to G. Johnson a plot 40 by 100 feet on the east side of Sherman Street, north of Hill Street, Jamaica.

The Dana Realty Company has purchased from W. Belloff a plot 50 by 100 feet at the southwest corner of Eighty-seventh and 102d Streets, Richmond Hill.

L. Bass has sold to J. Halprin a plot 75 by 75 feet on the east side of Stratton Avenue, south of the Boulevard, Far Rockaway.

Staten Island Sales.

W. S. E. Hall has sold for Mrs. E. C. Clifford the properties at 252 to 258 Davis Avenue, West New Brighton, to William Bernecker.

Crippled Soldiers Fund Leases House.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have leased the five-story house at 247 Madison Avenue, corner of Thirty-eighth Street, for the estate of Mary C. Wallace to the Blind and Cripple Fund for the Relief of American Soldiers and Sailors for a short term.

Drug Firm Leases at Columbus Circle.

The Liggett, Riker-Hegeman Company has purchased the lease of the building at 11 and 12 Columbus Circle, being on the corner of Fifty-ninth Street, from Meserik & Schonhard, the present tenants. It has six years to run and the drug firm has obtained an extension of the lease from George Ehret, owner of the property. The firm will take possession July 1, occupying the ground floor store. Nathan J. Mitchell and Robert J. Coverdale were the brokers. Schmidt & Donahue represented Mr. Ehret.

Clarendon Theatre, in Brooklyn, Leased for Auto Use.

The McInerney-Klinck Realty Company, as broker, has leased the Clarendon Theatre, Brooklyn, at 1,1109 to 1,113 Flatbush Avenue, 200 feet north of Clarendon Road, fronting 50 feet on Flatbush Avenue, with a depth of 150 feet. The lease is for a long term of years at a total rental of $50,000. The building will be altered for automobile sales and show rooms.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co.'s Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of Douglas L. Elliman & Co. the following officers were elected: Douglas L. Elliman, President and Treasurer; Argyll R. Parsons, Vice President; Roland F. Elliman, Vice President and Assistant Treasurer; Henry A. Frey, Secretary. The Directors elected were: Douglas L. Elliman, Argyll R. Parsons, Roland F. Elliman, Henry A. Frey, Herbert A. Wildman, Alfred E. Taylor, Robert C. Knapp, and R. W. Murray. The business of this corporation during the past year exceeded that of any previous year by 30 per cent. The President and many other members were in Government service.

Commercial Leases.

M. & L. Hess, Inc., have leased for the Ellisdale Company, Inc., Charles H. O'Connor Company, agent, the eighteenth floor, containing 18,000 square feet, at 53 and 55 Fifth Avenue, northeast corner of Twelfth Street, to the National Shirt Shops, Inc., for stockroom and executive offices. The main reason for the lessees' choosing the building is due to the change in the nature of its occupancy from manufacturing to nonmanufacturing tenantry. The lease is for a term of years at a rental aggregating $70,000.

The Charles F. Noyes Company leased to Zimmerman & Forshay, for a long term of years, at a total aggregate rental of approximately $300,000, the ground floor of the eighteen-story Broadway-Maiden Lane Building, 170 Broadway, together with the mezzanine floor and a large amount of space on the first floor adjoining. Zimmerman & Forshay have been located for forty-two years in the Mortimer Building, at 11 Wall Street, which building was recently purchased by Robert E. Dowling and resold to the New York Stock Exchange.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Atmospheric conditions are very much disturbed, as indicated by the number of storm centres and their rapid movements on the weather chart of Thursday. At 8 P. M. four storms were central within the field of observation, one over the Canadian Maritime Provinces, another over Lake Superior, another over Alberta, Canada, and still another over the Lower Mississippi Valley. High pressure prevails off the South Atlantic Coast and over the Far Southwest.

General rains fell in the last twenty-four hours in the Pacific States, except Southern California, and in the Gulf States, Tennessee, and Arkansas, and light snows in the Northern Rocky Mountain region and Minnesota. Gales have been reported from the Northern Pacific Coast, and there were heavy rains in Texas, Louisiana, and Southern Mississippi.

Temperatures remain above the seasonable average in all parts of the country, except the West Gulf States and the Southern Rocky Mountain region.

The storm now over the Lower Mississippi Valley will advance northeastward and be attended by general rains east of the Mississippi River within the next thirty-six hours.

Temperatures will be somewhat lower Friday and Friday night in the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley, and the East Gulf and South Atlantic States, and Saturday in the Middle Atlantic States and New England.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North Atlantic Coast will be fresh south, probably shifting to east Friday night and increasing, unsettled weather, followed by rain; Middle Atlantic Coast, fresh south, backing to east, probably increasing by Friday night, rain; South Atlantic Coast, fresh east and southeast, probably becoming strong, rain.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Rain Friday. Saturday, rain, followed by clearing and somewhat colder weather.

RUSSIAN TROUBLES

Are we wasting twelve million American Women?

SIXTEEN million women cooking, scrubbing, washing, tending children—all day long—in sixteen million homes!

What if twelve million of them could be released?

What if four million trained experts could perform the work now being done by sixteen million American housewives?

Charlotte Perkins Gilman, America's sanest and foremost feminist, discusses this burning subject in Pictorial Review for February.

The world is short-handed of workers! $9,600,000,000, at a conservative estimate, would be released towards the world's shortage of money and labor, by releasing these twelve million women for gainful work. Think what that would mean in France, in Belgium, in Serbia!

"But our homes? Our men? Our babies? If they must suffer we have no right to change." It is the old, old cry that has kept millions of women the world over "non-gainful."

Out of the world's necessity has been born the answer that is electrifying women the country over. Wherever you are, whoever you are, you cannot escape its contagion.—Greater usefulness to the world, greater well-being for the home and family, decreased cost of living.

Already the astounding change is making its way into our everyday life. The cooking, the laundry and cleaning, the care of the babies in sixteen million homes—how can it be done by four million women? How can individual household drudgery be abolished?

In detailed, practical fashion, Mrs. Gilman tells. What she has to say about this most extraordinary development in the world's history, no forward-looking man or woman can afford to miss. Read "The Work and Waste of Women" in Pictorial Review for February.

Specially good fiction

Her wifely duty—

Ugh! How Mattie hated it

NOT to be "wifely" was to be in Jacob's eyes, unsexed, a Jezebel, a monstrosity

But to Mattie, ugh! That word "wifely" stood for so many delightful things you had to deny yourself. Movies and soda fountains and frilly clothes!

Dishwasher for Jacob's family, that's all she was now. And so she rebelled! A feminist revolution in a Pennsylvania Dutch community!

Inimitably, and with rich humor, Helen R. Martin has told this rare story.

Your enemy's wife—the enemy you had killed!

ONCE, before the war, they had raced—the American and the German aviator. And at Kieber's home, Kieber's kids had climbed over his lap, rubbed their cool little faces against his—their father's friend's.

Then they had met as enemies—and Culberson, "iciest of aces", had killed his German antagonist.

But the wife and children he had known! How would you feel toward the family of the enemy you had admired—and killed? In "Straight as a Flame"—Will Levington Comfort has written a big story in a big way.

How about clothes?

Lingerie, Embroideries, Frocks, Blouses, Suits—Pictorial Review's Fashion Department for February shows a wealth of practical chic styles. And color pages featuring charming varieties of the season's mode!

All these pretty and useful things can be made easily and economically with Pictorial Review Patterns.

Thousands of babies wanted!

What are women saying about Birth Politics?

THREE hundred thousand babies in this country alone die unnecessarily every year—and the world is crying for more babies!

The appalling waste of it! Think! And what is being done to stop it?

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Author of "Mother", "The Luck of Geraldine Laird", etc.

answers this imperative question in Pictorial Review for February. In the same issue, Helen Ring Robinson, first woman state senator, discusses this vital problem.

Four years of war have brought home to the world that, more important even than the bearing of babies is the saving of babies. France and England are awake to the situation. Uncle Sam, too, has learned what sorrow-stricken mothers who sit beside empty cradles knew long ago; that a baby is worth more than a mine, a forest, a municipal building.

Just what is being done, what you must begin at once to do, Mrs. Norris tells you. Her article, and Helen Ring Robinson's keen analysis of the issue, are thrilling commentaries on America's splendid baby-saving achievements and plans up to the minute.

Wrapped in Silk

The greatest mystery story of the year

DOWN the fire-escape the figure came. Slowly, cautiously—a veiled unrecognizable feminine figure. And in the dead of night in Washington!

The woman spy! ... Which of the two girls was this—the two who had so spectacularly boarded the ocean liner in mid-ocean from a German submarine? Renée? Or Rachel? Which?

With consummate skill Clarence Budington Kelland has sustained in this second installment the breath-taking mystery of his vivid novel.

A regular $1.50 book in three issues. A million and a half men and women are following breathlessly this greatest mystery story of the year.

Birthday cards for the youngsters! Color cut-outs

Such amusing ones—that the children will love cutting out and sending to little friends. A whole dozen of them. No wonder the kiddies are enthusiastic over this novelty introduced by Pictorial Review. And there are adorable studies of the Twelve-trees babies.

REMARKABLE SERIES OF GREAT WAR PICTURES

BEGINNING with the February issue, Pictorial Review will publish month after month a new series of stirring full-page War Pictures. You would gladly pay $1.00 for any of these remarkable full color reproductions.

"Taking the Guns", from the masterly brush of F. Matania, tells you more graphically than any words could how the German gun nests were broken up by our brave boys. You will want to frame this picture and those that are to follow for their historic record of the Great War as well as for their artistic value.

ASSAIL HEARST AS 5,000 CHEER IN THE GARDEN

Dr. Manning Stirs Great Audience by Attack on Publisher.

URGES MAYOR TO ACT

Deplores Hearst's Appointment to Soldiers' Welcoming Committee—Calls It Insult.

BECK DENOUNCES DISORDER

Says Interruptions by Hearst Agents Show Spirit That Would Substitute Mob's Voice for Law.

William Randolph Hearst was described as Germany's most useful friend in this country, and his appointment on a committee to welcome American returning soldiers was described as an insult to these soldiers, at a meeting of the Independent Citizens' Committee of New York to Welcome Soldiers at Madison Square Garden last night.

While generally sober and restrained in tone, the arraignment of the publisher was the most severe which he has undergone in public since the speech of Elihu Root in Utica when Hearst was running for Governor of the State. The bitterest sentences produced cheers and great enthusiasm from about 5,000 persons, and just as regularly evoked hisses and cries of "three cheers for Hearst" or "three cheers for Hylan" from about 150 persons, who kept the meeting in an uproar about one-third of the time. The disturbers were characterized by James M. Beck as "hired agents," and this description of them provoked a lively reaction from the pro-Hearst contingent.

The New York American issued a statement last night in which it said that it had had reporters count the audience and they had found that 3,488 persons were present.

Commissioner Enright had a police guard of 375 men in and outside of the hall, including 40 mounted policemen in the basement of the Garden. A Provost Guard of 250 men also had been assigned to preserve order. There were also present fifty members of the Navy Beach Guard. Thus, there were 675 protectors of order at the meeting.

At the outset of the meeting a tribute to Dr. John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University and the presiding officer, to the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt as "the man who saved our country from the purchase of peace at the cost of her honor," brought the entire house to its feet.

Dr. Manning Assails Hearst.

One of the most bitter attacks on Mr. Hearst came from the Rev. Dr. William Manning, rector of Trinity Church. Most of those in the audience jumped to their feet and applauded him when he attacked Mr. Hearst by name, and about 150 hissed.

"We don't like to feel," Dr. Manning said, "that there is a stigma on our city. We don't like to hear that loyal Americans in other States are asking that their troops shall not be sent home through New York because of the kind of welcome that has been arranged here for them. This is what is now happening. The Legislature of South Dakota has made this request to Congress, and it seems that other States are about to take similar action."

Some of the Hearst champions made an uproar at this point, and Dr. Manning shouted:

"Hurrah for South Dakota!"

This was taken up all over the house, and that State received a great ovation. Amid great enthusiasm Dr. Manning praised the valor of the various New York regiments that the committee of which Hearst is a member is to welcome, and then continued:

"We feel deep respect for the office of Mayor, and wish to show all proper reference to the occupant of that high office, but we are here tonight to tell our Mayor politely, but plainly and publicly, that he has made a mistake in the appointment of his Committee of Welcome. In our welcome to our soldiers there should be nothing but harmony and good-will.

"The Mayor has made an appointment which he knew would make harmony impossible. He has made an appointment which has brought opprobrium on our city, which is an insult to the brave men in the service and which is justly condemned by loyal citizens, not only in New York, but all over our land. We all make mistakes at times. And when a Mayor or any other man makes a mistake the best thing he can do is to acknowledge it and set it right."

Mr. Manning said that Vice President Marshall had been generally acclaimed for his courage and sincerity when he made a public statement that he was sorry for his attitude toward the European war before this country entered it, and that he felt humiliated because he had been misled into the position of being neutral between right and wrong.

"We are here to say," continued Dr. Manning, "that no committee can be a proper committee to welcome our soldiers and sailors which includes the name of William Randolph Hearst. Mr. Hearst's attitude during this war is not a matter of doubt or debate. It is recorded in his own newspapers.

"Mr. Hearst cannot object to being judged by the words printed in his own publications. Throughout this war he had been Germany's most useful friend in this country, and the Germans themselves have recognized and acknowledged this. If Mayor Hylan will allow

Vienna Faces Meatless Weeks; Bread Ration Cut in Half

VIENNA, Jan. 17, (via London.)—The authorities contemplate the institution of meatless weeks, owing to the almost total cessation of meat imports.

There has been a cutting in half of the bread ration recently, and the two facts, taken in conjunction with the additional fact that potatoes are virtually unobtainable, have caused consternation among the population.

PROHIBITION ISSUE UNDER LEGAL FIRE

Opponents of Amendment Think There Are Some Ways to Attack Its Validity.

TWO MORE STATES RATIFY

Minnesota and Wisconsin Join Dry Column — Demonstration Planned at Albany.

Plans for an attack on the constitutionality of the Prohibition amendment progressed so far yesterday that William H. Hirst, attorney for the New York State Brewers' Association, was able to announce the general line of argument to be used in an effort to convince the courts that the amendment should never be allowed to become operative.

Just when the attack will be launched is as yet uncertain, although it is probable that the opening skirmish will come in California next Monday with argument in the State court for a permanent injunction restraining the Governor from certifying to the Federal Secretary of State that the amendment has been ratified by that State.

Besides planning an attack on the constitutionality of the measure the "wets" devoted themselves yesterday to efforts to insure an expression of sentiment in New York State against the measure. The Association Opposed to National Prohibition appealed for a demonstration of sentiment when the Legislature holds a public hearing on the question next Tuesday.

"The action of the thirty-eight States which have ratified the amendment," said Mr. Hirst, "may be attacked in this manner: First, there is a question as to whether it is necessary for those reported ratifying States whose Constitutions provide for referendum to submit the action of their Legislatures to the vote of the people before it becomes binding and operative as a ratification of the amendment. There are fourteen or fifteen such States among those where the Legislatures have voted approval. If it is necessary to submit to the people, then the necessary number of States is by no means obtained.

"The Federal Constitution provides that the amendment is to be submitted to the Legislatures of the States. What is meant by the Legislatures of the States? If it means the persons chosen to sit in the elected body called the Legislature, then there need be no referendum. That was the only kind of Legislature which was known at the time the Constitution was adopted, in 1787. If it means the legislative machinery of the States, then ratification is not complete until in addition to the action of the elected legislators it is also submitted to the vote of the people and approved by them. There is eminent legal authority to the effect that in States having referendum the amendment must be submitted to the vote of the people before it can be finally disposed of in the State.

"There is this further questionable and objectionable feature in the amendment—It gives to Congress and the several States concurrent power to enforce the amendment by appropriate legislation, a doubtful, dangerous, and mischievous provision, and one which most lawyers believe will lead to such a conflict of authority and action as to make the amendment meaningless and a mockery, as well as a menace to national unity. The Federal Government derives its authority from powers delegated to it by the several States. In any matter where it has jurisdiction its power is exclusive. Therefore the attempted delegation of power back to the States which is involved in this proposal of concurrent jurisdiction is contrary to constitutional intent and sanction.

"It must not be forgotten that the national prohibition amendment is not only aimed at the traffic in liquors but also at the private manufacture and use of beer and wine."

Demonstration at Albany.

In its appeal for a demonstration at Albany next Tuesday, the Association Opposed to National Prohibition called upon the voters of the State to "stand as firm as a rock in the faces of the enemies of liberty," and asserted that a referendum in this State would show a majority of a million against the amendment. Every citizen who could was urged to go to Albany and register his protest, and those who could not go were asked to enroll in the association, without fee, and to telegraph or write to their Representatives in the Legislature.

The prohibitionists' jubilee meeting is to be a union gathering of all ministers of Greater New York and vicinity who care to come to the Metropolitan auditorium on Jan. 27. They will consider the nature of legislation for enforcement of the amendment to be introduced at Albany.

Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, will answer

BERLIN AGITATORS MOBBED

Liebknecht Spirited Away but Shot in Dash for Liberty.

WOMAN LEADER BEATEN.

Thrown Into a Motor Car and Later Finished by Bullet in the Head.

CABINET STARTS INQUIRY

Promises Punishment if Blame Can Be Fixed—Fear of Spartacide Vengeance.

BERLIN, Jan. 16. (Associated Press.) — Dr. Karl Liebknecht was killed by soldiers yesterday while he was trying to escape from custody.

Rosa Luxemburg was beaten into insensibility by a mob and afterward was shot to death.

When it became known yesterday that Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were at the Hotel Eden, in the western part of the city, a crowd rapidly congregated and stormed the hotel lobby to lay hands on them. Both were spirited to a side entrance to the hotel, but the mob forestalled the attempt of the troops to save Fraulein Luxemburg. She was beaten into insensibility and then thrown into an automobile by the crowd, which intended to take her to prison.

A few blocks down the street the machine was halted by a second mob, and when the presence of Fraulein Luxemburg became known a man jumped on the running board of the car and shot her through the head. The body was dragged from the car and carried off. It is supposed that it was thrown into the canal, but it has not been found.

Liebknecht's Desperate Dash.

In the meantime Dr. Liebknecht was hurried into another automobile by officers and troops, and the car was headed for the Moabit prison. While going through the Tiergarten the machine was halted by a punctured tire.

Dr. Liebknecht was asked to get out by the officers, who intended to hail another automobile and continue toward the prison. While waiting he made an attempt to escape and was shot dead by soldiers, who had anticipated such an effort on his part.

This dash for liberty was the last desperate effort for freedom on the part of a man who had left prison only last October. When the automobile which was carrying him broke down, he was warned against any attempt at flight.

The officer in charge asked Dr. Liebknecht, who was bleeding from a wound in the head which he had received in being struck by a cane in the hands of some member of the mob, whether he felt able to walk a few hundred yards to the next street, where a new automobile could be found. Dr. Liebknecht said that he could do so, and the party started to walk.

When near a group of trees Dr. Liebknecht pushed aside the soldier nearest him and dashed for the underbrush in the Tiergarten. The soldiers ordered him to halt. He paid no attention to their demands and several shots were fired at him. One bullet struck him in the base of the neck, squarely between the shoulders, and his death was virtually instantaneous.

Denied Identity When Taken.

When Dr. Liebknecht was arrested at the home of a relative on Mannheimerstrasse yesterday morning he stoutly denied his identity. After being escorted to the Eden Hotel he was searched and his monogram, "K. L.," was discovered on his shirt.

His capture was due to a telephone conversation overheard by detectives in which he and Rosa Luxemburg agreed to meet at the home of a man named Marcusson in the suburb of Wilmersdorf. Marcusson's home, the police say, has long been one of the gathering places of the Spartacides.

The Government announced today that the circumstances attending the deaths of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg would be investigated and that punishment would be meted out if it appeared that the custodians of either victim had neglected their duty or had any part in the tragedy.

Bolsheviki Hold Bremen, Cuxhaven, and Duesseldorf

BERLIN, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—While the Spartacide revolt in Berlin has been at least temporarily crushed, the German Bolsheviki appear to be in full control in Bremen, "the republic of Cuxhaven," and Düsseldorf.

The "Brunswick Republic" is also in the hands of the radicals, who, while ready to protect the results of next Sunday's elections, in other respects share Spartacide views.

Martial law has been declared at Bremen and the counter-revolutionists have been threatened with summary execution.

The Cuxhaven proletariat rulers have also occupied the Government of the District of Hadeln. All the officials, city employes, and teachers have presented an ultimatum to the People's Commissioners, demanding the repeal of the decree constituting the new republic.

The Brunswick Government, whose President is a tailor named Morges, continues in open rebellion against the National Government.

BERLIN, Jan. 15, (via Copenhagen.)—The advertising sections of the Berlin newspapers today contain nothing but advertisements of campaign meetings and party proclamations, some of which, especially those of the reactionary parties, fill a whole page each.

It is quite evident that the reactionaries hope to profit from the weakness displayed by the Government toward the Spartacides and doubtless the Government has lost considerably even with the laboring and middle classes, but judging from reports from all over the country not the reactionaries but the German Democratic Party is the gainer.

The reactionaries, dethroned from their despotic position, which never brooked opposition, prove to be very clumsy politicians, unable even to keep their sinister plans until time for action arrives. The tone of their proclamation reminds one too strongly of the old days of Kaiserism.

This is how Field Marshal von Worysch, whom the Lokal-Anzeiger hails as the defender of the Silesian frontier, concludes his command to vote the reactionary ticket:

"It needs a strong hand to restore order. The present Government does not possess it, which is proved by its attitude toward the new enemy in the East. Therefore whoever loves his Silesia must not vote for the Socialist but the German National People's Party candidate. Just listen only once more to old honest Worysch. He means well."

Alliance Against Democrats.

Until the result of the elections in Bavaria, Baden, and Würtemberg became known the reactionaries looked at the Christian People's Party, the former Centrists, as a secret partner, but those elections having proved the Centrists' strength to be far less than had been expected, the National People's Party, the former Pan German organization, and the former Conservatives have openly joined ranks with the Christian People's Party to save what they can and make a united stand against the Socialists and Democrats.

The Government, feeling that the Socialist Party has lost a great deal of prestige with the masses by its vacillating attitude toward the Spartacides, at this late hour is making public a new bill, taxing war profits in the most radical manner, which will doubtless find favor with a majority of the people. The bill taxes profits progressively, beginning with 10 per cent. on profits amounting to more than 10,000 marks, and ending with 100 per cent. on any increase of fortune amounting to more than 500,000 marks. The highest war profits permitted to remain in the hands of the profiteers will amount to 199,500 marks.

TREVES, Jan. 15.—"The natural barrier which will protect civilization is the Rhine," was a pregnant sentence uttered by Marshal Foch in an interview with American war correspondents which is full of meaning for America and Americans.

Furthermore, its full meaning is this: "The Rhine is the common barrier of the Allies, of precisely those who united to save civilization. The Rhine is the guarantee of peace for all the nations who have shed their blood in the cause of liberty."

In America's reception of these statements may be wrapped up the story of the role the Americans will play in European politics—world politics, if one pleases—after their last war task is done.

Marshal Foch's speech may give the American people a better grasp of the great task before the Peace Commissioners, who must shape America's stand so as to support America's position as an agent of world liberty, and who at the same time are bound to respect the traditions to which America was born and under which she has grown to full stature.

Marshal Foch's statement was made just after he had come from the first meeting of the Peace Delegates. What Foch said to American correspondents is what he says to the Peace Conference, and one knows how Clemenceau and the ruling statesmen of France rely on Marshal Foch's judgment.

America will receive with glad ears and hearts the Marshal's praise of our fighting men. She will think seriously of the momentous proposition which Marshal Foch today suggested that the correspondents place before the American people.

"It is the using of the Rhine that must impose fear on the Germans, lest they repeat their assault of 1914," says Marshal Foch.

Americans may well ask, How long shall the Allies "use" the Rhine, how long shall Americans "use" the Rhine? That is, perhaps, the largest question before Americans today, perhaps the largest question in its potentialities that they were ever called on to answer.

Marshal Foch received the correspondents in his train at Treves, where he had come to attend the meeting of the Armistice Commission. He read a prepared address.

For Peace to Match Price Paid.

TREVES, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—It is the conviction of Marshal Foch that the Rhine must be made the barrier between Germany and France. He expressed this clearly today when he received American newspaper correspondents. The Marshal is here in connection with the meeting concerning the extension of the German armistice.

Marshal Foch pointed out the difficulties that had been overcome, and said that peace must be commensurate with the price of victory. Germany now was beaten, he added, but with her resources, especially in men, recuperation in a comparatively short time was quite possible. It was now the duty of the Allies to prevent further aggressions.

Marshal Foch praised the work of the American troops and said that General Pershing had asked that the American forces be concentrated for an attack on one sector. The allied Generalissimo admitted that the Argonne-Meuse front, where the Americans began their offensive on Sept. 26, was a "sector hard to tackle." The Marshal said that he had told General Pershing:

"Your men have the devil's own

Full Peace Conference Will Open at 3 P. M. Today; President Wilson to Sit on the Right of Clemenceau

PARIS, Jan. 17, (Associated Press.)—The scene is set for the opening of the Peace Congress at 3 P. M. tomorrow with impressive ceremony befitting such an occasion.

Final preparations were concluded today in the beautiful Salle de la Paix at the Foreign Office, where the Congress will meet, and the green table now awaits its guests.

When the delegates are seated around the great horseshoe conference table Raymond Poincaré, President of the Republic, will make his entry into the hall with an escort of Premiers and take his place in the presiding officer's chair at the head of the table.

The opening address of M. Poincaré, in welcoming the Congress, will sound the glories of the war just won and tell of the work of reconstruction entrusted to the Congress.

It is likely that President Poincaré's greetings will call for response by a foreign representative, in which case President Wilson may address the gathering for the United States and the other countries represented.

With the conclusion of M. Poincaré's address and the response, the session of the congress will be declared to be open, and Premier Clemenceau will take the presiding officer's chair, as the head of the French delegation. President Wilson will sit at the right of M. Clemenceau; Premier Lloyd George will sit at the left.

Such address as M. Clemenceau will make will be brief, and mainly in the nature of an initiation of the procedure of the congress, such as the selection of officers, Chairman, Vice Chairman, and General Secretary.

The report of the Supreme Council on the rules governing the congress will then be presented. These were elaborated at the sessions concluded tonight. It is expected that they will be approved without discussion and that on their approval they will be made public. This, and possibly some further adjustments in the representations of the smaller countries, will probably embrace all the work to be undertaken at the opening ceremony. The main issues will await the business sessions.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 17. — The Social Demokraten of Stockholm learns that Maxim Litvinoff, the former Bolshevist Ambassador in London, has on behalf of the Russian Soviet sent a message to President Wilson offering to cease its world propaganda if the Entente will enter into peace negotiations.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—It seems most probable this afternoon, on the eve of the opening of the Peace Conference, that after President Poincaré's speech and other ornamental beginnings the first real business taken up will be that of Bolshevism in Russia and elsewhere in Europe rather than the question of the League of Nations as originally planned. This for the same reason that if the house you have got to live in for some time to come is on fire you will devote yourself to putting out the flames before examining the architect's plans for the house you hope to live in later on.

There are two phases to this Russian question: First, that of going to the Bolsheviki with the armed forces of all the Allies—in other words, intervention; second, that of having the Bolsheviki come to the Peace Conference to state their case through delegates.

The first plan seems to have gone into the international discard. America will positively not be a party to military intervention on a large scale. France is not in position to send large armies there, because of her own interior political and industrial situation, and she cannot act in the matter without the full co-operation of the other allies, which is not forthcoming.

Therefore the form in which Bolshevism will first come before the conference is in all probability the proposal made by Lloyd George that delegates of the Bolsheviki as well as the representatives of the other Russian factions be received. The attitude of two delegations on this proposal is already known in advance, and there is shrewd plausible speculation as to how the others will stand.

In this connection only five powers are considered as having any voice in

OTHERS FOR LIBERALISM

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Ralph Pulitzer, publisher of The New York World, who is leaving for New York tomorrow, has given me the following statement:

"Today, on the eve of the Peace Conference, the allied Governments are suffering all the vicissitudes of victory. The solidarity of a common danger has departed.

"The joint instinct of self-preservation has given place to conflicting aims of self-aggrandizement. The vanities, cupidities, and pugnacities which masquerade as 'national aspirations' are seething beneath the serenity of the Quai d'Orsay.

"If the Peace Conference is allowed to remain a conference between governments instead of between peoples it is apt to degenerate into a saturnalia of statesmanship which will crown a war to end war with a peace to end peace.

"Three forces are laboring for such a sinister peace: (1,) the bourbonism of politicians, instinctive or opportunist, playing for advancement on the chauvinism of the people; (2,) the materialism of industrial and commercial circles appealing to the business classes; (3,) the militarism of professional soldiers appealing to pride or fear of imperialism and Jingoes.

"Fortunately, there are also three forces which, if properly used, will tend powerfully to protect the world from such a 'peace.' They are: (1,) the inarticulate masses of the nations whose hearts' desire is the perpetuation of peace and who place such peace above the most brilliant technical triumphs of their statesmen; (2,) the liberal and thoughtful minds of these nations, among whom appear to be a minority of their statesmen who have outgrown the discredited old tricks of trade—balance of power, strategic frontiers, punitive indemnities, economic isolation—and who wish to substitute the confessed experiment of a League of Nations and who support other detailed settlements of peace in a liberal and progressive spirit in harmony with such a league; (3,) President Wilson, whose moral initiative and material disinterestedness make him the accepted leader and mouthpiece of the inarticulate masses and the rallying point of liberal minds of all countries.

"Without national unity, it seems safe to assert that lacking the potentiality of President Wilson's physical presence here his fourteen points, which with one qualification were the bases of the armistice, accepted by the

COUNCIL MAKES CONCESSION

But Reserves Right to Hold Executive Sessions When Necessary.

3 MEN FOR EACH COUNTRY

Long, Official Statement of Considerations Forbidding Full Publicity Is Issued.

ANOTHER SEAT TO BELGIUM

She and Serbia to Have Three Delegates Each—Two for Kingdom of Hedjaz.

PARIS, Jan. 17, (Associated Press.)—All is in readiness for the opening tomorrow afternoon of the Peace Congress, with representatives of the press in attendance.

At today's meeting of the Supreme War Council it was decided that the newspaper men should be admitted to the meetings of the full conference, but that on necessary occasions the deliberations might be held in secret. It was determined in reaching this decision limiting the activities of the press that, while the conferees did not underrate the importance of public opinion, the process of reaching a favorable solution of the task before the congress would be hindered if discussion of every disputed question were open by a public declaration by each delegation of its own national point of view.

It has been tentatively decided that three representatives of the press of each of the allied and associated powers will be admitted to the conference.

The conference will probably be organized in a manner similar to the American Congress, with secret committee meetings to discuss delicate questions, with formal open sessions and with executive sessions, as in the United States Senate.

It was at the instance of President Wilson that the Council yesterday decided to hold in abeyance the proposed rule for virtual secrecy beyond bare official communiqués, and to request representatives of the British, American, and Italian press to present some plan for reporting the peace meetings.

The following official communication was issued this evening:

"The President of the United States of America, the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of the allied great powers, assisted by the Japanese Ambassadors in Paris and London, met at the Quai d'Orsay today, in the morning from 10:30 to 12:30 P. M., and in the afternoon from 3 to 5:30.

"The French President of the Council read out the terms of the renewal of the armistice.

Three Delegates for Belgium.

"The meeting decided to give Belgium and Serbia three delegates each at the conference. It was decided also that the King of the Hedjaz should be represented by two delegates. The question of the number of delegates for the various powers thus was finally established.

"The program for the opening conference, which will take place at the Foreign Office tomorrow at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, was afterward arranged.

"The meeting finally examined into the question of the publicity to be given to the discussions of the conference, and unanimously approved the following text, to be handed to the press in the name of the five great powers:

"'The representatives of the allied and associated powers have given earnest consideration to the question of publicity for the proceedings of the Peace Conference. They are anxious that the public, through the press, should have the fullest information compatible with the safeguarding of the supreme interest of all, which is that a just and honorable settlement should be arrived at with the minimum of delay.

Analogy of Cabinet Meetings.

"'It is, however, obvious that publicity with regard to the preliminary conversations now proceeding must be subject to the limitations necessarily imposed by the difficult and delicate nature of their object. The proceedings of a Peace Conference are far more analogous to the meetings of a Cabinet than to those of a Legislature. Nobody has ever suggested that Cabinet meetings should be held in public, and if they were so held the work of Government would become impossible.

"'One reason why Cabinets are held in private is in order that differences may be reconciled and agreements reached before the stage of publicity is begun. The essence of the democratic method is not that the deliberations of a Government be conducted in public, but that its conclusions be subject to the consideration of a popular chamber and to free and open discussion on the platform and by the press.

"'Representatives of the allied and associated powers are holding conversations in order to solve questions which affect the vital interests of many nations and upon which they may at present hold many diverse views. These deliberations cannot proceed by the method of a majority vote. No nation can be committed except by the free vote of its own delegates. The conclusions arrived at in these consultations, therefore, can only be formed by the difficult process of reaching an agreement among all.

"'This vital process would only be hindered if the discussion of every disputed question were opened by a public declaration by each delegation of its own national point of view. Such a declaration would in many cases be followed by premature public controversy.

"'This would be serious enough if it were confined to controversy between parties within each State. It might be extremely dangerous if, as would often be inevitable, it resulted in controversy between nations.

"'Moreover, such public declarations would render the give-and-take on the part of the delegates themselves, which is essential to a successful negotiation, a matter of infinitely greater difficulty. It is also extremely important that the settlement should be not only just but speedy.

"'Every belligerent power is anxious for the early conclusion of peace in order that its armies may be demobilized.

Where Publicity Means Delay.

"'If premature publicity is given to the negotiations, the proceedings of the Peace Conference would be interminably protracted and the delegates would be forced to speak not only of the business before the conference but to concern themselves with the controversies which had been raised by the account of their proceedings outside.

"'Finally, there will often be very strong reasons against announcing the conclusions of the conversations as they are arrived at. The representatives of a nation may be willing to give their assent on one point, only provided that they receive a concession on another point which has not yet been discussed. It will not be possible to judge of the wisdom and justice of the peace settlement until it can be viewed as a whole, and premature announcements might lead to misapprehensions and anxiety as to the ultimate results for which there was no real foundation.

"'In calling attention, however, to these necessary limitations of publicity, these representatives of the powers do not underrate the importance of carrying public opinion with them in the vast task by which they are confronted. They recognize that unless public opinion approves of the results of their labors they will be nugatory.

"'This reasoning applies with conclusive force to the present conversations between the representatives of the great powers.

"'With regard to the full conferences the following rule was adopted.

"'Representatives of the press shall be admitted to the meetings of the full conference, but upon necessary occasions the deliberations of the conference may be held in camera.'"

The Supreme War Council ended its sessions at 5:30 o'clock, having completed its work. It will not meet again before the opening of the Peace Congress tomorrow.

Noulens Reports on Russia.

Joseph Noulens, the French Ambassador to Russia, entered the Foreign Office just before the meeting, and it developed later that he was invited by the council to meet with it and express his views on the Russian situation.

The council at its morning session received a statement of the actions taken by the press representatives of the various countries regarding the proposed restrictions of the news of the conference proceedings. The statement set forth that the American, British, Italian, Serbian, and Belgian correspondents asked the admission of the press to the sittings of the council. The French press delegation, on the other hand, was unanimous in taking the contrary position.

The resolution adopted by the press representatives of America, Great Britain, Italy, and the smaller nations acting with them was also presented.

The separate representation accorded the British colonies in the Peace Conference having unfavorably impressed the French colonial world, the Havas Agency has issued a note pointing out that by reason of the interchangeability of the delegates the French Government can, when necessary, call in specially qualified plenipotentiaries, and that thus the different colonial problems will be discussed with all the necessary safeguards.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The Peace Conference made its first concession to public opinion tonight in the matter of publicity. The representatives of the great powers, after considering the demands of the press that the padlock be removed, voted to open the door a few inches.

The number of press representatives was not decided, but the delegates are talking of fifteen, giving three each to each of the four Big Powers and three to the other Powers. For the opening session tomorrow they may let in all the press, but will decide this tomorrow.

PRESS DEMANDS MADE ON COUNCIL

Unanimous for Publicity in Principle, but Differing as to Details.

FRENCH IN THE MINORITY

Refused to Demand Direct Representation for Definite Number of Newspaper Men.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Wireless and Cable Dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Practically all activities of the Peace Conference deliberations are at a standstill. The effect of the protest made by the press representatives, particularly those of the United States and Great Britain, against the attempt to keep from them information of what takes place around the conference table, except such as the conference chooses to give out in colorless communiqués, was apparent in the interest displayed by the allied plenipotentiaries.

The announcement was made that the conference devoted itself today to consideration of the suggestions made by the newspaper delegations in conformity with the request of the conference after the plenipotentiaries had begun to realize the indignation aroused over what is designated in some quarters as an attempt to gag the press and conclude a peace treaty in secret.

The committee appointed by the newspaper correspondents of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and the smaller nationalities sat until 3 o'clock this morning seeking to reach unanimous agreement on a plan for press representation at the conference to be presented to that body for action.

The American correspondents felt that their interests were more intimately involved than those of the press of any other country because the closure resolution adopted by the Council on Wednesday appeared to mean a deathblow to the first of Wilson's fourteen points, which asserted the principle of "open covenants of peace, openly arrived at."

First American Demand Rejected.

Their representatives went to the press conference with instructions to ask that ten representatives of each of the allied countries be admitted to the Peace Conference. The French newspaper men refused to agree to this or any representation whatever, and the Americans, British, Italians, and smaller nationalities decided to recommend that not less than five representatives of each country be admitted.

All, however, including the French, agreed to a declaration of principles which called for official communiqués as complete as possible, the abolition of the censorship for all allied countries, and permission to the plenipotentiaries to have free communication with newspaper representatives.

Fear of Irresponsible Journalism.

Jan. 16.—It would be an exaggeration to say that publicity remains as great a bugbear in the eyes of modern diplomacy as it was half a century and more ago, out those defending the restrictions on news transmission assert that it is still a fact that unrestrained and irresponsible journalism may make the already difficult task of the peace delegates more arduous. Responsible journalism, it is contended, may have to suffer from the fact that thoughtless or premature publication may prejudice a good cause.

L'Humanité's publication of the Pichon statements has been followed by pointed assertions which, it is charged here, have created no little trouble.

On the other hand, it is contended that such publications are so few as to be negligible, especially when compared with the great bulk of the Peace Conference news published in France, America, and other allied countries.

But, it is asserted, considerations of this character brought about the compromise decision of Wednesday. There being no censorship, it was felt, the defenders of the conference resolution say, that some measures to safeguard the conference from premature and ill-advised publications respecting matters still under discussion by the delegates was necessary.

The plan of issuing annotated minutes of the conference proceedings, which had been approved by the delegates of all the powers concerned, was hit upon as likely at least to draw a ring fence around the deliberations and to some extent guarantee the results arrived at against hasty and ill-informed comment. The theory was advanced that by making the official annotations exhaustive and specific, which each power concerned, with the consent of the rest, would be enabled to do, the public would be kept adequately informed of the progress of the conference and its lines, and responsible comment would likewise be indicated.

Resolutions of the Press Conference.

PARIS, Jan. 17, (Associated Press.)—Representatives of the allied and American press at their meeting Thursday unanimously adopted the following resolution:

First—It is essential to insure full publicity for the peace negotiations.

Second—The official communiqués shall be as complete as possible.

Third—In addition to the communiqués, full summaries of the day's proceedings should be issued, not necessarily for textual publication, but for the guidance of the press.

Fourth—There should be no interference with free intercourse between the delegates and responsible journalists.

Fifth—Journalists should be permitted to attend the formal sessions of the conference.

Sixth—It is recommended that there be equal treatment of the allied press by the abolition of the censorship in all allied countries.

All except the French delegates also agreed to these recommendations:

First—There should be direct representation of the press at the sittings of the Peace Conference.

Second—The press of each of the great powers should be represented by not less than five delegates, and each of the smaller powers who actively participated in the war should be represented proportionately.

REBUFF ALLIED ENVOYS.

Germans at Bialystok Won't Receive Col. Wade and Lieut. Foster.

WARSAW, Jan. 15, (Associated Press.)—The Germans have refused to receive at Bialystok Lieutenant Reginald Foster, a political agent of the American Peace Commission, and Colonel Wade of the British Army, who went to Lapy on the Polish frontier to confer with the commander of the German Tenth Army. It was their object to persuade the Germans to hold the frontier against the Bolsheviki.

Lieutenant Foster and Colonel Wade received the reply that, if they attempted to pass over the frontier, they would be regarded as enemies by the German sentinels. Foster and Wade have reported the action of the Germans to their respective Governments.

SENATORS VOICE SECRECY PROTESTS

Borah, Williams, and Lewis Applaud President's Stand for Open Peace Conference.

READY TO BACK HIM UP

Senator Johnson Would Withdraw Army and Leave Policing to the European Forces.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—In the course of a speech today on the necessity of publicity in connection with the Peace Conference Senator Borah said:

"I am perfectly sure that there are those who differ with me, but I regard it as one of the most vital propositions before the congress, and we at least ought to permit it to be known, that we are in full sympathy with the views of the American delegation with reference to publicity in the proceedings at Versailles.

"I cannot say that it is a surprise that a movement has been inaugurated in favor of secrecy, and yet I had supposed from the announcements not only in this country and in Europe that more consideration would be given to the question than seems to have been given to it. It seems to have been disposed of without much discussion.

"When the President delivered his address to Congress upon the 8th of January, the first proposition looking to the permanent peace of the world reads as follows:

"'Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind, but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view.'

"There can be no possible construction placed upon this language other than that it was intended to cover just such proceedings as are now being initiated at the Peace Conference.

"'Open covenants of peace.' Had the statement stopped there, it might be said that it was intended to cover the simple proposition of publishing the covenants of peace after they had been negotiated and concluded but the President was careful to say: 'Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at.' And the question now is, whether or not that proposition is to be utterly discarded and disregarded in the proceedings at Versailles. It would seem that they have practically concluded upon a program adverse to this proposition."

People Opposed to Secrecy.

Senator Borah quoted some news dispatches of the last few days bearing on the action of the Peace Conference in regard to publicity.

"I observe by the press dispatches," he continued, "that the President has taken up this matter and that it may be reopened for consideration, and it is indicated in the press dispatches this morning that the ultimate result may be open sessions of the conference. It is by reason of this last item in the news that I felt disposed to say a word because I should like to have the President know, and have the delegates representing this country at the conference know, that the great majority of the American people expect those proceedings to be open and that all details of substantial matters shall be made known as the Congress proceeds in its deliberations.

"Secret diplomacy has left the germ of conflict and of war in every great peace congress in the last 230 years. There has not been a single peace congress but there has been left for future contention suspicion, prejudice, and feeling resulting from secret negotiations and secret proceedings. If we are proposing to take a correct and accurate step toward permanent peace, the people who fought and won this war must know the conditions upon which it is being settled. It will be a distinct discouragement, not only to the people of this country, but to venture to say, to the masses of the world over, if at the first initiatory step the same bid practices of absolute government are reinaugurated and readopted by a congress which comes together as a result of a fight to make the world safe for democracy."

After Senator Borah had spoken Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi said he was glad that at least one voice had gone up on the other side of the Senate chamber to hold up the President's hands instead of "pulling them down."

"Yet, at the very instant when the Peace Conference assembled in Europe, the first of these points of peace is deliberately violated, and instead of open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, we are given a communiqué which we know, from experience of the last four years, is made merely to cover up what has been done and which does not state all the facts of what is transpiring," he said.

"I think that if I had the power I would have the Senate take some affirmative action, something by which we may say affirmatively that we insist, as a part of the treaty-making power, that there shall be open discussions, or at least information given out daily, of all that is transpiring, that the truth shall be known to all our people.

"There is another aspect of this thing that appeals to me. It is humiliating and irritating to me to have the President of the United States bottled up in any kind of a conference. It is humiliating and irritating to me to have our President enmeshed in the entanglements of secret European diplomacy, and to have him sitting there as a member of conference with his lips tied and unable to say to the press and the people of the United States exactly what is transpiring there.

"The President may fight his way through this peculiar entanglement and this net of secret diplomacy, and I will be very glad to lend him such humble support and give him such cheer as can be given by one member of this body. It emphasizes, in the last analysis, the necessity for what has been suggested upon this floor of an American policy respecting all that is transpiring across the water today.

"I hope that out of it will come one thing, at least: that with the least possible delay the men in khaki, who represent the United States across the sea, be brought home at the earliest possible moment. I hope that out of it, too, will come the determination on the part of the Senate and the Government of the United States to leave to other nations, the nations beyond the seas, the policing of the world hereafter, and to bring home our troops, wherever they may be, as soon as our present obligations shall have been fulfilled."

PRESIDENT IS OPTIMISTIC.

Cables Civic Forum League of Nations Prospects Are 'Most Favorable'

President Wilson yesterday cabled Henry Clews, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Civic Forum, that the prospects for an agreement on a League of Nations were at present most favorable.

The President's message, which was in answer to one sent by the Forum, informing him that a mass meeting under its auspices here last Friday night had indorsed the idea, read as follows:

"I received with the deepest interest and gratification the action of the mass meeting at Carnegie Hall and am glad to report that the prospects for an agreement upon a League of Nations are at present most favorable.

WOODROW WILSON.

SOCIALISTS TAUNT "TIGER."

Clemenceau Denies Deputy's Charge of Secret Diplomacy.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Premier Clemenceau spoke this afternoon in the Chamber of Deputies on the decision to keep proceedings of the Peace Conference secret. He had been interpellated by several Socialist Deputies and had asked that discussion of their questions be postponed, when he said:

"We have not yet found a final form in which communications from the Peace Conference will be made, but in a general way the principle of publicity has met with favor."

Here he was interrupted by Deputy Mistral, who said: "Except by you, M. Clemenceau."

"I have the honor emphatically to deny that statement," the Premier rejoined. "We all should like to keep proceedings secret so that it may not be said that such and such a country made such and such a proposition which has been fought by such and such other Governments. We are unanimous in thinking that that might create a bad feeling. We think that in the preliminary conversations we must, at all costs, arrive at an agreement so that there shall be a solid front at the general discussion.

"If we wish to form a League of Nations, writing phrases is insufficient. There must be a prevailing spirit which will insure the life of this League of Nations. We would like to finish this war by a full agreement of the civilized nations for a supreme ideal of a better humanity."

FUTURE OF LIMBURG EXCITES DUTCH PRESS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 16.—The Dutch press is still excited over the question of Limburg, and two articles appearing in the Paris Matin and the Petit Parisien, which are quoted liberally, have not allayed its fears.

The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant remarks that on the day of the first meeting of the Peace Conference the two most widely circulated French papers published articles explaining to the French nation that Limburg must be taken from Holland and the Scheldt frontier altered, which they say merely means a violation of Holland's rights and a serious weakening of her international position. The Courant, discussing the Matin's four-column article, accompanied by a map with the title "Changes About to be Made in Europe," objects to the proposition to take over the Scheldt territory.

The Catholic Tijd says that there are new signs which give reason to suppose that not Belgium, but France, is behind the movement to annex Limburg.

The ardent desire to see President Wilson in Holland is doubtless expressed in connection with this burning question.

The case of Van Groendal, the member of the first Chamber who is accused of treason in favoring the annexation of Limburg to Belgium, continues to be the subject of discussion and official investigation. According to the Limburgsche Koerier, Van Groendal said that most Limburgers desired separation from Holland, as Limburg did not belong to the latter, but that geographically and ethnologically it was a part of Belgium, and that propaganda in favor of annexation showed this. Moreover, the towns of Wert and Maastricht, he said, were in favor of this plan. It further asserted that when Van Groendal was told that he should have stopped the propaganda he replied that, on the contrary, it must be encouraged as much as possible.

DUTCH WANT TO SEE WILSON.

Chamber Cheers Formal Announcement of Invitation.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 16.—The idea that there is still a possibility of President Wilson coming to Holland appears to be prevalent in many quarters.

In spite of the President's answer that he did not know if he would have time to come, the Second Chamber today applauded the Government's invitation to President Wilson amid great enthusiasm. The President of the Chamber stated that it would be considered a great honor for the country should Mr. Wilson be able to come.

This statement also was greeted with loud applause, although the revolutionary socialist, Wynkoop, interrupted the speaker and wished to lodge a protest, saying he could not take part in the demonstration in favor of the invitation. He was informed that no discussion could be opened on the question. Wynkoop, however, again insisted that he wished to open such a discussion. The motion was not carried, however.

Belgium Wants Three Delegates.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 17.—The Belgian Cabinet has decided to send to the Allied Governments a strong protest against a reduction in the number of Belgian delegates to the Peace Conference. The Supreme Council has fixed the number of Belgian delegates at two, whereas Belgium expected to have three.

GERMAN RADIO FOR DUTCH.

Telefunken Company to Build Station to Reach East Indies.

Details of the giant wireless telegraph station to be erected in Holland by German interests for the purpose of facilitating communication between Holland and her East Indian possessions, according to a contract concluded Sept. 23 between the Dutch Government and the Telefunken Company of Berlin, are found in a recent issue of Commerce Reports.

Paul L. Edwards, Commercial Attaché at The Hague, reports that the receiving station of the new plant, which is expected to cost about $2,000,000, will be at Boarneer, in the Province of North Brabant, and the sending station will be located on a hill at Kootwijk, Province of Gelderland, near Apeldoorn, some thirty-five miles from the receiving station. The sending station will consist of six steel towers, each 210 meters (about 688 feet) in height. The Radio Nieuws says that the Kootwijk sending station will have the same reach as the German station at Nauen. The installation will be able easily to transmit to and receive from a station of like dimensions and capacity which is shortly to be built at Bandoeng, Java. The distance between the Kootwijk and the Bandoeng station is about 6,830 miles.

It is understood that an engineer representing the Telefunken Company is in Java with a view to supervising the construction of the station at Bandoeng. De Nieuwe Courant said some time ago that all of the apparatus and raw material for the construction of the Bandoeng station were in Berlin ready for shipment at the first opportunity. The apparatus for the station in the Netherlands is not yet completed, but parts are already said to be arriving from Germany.

President Wilson Confers the Decoration on Thirteen Generals.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—President Wilson has bestowed the American Distinguished Service Cross on the following French Generals:

DOCTORS NEEDED IN SIBERIA.

Nurses and Medical Supplies Also Required, Dr. Teusler Says.

VLADIVOSTOK, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—There is urgent need for doctors, nurses, and medical supplies in Western Siberia, declared Dr. Arthur Rudolph Teusler, head of the Czechoslovak Medical Service, who arrived here today from Ekaterinburg and Omsk. The spread of typhus and the coming of 200,000 Russian soldiers formerly imprisoned in Austria and Germany, the doctor said, will tax every agency to the utmost.

Dr. Teusler directed the establishment of Red Cross hospitals at Omsk, Ekaterinburg, Cheliabinsk, and Tiumen. At Ekaterinburg the public bathhouse was transformed into a typhus hospital. The tide of former prisoners already has begun to flow into Western Siberia and probably will continue two months.

FORCES AT WAR IN PEACE CONCLAVE

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Allies, would not have the remotest chance of surviving obliteration or at least mutilation at the hands of the elder statesmen of the conference, and the war, which began with one scrap of paper, would have ended with fourteen.

"Fortunately, President Wilson is here and his preparatory work among the peoples of the Allies and possibly among the statesmen of some of them has been well performed.

"He has, too, an uncongenial but powerful ally in the growing menace of Bolshevism. This menace seems likely to introduce among the allied statesman the reintegrating factor of a common fear which the prostration of Germany removed. It is also likely that the practical radicalism of Bolshevism may make the present liberalism seem more moderate and less theoretical than it has hitherto seemed to many of the allied statesmen.

"Up to the present these men have had as alternatives the President's progressiveness and their own conservatism. Now, with the alternatives threatening to consist of their own conservatism and Bolshevism, they may well look upon American principles no longer as an extreme but as a desirable compromise.

"The two most vital and most urgent of these projects seem to me to be the League of Nations and food for Germany.

"A league of nations, accepted in enough detail to be the catchbasin for a multitude of embittering international dilemmas, should be essentially a preliminary and not a sequence to the rest of the peace terms. This alone will prevent the present distrust and rivalry among the Allies from making the Peace Conference interminable. This alone will prevent the conference from engendering more resentment among the allied Governments than now exists between them and the Central Powers. The present situation here shows that Premier Clemenceau's claim for a balance of victorious powers is more chimerical than any league of nations that President Wilson ever dreamed of. At the present moment there exists not a balance but a vestige of power, and a peace built in this spirit upon ancient lines would render the Central Powers an impotent foe to all but a potent ally of some.

"No one who has not recently talked with the soldiers and civilians of various nations in their own countries and in the occupied zone in Germany can have any idea of the kaleidoscopic shifting which has taken place in sympathies and anticipations, not only among statesmen but among officers and privates and civilians by the millions.

"Many of these shiftings are no doubt superficial. Most of them may be unfair, but they make imperative a swift settlement in a spirit of conciliation which a league of nations may, indeed, not produce, but which no other plan even promises.

"As a league of nations is the paramount principle, pressing for quick adoption, so a modification of the food embargo on Germany and her allies is the most urgent policy. While the majority of the allied Governments are considering justice in terms of retribution to Germany, they are paltering with a condition which threatens them all alike—just and unjust, victors and vanquished.

"What is the use of a painstaking research into the dividing line between malnutrition and starvation in Germany? It is not going to placate a hungry stomach to prove to it statistically that it is undernourished but not famished. Nor will a man who feels as if he and his family are starving be dissuaded from discontent and disorder by proving to him that his hunger is but a just punishment for his sins. As long as the German people feel hungry and fear that organized government is unable to relieve that hunger, they are likely to become the dupes of the organized anarchy which beckons to them from Russia.

"The present allied policy is nothing more or less than isolating a healthy criminal in a contagious ward with a diseased maniac, with the expectation of subsequently treating one and trying the other before a jury predisposed to the disease.

"It may be hard to extend to Germany the degree of seeming forgiveness which goes with feeding her; but, leaving higher ethics out of the question, it is the politic thing to do.

"The apparent victory of the Ebert Government over the Bolshevist group does not prove that the spirit of order is more powerful than the spirit of hunger in Germany. It appears to demonstrate, on the contrary, that Ebert was saved by the popular belief that his Government would be able to secure allied food for the people and that the Spartacide group would not. Disappoint that belief, and who can tell to what extremes reaction may carry Germany?

"A third problem that faces the Allies is the Russian problem itself. It seems to me that just as a league of nations, which many want to put last, should come first, so the Russian problem, which is now discussed as coming first, might well come last. With Germany offered food for the present and some degree of hope for the future by the letter and the spirit of a league of nations, it is very improbable that Bolshevism would make any headway there.

"With enlightened sympathy extended to the aspirations of the masses of workers by one of the various sorts of international committees, which have been suggested in connection with the League of Nations, it is highly improbable that Bolshevism would skip Germany and break out to any serious extent in the allied countries. There would remain the problem of its spread by conquest to the small neighboring peoples, but a League of Nations could work at the problem more disinterestedly and, therefore, more efficiently, than could the organized rivalry of victors, at present in session in Paris.

"One thing, at least, seems clear, and that is that the most certain way of stimulating the spread of Bolshevism to the rest of Europe and, perhaps, to our own country, is to leave Germany hungry, to discard the League of Nations, to force a peace settlement on the ancient and reactionary lines upon the liberal masses of the various nations, to ignore their desire for some method of international consideration for their international industrial aspirations, and, finally, to attempt to suppress Bolshevism in its own country by force of arms.

"Finally, we face the question as to how these various liberal New World solutions of grave Old World problems before us can be achieved.

"President Wilson at the head of a mission, maladroitly constructed and, as concerns the members who accompanied him abroad, mediocre in force and talent, compared with the statesmen they are meeting at the Peace Conference, has a precarious task. He has well performed his preparatory work among the peoples of the chief allies. They are in closer sympathy with him than they are with most of their own leaders.

"If he allows precedent to keep him closeted with those leaders and to keep their peoples and our own locked out his task seems hopeless of accomplishment. If he boldly breaks out through precedent and takes the issue between liberalism and reaction to the peoples of the nations, as he has so often taken the issues of less world-wide importance to our own people, I believe he will win his victory for humanity and peace."

PEACE CONGRESS MAY HEAR REDS

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

the matter—America, England, France, Italy, and Japan. England is already committed by her Premier to receive Bolshevist delegates. France is absolutely opposed to it, as declared by Pichon in his note rejecting Lloyd George's proposal and subsequent utterances.

As to the other three, speculation among diplomats is this: Italy will stand with France because Italy has fears of Bolshevism within her own borders, and Sonnino's only method is to crush that to which he is opposed.

On the other hand, there is strongly held opinion that America will support Lloyd George's proposal. This opinion is based on the belief that President Wilson is convinced that Bolshevism cannot be conquered by troops, and the only alternative in sight is parleying.

Thus far speculation accounts for all but Japan, but that country also is placed by prophets in the group with America and England as against France and Italy; that is, three nations favoring reception of Bolshevist delegates and two opposed.

The prediction as to the lineup of Japan is based on the assumption that in matters not directly opposed to her own interests she will support her ally Great Britain. But it is not safe to jump to an apparently obvious conclusion from that numerical statement of the case and assume that the Bolsheviki will win all the recognition that Lloyd George has proposed to give them.

For it is not the purpose of the conference delegates to allow things in dispute to be settled by mere majority votes, leaving minorities on this or that issue merely defeated by being outnumbered. On the contrary, it is hoped to argue each issue out to a conclusion that will receive unanimous indorsement, after the process of argument with give and take compromise. Such is to be the principle adhered to in each controversy arising throughout the conference.

For example, in this specific matter of Bolshevism it is a reasonably safe inference that instead of rushing the thing through by weight of majority and deciding out of hand on a vote of three against two, a conclusion will be postponed, pending investigation by all the powers concerned, to get much more authentic information on Bolshevism than is now available.

Such an enterprise is not now such a hopeless impossibility as it has been hitherto, if the Bolsheviki are really sincere in their desire to be represented at the conference, as declared by their representative, Litvinoff. Lloyd George's proposal is no doubt based on this promise.

The suggestion from Litvinoff was that the Bolsheviki be received on condition that they cease fighting and all violence during the period of the conference.

There is room for compromise here in the opinion of those favoring the Lloyd George proposal. If the Bolsheviki are willing to cease atrocities in order to be let into the conference they may be willing to cease long enough to give the powers an opportunity to investigate and decide whether they may be let in.

REVOLT IN PETROGRAD.

Lenine Is Reported to Have Arrived in Barcelona.

HELSINGFORS, Jan. 17.—A counter-revolution has broken out in Petrograd, according to reports from Reval, and the Bolsheviki have started a general hurried retreat eastward from Esthonia.

MADRID, Jan. 17.—Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier of Russia, was among Russians who landed at Barcelona recently, according to newspapers here.

Trotsky's Brothers Escape.

GENEVA, Jan. 17.—The Swiss newspapers announce that two brothers of Léon Trotzky, the Russian Bolshevist Minister of War and Marine, who were interned in France, escaped into Switzerland yesterday near Delmont after shooting and wounding a French soldier. The younger of the brothers has been arrested and is being interrogated.

PARIS, Jan. 17, (Havas.)—A dispatch from Geneva to Le Temps says that on orders received from Berne any person in Switzerland suspected of being employed in Bolshevist propaganda is to be closely interrogated. The dispatch adds that the police of Geneva had arrived at the conclusion that certain suspected persons there were preparing to foment riots similar to those carried out in Russia and Germany.

The Lausanne police have made a number of arrests of Bolsheviki. It is said that a conspiracy was afoot to murder M. Clemenceau, the French Prime Minister.

A train taking these undesirables out of Switzerland, the dispatch continues, was due to leave Geneva for Moscow Thursday. The same train was to carry forty-five interned Russian soldiers and 400 other persons desiring to return to Russia.

EXTEND ARMISTICE ANOTHER MONTH

Germans Accept All Allied Conditions, Including Further Guarantee at Strasbourg.

PROTESTS BY ERZBERGER

Complains of "Financial and Economic Dictatorship" and Delay in Preliminary Peace.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The German armistice has been extended one month by the Commissioners, who have concluded their session at Treves.

The clauses offered by the Allies concerning agricultural implements, Russian prisoners of war, naval conditions, and the restitution of material stolen by the Germans from invaded countries were signed by the enemy delegates.

The Havas Agency announces the signature of the new clauses of the armistice as they stood concerning the surrender of German submarines ready for sea and the destruction of the submarines in course of construction which the Allied Commissioners discovered in German ports in December. The clause placing the German merchant fleet at the disposal of the Allies also was signed.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—Under the terms of the prolongation of the armistice Germany must deliver by Feb. 17 some 35,000 agricultural machines of various kinds.

As a guarantee for the fulfillment of its demands the Entente also reserves the right of occupying the sector of the Fortress of Strasbourg formed by the fortifications on the right bank of the Rhine, together with a strip of territory from five to ten kilometers in front of it.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 17.—The armistice between the Allies and Germany has been extended, the agreement to that effect being signed by Mathias Erzberger, the German Armistice Commissioner, at Treves late Wednesday, according to a Berlin dispatch received here.

The meeting between Marshal Foch and the German delegates was featured by protests by Mathias Erzberger, representing the Germans, against the status in which Germany was left during the period of the armistice. The financial and economic dictatorship of the Entente" was the theme of his main protest.

"When will you raise the blockade?" Herr Erzberger asked. "The food conditions in Germany are daily growing worse and hunger will produce a mental state which the Allies cannot desire. Your peoples themselves are not proof against a world revolution. Will the Entente undertake binding obligations respecting the return of the German prisoners of war? When will you be in a position to conclude a preliminary peace? Germany has asked six times for negotiations for a preliminary peace but has received no reply."

Herr Erzberger, who made these statements in a speech opening the proceedings, declared the Germans had fulfilled the terms of the armistice up to the limit of possibility. In the cases in which the terms had not been complied with the Entente was responsible, he insisted, especially so as regarded the delivery of transport material.

Herr Erzberger complained that freedom of movement had been impeded between the occupied territory and the rest of Germany, and he declared that the measures taken by the Allies in Alsace-Lorraine proved that France aimed to anticipate the decision of the Peace Conference by annexing the provinces without respecting the right of the people to self-determination.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Rudolf Havenstein, President of the Imperial Bank of Germany, (the Reichsbank,) has been ordered to Spa by Marshal Foch, according to a dispatch from Berlin, to attend a conference concerning the Entente financial demands on Germany.

A Copenhagen dispatch on Dec. 26, 1918, reported that Dr. Havenstein had resigned as President of the Reichsbank. However, there has been no official confirmation of the report.

NEW CABINET CRISIS DETAINS ORLANDO

Reorganization on a Larger Scale Keeps Him From Today's Paris Conference.

MILAN, Jan. 17.—Premier Orlando has been unable to leave Rome for the Peace Conference in consequence of complications in resolving the Ministerial crisis.

Changes have become inevitable on a larger scale than was expected. The latest reports say that in any case the new members of the Cabinet cannot present themselves to the King for the taking of the oath of allegiance earlier than this evening; hence Signor Orlando will necessarily be absent from the first plenary meeting of the conference tomorrow.

AIR SERVICE FOR CONFEREES.

British Delegates Will Make London-Paris Trip in Two Hours.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A regular aerial passenger service between London and Paris for the benefit of British members of the Peace Conference will be opened Monday. Several airplanes have been fitted up for this purpose. They have a comfortable cabin for two passengers, heating conditioned seats and a table, the whole inclosed with glass.

The airplanes will make the trip in two hours.

CABLES PROTEST TO WILSON.

League of Free Nations Association Demands Peace Publicity.

The League of Free Nations Association, of which Norman Hapgood is President, yesterday sent the following cablegram to President Wilson:

"League of Free Nations Association vigorously protests against announced restriction of publicity regarding Peace Conference. Distrust aroused in America greatly outweighs any possible advantage."

GERMAN ARMY DWINDLING.

500,000 or More Still Under Arms, British Experts Believe.

LONDON, Jan. 16, (British wireless service.)—There may be 500,000 German soldiers still under arms, according to estimates of experts of the Home Army. The situation in Germany is very uncertain, however, and it may be that the men still with the German colors number far above the estimate.

Should Premier Ebert maintain the upper hand in Germany, the men still held in the army would be freed, it is believed. On the other hand, it is pointed out, a Bolshevist triumph in Germany would result in a serious situation.

gards the fate of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg as having "something of divine justice in it," as the Tageszeitung phrases it. Of Dr. Liebknecht the Lokal-Anzeiger remarks:

"He brought his fate upon himself."

Continuing its comment, the newspaper says:

"The murder of Rosa Luxemburg shows how tremendous must have been the indignation which has seized the people of Berlin as the result of the criminal activities of the Spartacides. Such summary judgments have ordinarily been foreign to the German manner of thinking."

The press in general deplores the lynching of Rosa Luxemburg, but declares that she fell a victim to the basest passions which she herself had awakened.

The Pan German Deutsche Zeitung and the radical Tageblatt alike agree that Dr. Liebknecht was an "honest fanatic." The Conservative newspapers, however, explain his career as a terrible example of the socialistic infection which made the ground fertile for Bolshevism, while the Tageblatt considers him to have been a megalomaniac.

There is general agreement that Dr. Liebknecht lacked the qualities for a really constructive leadership.

Rosa Luxemburg was dubbed "the strongest woman in Germany," but, contrary to the general impression, she did not have an active personal part in the staging of the revolutionary movements in Kiel and Berlin, as she was in prison until a few days before the outbreaks in November. However, she lost no time in entering the fray, and in a nine weeks' campaign she became even more radical than Dr. Liebknecht, earning the title of "High Priestess of Bolshevism."

She was small, misshapen, and uncomely, but keen-eyed and mentally vigorous. She possessed a remarkable, almost masculine, vocal equipment.

Rosa was born in Russian Poland on Dec. 25, 1870. She married "Dr." Lübeck in Dresden for the sole purpose of obtaining German citizenship. They parted the day after the wedding.

The Russian Government did not recognize the marriage, the purpose of which was to prevent her extradition. Her dual citizenship annoyed her constantly at international gatherings of radical Socialists.

Rosa was a skilled parliamentarian, although many of her intellectual comrades called her a superficial agitator. For Bebel, Haase, and other German Socialists she was formerly the Socialist Party's "enfant terrible." She had studied in Zurich, specializing in economics, but she was never permitted to participate in the inner councils of the radicals.

She seemed to cast a spell over her German comrades with her lurid fanaticism. Her effect on the masses was even more pronounced. She would step to the edge of the platform the minute she was announced, and with a wonderful flow of oratory and sledgehammer gestures she would convert herself into a vocal dynamo.

It is believed that Rosa at the bottom of her heart was convinced of the hopelessness of the Russian brand of socialism. She made this statement in a recent speech in Berlin:

"Socialism does not mean the convening of Parliaments and the enactment of laws; it means the overthrow of the ruling classes with all the brutality at the disposal of the proletariat."

Rosa first came into public notice in 1901 in the lesser courts of Prussia. She was repeatedly fined and imprisoned for minor offenses and proved an obstreperous prisoner.

Her name appeared on the editorial page of the Spartacide Red Flag as co-editor with Dr. Liebknecht, but her editorials were rarely in evidence during the revolution.

Fear of Spartacide Desperation.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 17.—News and comment from Berlin make the fact startlingly clear that the announcement of the death of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, though heard with satisfaction by a few of their bitterest opponents, has been received by the public generally with emotions in which horror and fear predominated, horror at the circumstances and fear of the possible consequences.

The city is described today as being in the same state of nervous tension as it was on the eve of the Bolshevist uprising, when every one felt that civil war was in the atmosphere.

Rightly or wrongly, the people dread lest the killing of their two leaders will drive the Spartacides to desperate deeds of revenge. This is not so likely, however, to be the case in Berlin itself as in other places, where the revolutionists have the temporary power in their hands, but in any event it is believed that even if the extremists feel themselves not strong enough to attempt new deeds of violence in Berlin there will be a fresh outbreak of strikes inspired by fierce indignation among the classes outside the ranks of the Spartacides at the circumstances under which Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were done to death.

The whole Liberal press condemns the deed, and even the Vossische Zeitung declares:

"Nothing can justify this exercise of lynch law, even against the authors of the recent regrettable events. In the name of humanity we protest against it. It should have been left to a court of justice to make them harmless for the future, and in case of a judgment, such a court would not have left out of account that Liebknecht was an idealist, even though he believed that his mission could only be achieved by violence."

Die Freiheit, the organ of the Independent Socialists, has a short but bitterly worded comment. It says:

"This is the fruit of the policy of force of Ebert, Scheidemann, and Landsberg, the fruit of the ruthless incitement by the Vorwärts and its bourgeois auxiliaries. It is the work of Noske, Governor of Berlin, and his commander in chief, Reinhard, the new War Minister. The blood be upon them. The German proletariat will pass judgment upon them."

The Berliner Tageblatt writes of Rosa Luxemburg:

"She was undoubtedly a much stronger character than Liebknecht. She was the real 'man' in the Spartacus movement. By her extraordinary intelligence and energy she dominated her comrades, and sometimes one had the impression that Liebknecht was almost childishly subject to her.

"Fundamentally she may be compared to the Russian Nihilist type. Not even her strongest opponents can deny that she was sincere in her desire to help the poor and oppressed, but her hatred was boundless, and she worked passionately and with every available means to undermine and destroy the existing social system."

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that it is doubtful if the elections to the German National Assembly can be held on Sunday because of the tremendous excitement over the killing of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

Several more Spartacide leaders have been arrested, but the former Chief of Police, Eichhorn, is still at large.

OFFICERS OF GUARD ARRESTED

Punishment Predicted for the Custodians of Slain Radicals.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Officers commanding the troops who were escorting Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg when they were killed have been provisionally arrested, according to a Berlin dispatch received in Amsterdam, which adds that all persons implicated in the incident will be severely punished.

The Amsterdam Handelsblad's Berlin correspondent, in a dispatch received today, says:

"The whole city is now swarming with soldiers, wearing steel helmets, carrying loaded rifles, and with hand grenades hanging on their belts. They have occupied all the bridges, where they halt and search pedestrians for arms and call for the exhibition of identification papers. Similar searches are even being made on the street cars."

Karl Kautsky, former Under Secretary in the Foreign Affairs Ministry of the Ebert Government and more recently said to be a supporter of Dr. Liebknecht, was arrested at Berlin yesterday morning. He was liberated later.

Negotiations by the Central Soldiers' and Workmen's Council with Independent Socialists and Social Democrats with the view to promoting a joint Socialist program have resulted in the Independents refusing to enter the Government, according to a Berlin dispatch.

The entire street car service at Frankfort-on-the-Main has been suspended owing to a strike.

GERMANS SEND MONEY ACROSS THE FRONTIER

Some of It Is for Speculation and Another Object Is to Escape New Taxes.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 16.—In spite of the measures taken on Dec. 21 to prevent the export of German securities and money to neighboring countries, a lively traffic continues. During the last few weeks many Germans and Austrians have been crossing the Dutch frontier with money in order to speculate in Holland. These in future will be stopped by Dutch sentries for fear that they may be revolutionaries.

Large sums have also been arriving in registered letters, according to a financial informant. The Frankfurter Zeitung says that it is obviously no longer to Germany's advantage to export German banknotes, and refers to the Imperial Bank's preventive measures of printing all new banknotes in other colors.

"The new green notes," says the paper, "are thus indicated as not having been in foreign countries during German occupation, but as having been brought in later for speculation, especially in Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine. Smuggling of notes are apparently not to be stopped by any measures, and are up to all sorts of tricks to get the old notes across the border.

"In Berlin agents are already offering 1½ per cent. more for old notes, which can be paid with German checks. It is an unfortunate fact that German bankers appear to be lending a helping hand to these transactions."

The paper proposes a sharper watch on the frontier, pointing out that more Dutch paper money is arriving in Germany.

Doubtless the prospect of tremendous new taxes, a list of which has just been published in Germany, leads to the desire to export as much wealth as possible.

The industrialist organ, the Cologne Volkszeitung, remarks indignantly that a big philanthropist, who has given tremendous sums of money during the war, will be obliged to pay taxes on these sums. It states that while the new law sets forth that these charities will be taken into consideration this point should be made definite by the State.

BAN ON TIPS IN BERLIN.

Waiters Forbidden to Take Them Since Wages Were Raised.

BERLIN, Jan. 16, (via Copenhagen.)—All wine-houses, cafés, and hotels have posted signs today stating that waiters were prohibited from taking tips. They are now being paid 400 marks monthly.

The proprietors, to compensate themselves, charge 10 per cent. above the former prices.

Bulgars Still Ill-Treat Greeks.

SALONIKI, Jan. 16.—Reports from apparently authentic sources state that Greeks who showed enthusiasm when Greek officers appeared in eastern Rumelia have been thrown into prison by Bulgarian officials. Drastic steps have been taken against Greek priests, and funeral and marriage ceremonies have been performed secretly to avoid the infliction of new oppressive measures, it is alleged.

GERMAN DELEGATES TO PEACE CONFERENCE

Will Be Brockdorff-Rantzau, Lichnowsky, Arco, and Kantsky, It Is Said.

ZURICH, Jan. 17.—The Munich newspapers state that the German delegates to the Peace Conference will be Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the Foreign Minister; Prince Lichnowsky, former Ambassador at London; Count Georg Arco, and the Socialist Carl Kautsky, former Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the Ebert Government.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau succeeded the imperialist survivor, Dr. Solf, as Foreign Minister on Dec. 19. Although he had been German Minister at Copenhagen under the old régime, he had strong republican leanings and possessed the confidence of the Diplomatic Corps at the Danish capital.

Prince Charles Max Lichnowsky was Ambassador at London when the war began. His famous memorandum blaming Germany for the war was first published in America in THE NEW YORK TIMES of April 21, 1918. He was expelled from the Prussian House of Lords.

Count Georg Arco, a well-known Prussian landowner and prominent in the old Agrarian Party, is supposed to be affiliated with Count zu Reventlow and Count von Westarp in keeping the old Conservative Party together.

Carl Kautsky was one of the twenty deputy founders of the Independent Democratic Party—the Minority group—who in March, 1916, left the Social Democratic Party and declined to vote war credits. His associates were Hugo Haase and Eduard Bernstein, until the activities of Dr. Liebknecht seduced some of the group.

LIEBKNECHT FOUGHT FOR WORKERS' RULE

Had Long Been a Firebrand in the Reichstag and Out of It.

BITTER AGAINST THE WAR

Climax of His Career Followed His Recent Release from Imprisonment.

Although Dr. Karl Liebknecht's political career of twenty-five years had seemed at certain successive periods to reveal three distinct personalities, yet the line of evolution was always the same, and from first to last he continued to be the most consistent industrial Socialist in Germany and perhaps the most uncompromising internationalist in the world.

He was practically a man without a party for most of the time. Those in his group who have gone down in the recent Berlin fighting have been his fanatical admirers of a few weeks, rather than disciples of the man, advocates of his principles, or members of a party which he had vaguely been trying to form.

Before the war, in both the Prussian Landtag and the German Reichstag, Liebknecht was an uncompromising advocate of internationalism, (the brotherhood of the hand workers of the world,) whenever he got a chance, of woman suffrage and industrial education, and, on all occasions, the champion enemy of Prussianism and all that is connoted—junkerism, militarism, and Hohenzollernism.

Born at Leipsic on Aug. 13, 1871, he entered politics as a Socialist after being graduated from the University of Leipsic. His radical opposition to the militarist policies of Germany brought about his trial on a charge of high treason in 1907, following the appearance of an anti-military pamphlet written by him. The charge of high treason was not proved, but he was convicted on a less serious count and sent to prison for eighteen months.

Dr. Liebknecht visited America in 1910 and lectured in New York.

Brought Charges Against Krupps.

In 1912 he was elected to the Reichstag and the next year caused a furor in Germany by bringing charges against the Krupps, saying that that organization was inspiring war spirit against the French. He continued his attacks and in the course of debates mentioned Emperor William and the Crown Prince as being involved in the alleged conspiracy centring around the Krupps.

As a result of his revelations several army officers were tried for accepting bribes from the Krupps. They were convicted, but received light sentences.

When the war came on he was a member of the Reichstag for Potsdam, and there was talk that he would succeed Herr Bebel as the leader of the Social Democracy. From the 4th of August, 1914, however, when his party supported the Government in its war program, he found himself alone, for he stood consistently against the war, and sent messages to Socialist leaders abroad to do likewise.

At the same time his belief in Germany's guilt as the instigator of the war caused his unsupported internationalism for the time to appear as a manifestation of a championship of the Entente. Although it was good propaganda for the Entente in Germany as far as it went, it never had the influence that the writings of Maximilian Harden had.

Expelled from His Party.

As early in the war as January, 1915, Liebknecht was expelled from his party, and later, when that party itself divided on the question of war credits and a victory by conquest, and the Minority or Independent faction formed, even these radicals would have none of him. He had put internationalism above patriotism.

For a year, from his seat in the Reichstag, he was a thorn in the side of the war party. Thus came the memorable May Day when he advertised by means of handbills a great demonstration against the war in Potsdamer Platz, and was arrested. The Wolff Agency thus briefly dismissed the incident:

"We learn that among the nine demonstrators arrested in Potsdamer Platz on May 1 was the Reichstag Deputy Karl Liebknecht. As Liebknecht, who was in mufti when arrested, is an Army Service Corps soldier, the competent military authority has ordered an investigation and issued a formal warrant for arrest on the basis of the fact already ascertained."

The handbill whose authorship Liebknecht boldly acknowledged contained this phrase:

"Germany, an accomplice of Czarism and hitherto a model of political reaction, has no vocation for the rôle of deliverer of nations. The deliverance of the Russian, as of the German, people must be brought about by themselves. The war is not a German defensive war."

Trials and appeals succeeded each other until August, 1916, when Liebknecht was finally sentenced on several counts for "war treason" to penal servitude for four years and one month, with a forfeiture of civil rights. In prison he still found the opportunity to send messages abroad to proletarian leaders advocating a general strike against the war.

Freed from Prison Recently.

When he emerged from prison, in the first week in November, due to the amnesty sop thrown by Prince Max, then Imperial Chancellor, to political agitators, he still found himself without a party. He attempted to make common cause with the delegates of the Soldiers' and Workers' Council, who, coming from the naval ports, practically held control of Berlin for a time on Nov. 9. But they would have none of him.

Together with the anarchist, Rosa Luxemburg, he spoke in the streets, attracted crowds to listen, and then to follow him. Shut out from the deliberations of the Congress of Soldiers and Workers, he attempted to address the populace from the roof.

On one or two occasions it was believed that he had gained the upper hand, but his power was never substantial.

It was in 1904 that Liebknecht first came under the blaze of notoriety as the counsel for the defense in the famous "conspiracy" trial of German Socialists charged at Königsberg with assisting Russian revolutionists living abroad in transporting over the frontier seditious literature and rendering them other service. Young lawyer as he was then, Liebknecht succeeded in turning the trial into a huge political indictment of the Prusso-German régime; but this piece of political agitation was more sympathetically commented on abroad than in Germany, where it was regarded as little less than treason.

ROSA LUXEMBURG'S CAREER.

Often Arrested, but Never Ceased in Her Violent Agitation.

Rosa Luxemburg in the early nineties left her native country, Russian Poland, for Switzerland, where she studied political economy and won her doctor's degree. According to Sidney Ziniand, who has written the story of her life to appear in the Nation of Jan. 25, and who has known both Rosa Luxemburg and Dr. Liebknecht intimately, she deliberately chose Germany as the field in which she could best spread the revolutionary doctrine.

Living in Südende, a suburb of Berlin, she spent her time in writing and lecturing in the German capital. Day by day in the Socialist College she shot forth the "liquid fire of Bolshevism," and earned the reputation of being the most powerful debater in the Socialist Party. A comrade said: "This Rosa Luxemburg is a devil."

She was continually in conflict with the authorities, so that Gustav Hervé once said: "She leaves the Czar's Court to go into the Kaiser's." In 1900 she went to prison, in 1904 she repeated the visit, in 1906 once more, and in February, 1914, she was condemned for a fourth time.

In July, 1914, she was brought before a court for speaking against the maltreatment of soldiers in barracks, and it was said that there were 30,000 soldiers ready to testify to the truthfulness of her statements. So great was the embarrassment of the military authorities that they repeatedly postponed her trial.

Rosa Luxemburg was opposed to the war from its inception. She fought consistently against militarism, and advocated the repudiation of all war debts. She was the author of "Akkumation des Kapitaliamus," a work on economics, and the "A B C of Socialism."

In person she combined a far from handsome face with an unprepossessing figure and a shuffling gait, but these handicaps she overcame with a fiery personality. At party conventions she presented her arguments with powerful feeling, so that it was said of her that only the Russian soil and Jewish suffering could have produced her like.

Mr. Zimand often saw and heard Liebknecht in action. He writes:

"Whatever one may think of his economic theories or of the methods he used to put them into practice, one thing is sure, and that is that he was one of the few people in history who held to a single idea regardless of his own safety. He was a fighter for the people, and it was his indomitable stand for them that drew such high tribute from James M. Beck in an article in Harper's for July, 1917. Parenthetically he remarks, 'while the party voted for the war, Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the bravest of the brave, to whom be immortal honor,' and later he says, 'Again and again in subsequent debate in the Reichstag, the superlatively brave man, as brave as Luther at the Diet of Worms—although jeered and howled down, attempted to tell the German people the truth.'"

PADEREWSKI FORMS NEW POLISH CABINET

Reaches Agreement with General Pilsudski, Who Will Be Foreign Minister.

WARSAW, Jan. 16, (Associated Press.)—Ignace Jan Paderewski having reached an agreement with General Pilsudski, (military dictator of Poland,) has succeeded partly in forming a new Polish Cabinet. General Pilsudski will be Foreign Minister under M. Paderewski, as Premier, which will permit Pilsudski to retain much of his power.

Three members of the present Cabinet will be in the new Ministry, which will be constituted primarily of non-political experts.

The new Cabinet is subject to the approval of German Poland. It will continue in office until elections are held within the next fortnight.
